THE cult of Frank Sinatra, singer, who has raised a kind of mass femme hysteria for some occult reason, has confounded all the press agentry which has been applied to this personality phenomenon. For days the RKO praisery has been huddling to devise publicizing items, but the very things the department wished to happen have happened independent of their efforts. Even the Santa Fe railway sent out appeals to RKO to persuade the singer to detrain at a roped-off space at the Pasadena station upon his arrival today, instead of going on to the main Los Angeles station where the expected crowds might be less manageable. Sinatra's first west coast broadcast, incidentally, emanates from here Saturday night, at a cost of some $4,000 to Lucky Strike, before he is rushed to his appearance at the Hollywood Bowl. He goes then into RKO's 'Higher and Higher.'

FOR first time in history of Chaplin studio, an outside company is entering gates to use street set. Director Steve Sekely takes his Monogram company to La Brea ave. studio today for one day's shooting on 'Hitler's Women.' Herman Millakowsky, producer of picture, hit upon idea of renting Chaplin set, and nearly floored Chaplin's general manager when he made the unusual request. G.m. told him he didn't believe it would be possible, but he'd check with Chaplin. Ten minutes later g.m. called Millakowsky and said deal was okay and that he might make use of set at his convenience. With stage shortage what it is in studios, lowering of bars by Chaplin may mean that his studio may be engaged finally in active shooting, following idle period of several years.

EDDIE CANTOR, who over the years has played more benefits than anyone else in show biz, doesn't mind giving his time to charitable enterprises, but at least would like to be consulted before the event is publicized. More than willing to do his part to help along the film, 'This Is The Army,' he has yet to be asked to preside at the premiere lobby broadcast. Cantor feels he is entitled to more than a 'taken-for-granted' attitude despite his reputation as champ benefiteer. He'll naturally accept the 'Army' radio-assignment, but would like to hear from those who are setting up the lobby stunt for broadcast over the Warners station.

SAM JAFFE and Lloyd Bacon are having their troubles casting the five brothers for their forthcoming 20th-Fox production based upon lives of the hero-brothers, 'The Sullivans.' With film shortage so prevalent, they're taking 30 teams of five actors each and testing them via auditions, rather than on film. Out of each quintet they're selecting one actor, who will then participate in semi-finals, so to speak, in contest to determine final class. Those who hit finals will get real screen tests.

EARL CARROLL SUED FOR 22G BY CANADIAN OVER GALS

Joseph Victor Desautels yesterday filed suit in Superior Court asking damages of $22,030 from Earl Carroll and The Hollywood Theatre Corporation. Desautels charged in his petition that Carroll agreed to furnish 33 performers with a chorus 'of 24 of the most beautiful girls in the world' for a two week engagement in his Montreal house, His Majesty's Theatre beginning the week of April 17, 1942. Only 23 players and a chorus of 13 ordinary type show girls appeared he stated.

Desautels further charged, 'the acts furnished were inferior, the performers were ill trained, the costumes were torn, old and filthy and the scenery was shabby and inferior.' He stated the troupe stayed only one week.

Beards were a sign of masculinity in ancient times before radio announcers plugged razor blades and shaving soap. If you study tintypes of the Civil War period you can almost tell an officer's rank by his whiskers. But whiskers have never caused a heart throb in motion pictures. Not even on the greatest throbber of his time, Rudy Valentino. It was one of those films in which Rudy aspired to higher things in drama and played the role of a doctor. Your correspondent does not remember the name of the picture. All he remembers is that Rudy broke out with a beard—a cute little vandykish affair, but still a bezitz. There was weeping and wailing among the femme customers, not because of the dramatic intensity of Rudy's acting but because he disguised his handsome mug. That was the one and only time he tempted fate with a chin adornment. A hero can get by with a mustache nowadays but it must be slim and streamlined, manly but not robust enough to interfere with the free flow of vitamins. Even with coffee off the rationed list, there is no longer any call for mustache cups. What, you may ask, what about Monty Woolley? The answer is well, what about Monty Woolley?

True To Life

(Comedy-Drama)

Gay escapist fare, 'True to Life' is a charming story with every ingredient which points to box-office success. It has songs by Mary Martin and Dick Powell, situation comedy assured of popular reception and as nice a romance as the screen has produced in many a moon. Sum total adds up to a comedy-drama of genuine merit, for whose success all concerned may take bows.

It's the tale of two bachelors—Dick Powell and Franchot Tone—who write for the radio, to tune of $1000 weekly salary each. They've written themselves out, however, and their sponsor gives them notice that if their radio heroine isn't made more human, more true to life, he's going to toss whole program off networks and they'll be out on their respective ears.

With this premise of finding new material, lads agree something must be done about it. While Tone philanders, Powell takes a walk in the rain, and comes upon Mary Martin singing in a little lunchroom. He goes in, orders dinner, then discovers he's left his wallet home and has only the price of coffee with him. Mary brings him his dinner, anyway, thinking he's broke, takes him home to introduce to her family and before he knows it Powell has been invited to stay there until he an find a job and get on his feet again. He agrees to stay when he discovers that Mary is his and Tone's radio heroine in real life, and by remaining to do 'research' on her and her family their ether program will be revitalized. His hunch is correct, and show, which is announced as a new one, goes great guns.

Plot works into complications from here, Tone, getting wind of Mary, dropping by one night to see for himself and immediately falling for her, offering competition for Powell who already is sunk. Screenplay by Don Hartman and Tarry Tugend has been cleverly worked out, with action building up to a more than engaging climax, type which audiences will go for and probably ask for a repeat. George Marshall directed with a light hand and breezy air, keeping in the mood of the story at all times.

Particularly well worked out are the characters of the family in whose midst Powell finds himself impermanently rooted. There's Victor Moore, the father, bit on the crackpot side who invariably is inventing something; Mabel Paige, the mother, a suspicious soul who doesn't think Powell is trying to find a job and who blatantly proclaims it to one and all, suggesting meanwhile that he leave them; William Demarest, the uncle, who hasn't worked in three years and with whom the father hasn't spoken in two. Then, there's

Hostages

(Drama)

Paramount production. Co-stars Luise Rainer, Arturo de Cordova, William Bendix, Paul Lukas. Supporting cast: Katina Paxinou, Oscar Homolka, Rheinhold Schunzel, Frederick Giermann, Roland Varno, Felix Basch, John Mylong, Hans Conreid, Steven Geray. Director, Frank Tuttle. Producer, Sol C. Siegel. Screenplay, Lester Cole, Frank Butler. From novel by Stefan Heym. Photography, Victor Milner. Process photography, Farciout Edouart. Special photographic effects, Gordon Jennings. Art direction, Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. Sets, Bertram Granger. Music score, Victor Young. Editor, Archie Marshek. Costumes, Edith Head. Tradeshown in studio, Aug. 10, 1943. Running time: 88 MINS.

Tellingly enacted by a cast of brilliant principals, picturization of Stefan Heym's best-selling novel, 'Hostages,' is a compelling piece of dramatic endeavor. It marks the return of Luise Rainer after a three-year absence from screen in a story of the operations of the Czech underground during present Nazi occupation of Prague, as well as further projecting the dramatic talents of William Bendix, and as adult divertissement should draw at the box-office. Interest hinges chiefly on plot and portrayals rather than upon any significance which may be attached to subject matter.

What happens when leader of the underground—Bendix, playing role of attendant in men's room of a Prague cafe—is arrested, along with group of 25 hostages held until murderer of a German officer can be found, forms seed out of which the plot of 'Hostages' blossoms. Bendix is intermediary between underground and longshoremen who are going to blow up the docks at a specified hour, and he alone knows the exact time which underground must divert attention of the Nazis so longshoremen may do their work. Without this diversion the whole effort will fail.

Into this setting steps Arturo de Cordova, a Czech whom Nazis believe is working for them; Luise Rainer, daughter of Oscar Homolka, one of the hostages, largest mineowner in the country; and Paul Lukas, head of the Gestapo in Prague. Attempt of Miss Rainer to secure the release of her father is coupled with de Cordova's efforts to free Bendix, and opposing them is Lukas. Trio are interestingly linked, and other characters entering story are Katina Paxinou, member of the underground, Rheinhold Schunzel, playing role of German general; Homolka, and Roland Varna, latter in part of Miss Rainer's suitor.

Miss Rainer has lost none of her alluring quality during her absence and contributes a finely-shaded characterization, matched by Bendix as brains of the Czech movement. Paul

Destroyer

(War Drama)

Columbia production. Stars Edward G. Robinson. Supporting cast: Glenn Ford, Marguerite Chapman, Edgar Buchanan, Leo Gorcey, Regis Toomey, Ed Brophy, Warren Ashe, Craig Woods, Curt Bois. Directed by William A. Seiter. Producer, Louis F. Edelman. Screen play, Frank Wead, Lewis Meltzer and Borden Chase. Photography, Franz F. Planer. Film editor, Gene Havlick. Art direction, Lionel Banks; associate, Cary Odell. Interior decorator, Frank Tuttle. Music, Anthony Collins. Previewed in Los Angeles, Aug. 10, 1943. Running time: 99 MINS.

A salty tale of the U. S. Navy's swift and terrible 'tin cans,' the destroyers, which have borne the brunt of this war's sea engagements, is here fashioned into an exciting and timely ration of entertainment. It is an excellent vehicle for Edward G. Robinson, should account for its superior production merits with handsome profit, and is devised to appeal alike to men and women — an achievement not always reached in war melodramas.

Not much of its action, as a matter of fact, is battle violence, but when the particular destroyer, named John Paul Jones after its celebrated naval forebear, engages a flight of Jap warplanes and rams a Nip sub in Alaskan waters the suspense and excitement reaches a terrific pitch. These grimmer scenes are mated with a swift and ardent courtship between the young bosun's mate and Robinson's daughter which ought to satisfy the most romantic of audience elements.

Screen play by Frank Wead, an expert job, follows a natural sequence of showing the building and launching of the destroyer for this war's flotilia; selection and training

Nobody's Darling

(Comedy-Drama With Music)

Republic production. Stars Mary Lee. Supporting cast: Louis Calhern, Gladys George, Jackie Moran, Lee Patrick, Bennie Bartlett, Marcia Mae Jones, Roberta Smith, Lloyd Corrigan, Jonathan Hale, Sylvia Field, Billy Dawson, Beverly Boyd. Directed by Anthony Mann. Associate producer, Harry Grey. Screen play, Olive Cooper. Original story, F. Hugh Herbert. Photography, Jack Marta. Music director, Walter Scharf. Orchestral arrangements, Marlin Skiles. Vocal arrangements Ken Darby. Film editor, Ernest Nims. Art director, Russell Kimball. Set decorations, Otto Siegel. Dance director, Nick Castle. Previewed in Los Angeles, Aug. 10, 1943. Running time: 68 MINS.

Mary Lee in her second starring vehicle at Republic works too hard at her acting, is too self-consciously the ingenue, but is effective in her singing to balance up the performance for a favorable impression of charm and pleasant entertainment. Supporting juves are interesting in colorful roles, especially Jackie Moran as the young heart interest, Bennie Bartlett with his mild drolleries, and Roberta

with Robert Arden

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, the man who occasionally visits in Great Britain, is again meeting President Roosevelt, and according to the latest reports from Quebec, other Allied war leaders. The fact that the meeting seems to be slated for Canada may or may not be an indication of the fact that the war in the Pacific will come under lengthy discussion. In view of the military progress by Allied forces on Sicily and the Eastern front, it is rather easy to predict further Allied moves against the European continent—perhaps with the active participation of Turkey.

Cox Committee Hears Why Stations Had License Trouble

New York, Aug. 10.—Eugene L. Garey, counsel for the Cox Committee, investigating the FCC read into the record today a report by Robert K. Richards, an executive assistant in the office of censorship, quoting Lee Falk of OWI as having said concerning foreign language broadcasters: 'You must find out what their past associations have been and if they are open to suspicion, convict them on that and then take them off the air.'

Richards, in speaking of conversation he had with Sidney Spear, an attorney for the FCC, stated, 'when Falk finds a fellow who is doing some funny business, he tells me about it, then we wait until the station applies for renewal of license. Then Falk drops in on the station manager and tells him he should fire the broadcaster, if the station manager does nothing about it he finds plenty of trouble getting his license renewed. Finally the station would fire the broadcaster and shortly after that his license would be renewed.'

Garey charged that the FCC and OWI have been coercing foreign language stations in the hiring and firing of personnel.

young brother Raymond Roe, who's studying to be a doctor and who's always in search of either blood or a patient, and little sister, Beverly Hudson, who wants to marry Powell.

Story, original by Ben Barzman, Bess Taffel and Sol Barzman, has been plotted ever with an eye to entertainment, and Paul Jones, producer, has enlivened whole proceedings with expert touch. Miss Martin is at her very best as Bonnie Porter, who has a philosophy in life as pleasant as her singing in picture, and offers a performance which will win her even new admirers. Powell turns in bang-up portrayal, too, his warbling of two songs pleasing, and Tone gives one of his better, though briefer, interpretations. 'Family' all contribute adroit characterizations. On production end, Charles Lang's photography is entirely up to par, art direction by Hans Dreier and Earl Hedrick and set decorations by George Sawley atmospherically impressive and Edith Head's costumes tasteful. LeRoy Stone's editing is first-rate, too. Only criticism which may be made of film is its slight over-length.

Lukas is seen in another of his smooth Nazi impersonations and outstanding particularly is Schunzel as the general who kills Lukas. Other cast members who must be mentioned for roles well done include Frederick Giermann, Felix Basch, John Mylong and Steven Geray.

'Hostage' is a distinct directorial accomplishment for Frank Tuttle and as fine an achievement for Sol C. Siegel, as producer. Lester Cole and Frank Butler caught the spirit of Stefan Heym's book with admirable consistency and Victor Young's music score further adds to the atmospheric properties of Hans Dreier and Franz Bachelin's art direction. Victor Milner handled camera work, Farciout Edouart did process photography and Gordon Jennings is credited with interesting special photographic effects.

Lucy Monroe Winds Her Community Sing Reels

Lucy Monroe has washed up first series of one-reel Community Sings for Columbia, produced to encourage audience participation in singing of patriotic airs in theatres. Soprano was accompanied by RCA-Victor recording orchestra in rendition of such national chants as 'Army Air Corps,' 'Anchors Aweigh,' 'Over There' and 'Star Spangled Banner.' Shorts are similar in style to last season's 'America Sings With Kate Smith.'

of the crew; life ashore and aboard; the traditional incitements of the men; the thrills and dangers of the shakedown cruise, and finally the performance of the ship and the behavior of its complement in battle.

Direction by William A. Seiter, careful and technically advised preparation by Producer Louis F. Edelman and impressive performances by Robinson, Glenn Ford, Marguerite Chapman, Edgar Buchanan, Regis Toomey, Ed Brophy and others in support give the picture a vivid sense of reality. Its heroics are not too fatuous. The direction is perfectly attuned to the subject. The technical contributions are of top calibre.

Next to the authoritative performance of Robinson in a splendid character role, in value to the film's entertainment qualities, is the presence of Marguerite Chapman. She has striking beauty, poise and dramatic talent to spare. And she does her share of impetuous love-making as if she meant it, not merely as a matter of script direction.

Glenn Ford has a solid, salty role and handles it superbly as the chief petty officer who feuds with his immediate superior, the man he regards as a complete washout, and whose boss he in turn becomes after he marries the daughter.

The story asks you to believe that an elderly vet bosun of the last war, an expert ship builder who bossed the construction of the John Paul Jones and who pleads to be allowed to ship on her with his former protege, Regis Toomey, now her skipper, would be permitted to occupy such a berth. The very fact that he is old and outmoded, but still bristling with pride and love for the Navy—this fact it is which projects the troubles and dilemmas constituting the plot work of the story. He finally saves the ship after she is punctured by a Jap torpedo, by a herculean welding job at sea, and takes a demotion and humiliation in favor of the younger man with decent restraint.

Ed Brophy, engine room chief; Edgar Buchanan, a man plagued by seasickness; Leo Gorcey, a tough and cynical youngster; Warren Ashe, Craig Woods and Curt Bois, all give fine accounts of themselves. Much legitimate and easy-flowing comedy runs through the characterizations.

Authentic feel of the ship and of the sea as well as the thrills of trial cruise and battle action, are largely supported by the excellent miniature and processed shots contrived under supervision of Dave Allen. Superlative is the camera work of Franz Planer, and a good music score is incorporated by Anthony Collins and directed by M. W. Stoloff.

Nobody's Darling

Smith with a neat brand of individual comedy.

Screen play by Olive Cooper, from the F. Hugh Herbert original, gives Mary Lee and the carefully selected cast a sound story basis, backgrounded against Hollywood's film industry and its personages, with special focus on a school for the youngsters of picture celebs. Theme is that the parents of the principal youngsters are so concerned with their own waning importance and theatrical billings that they forget all about the talents and happiness of their kids. Once the attention of the elders is turned upon the sons and daughters, the distress and dilemmas of the latter are happily resolved.

Louis Calhern and Gladys George capably handle their assignments as parents of Mary Lee, a shy girl with awkward feet who tries hard for romance with the school's young playwright, Jackie Moran, and a singing spot in his play. Lee Patrick turns in an excellent performance as the school teacher. Lloyd Corrigan is the father of Jackie. Marcia Mae Jones impresses as the juvenile heart wrecker, with Beverly Boyd as rival.

Anthony Mann turns in a sound job of direction, with Harry Grey handling the production reins to realize full value of all the entertainment elements.

Mary Lee's voice has fine clear quality and volume and her delivery is agreeable. She sings 'Blow, Gabriel, Blow,' 'I'm Always Chasing Rainbows,' 'It Had to Be You,' 'On the Sunny Side of the Street.' A group of youngsters chant the roundelay, 'Row, Row, Row Your Boat.' Ken Darby ably looks after the music direction, Marlin Skiles did the vocal arrangements. Jack Marta uses his camera expertly, and other technical chores are well done.

J. WALTER THOMPSON FIRST IN PHOTO FINISH

Agency supremacy in the night time radio field is being claimed by the J. Walter Thompson, with a five-minute bulge over its closest contender, Young & Rubicam. With the fall season in full cry, JWT will have an aggregate of seven hours and five minutes of sponsored time weekly on the networks. Y & R had been acclaimed the champ in reports from the east.

Production personnel of the JWT programs has been reorganized, with Coast shows affected by entry of the New RCA hour show, which tees up over the Blue from here Sept. 4. At the production controls will be Antony Stanford, who also continues as producer of the Edgar Bergen java session, which resumes Sept. 5. Double assignment gives Stanford 90 minutes of broadcasting to handle within a space of less than 24 hours.

Joe Bigelow, chief scripter of Chase & Sanborn show, swings over to the RCA opus as head of the writing staff, which will be set up here and in New York. His spot on the coffee show will be taken by Mannie Manheim, who moves over from Kraft Music Hall, to be aided by Bob Mosher and Joe Connelly. Lester O'Keefe handles New York production end of RCA show and Fritz Blocki will look after other pickups. Bob Brewster continues as producer of Bing Crosby's Krafter, with Carroll Carroll as head of writing staff, which comprises Leo 'Ukie' Sherin, Vic McLeod, Stanley Davis and Elon Packard. Brewster and Carroll also preside over the Old Gold show. Lux Radio Theatre setup is undisturbed, with Sanford Barnett continuing as director, adaptations by George Wells and Harry Kerr writing the framework. Norman Blackburn carries on as agency contact on Pond's, Spreckels, Fleetwood Lawton and 'Breakfast at Sardi's' programs.

Revisions in the Hollywood setup were made at conferences between Dan Danker, veepee in charge of the Coast radio department, and Robert Colwell, radio exec of JWT, here from New York.

Music from the picture also will be played through the amplifier, to be heard throughout the station.

Estimated that total of around 500,000 people will thus be reached with blurbs for the show. This is the first time depot loud speaker has been used for matters outside immediate traffic and station announcements, and was permitted because funds from TITA go to the Army Emergency Relief.

members and relatives from accepting jobs.

Less than 100 of the 4,400 Class B members of the Screen Actors Guild have signified a willingness to work for less than $10.50, in an effort to eliminate the $5.50 scale, as was done by the cowboys when they nixed all $11 calls and upped the rate to $16.50. Letter seeking support of other unions was sent to the IATSE business representatives committee, Conference of Studio Unions, Carpenters, Teamsters and Musicians.

LETTER ASKS SUPPORT

Letter signed by Roy Lawson as chairman of the Screen Players Protective Committee, stated:

'The Screen Players Protective Committee petitions the officers and members of your organization for assistance in blocking the attempt by motion picture employers to break down the living standards of 4,400 members of an American Federation of Labor union—the Screen Actors Guild. With the cooperation of the Screen Actors Guild, waivers are being issued to non-union extras while thousands of paid-up AF of L extras, willing and available, are ignored.

'The attached bulletin, issued by Universal Pictures Corp., is prima facie evidence of this assault on organized labor. Extra players have no vote in the Screen Actors Guild, although they contribute over 70% of the dues. Screen Players Protective Committee, representing a majority of the SAG extra player members, asks the support of your organization in halting this practice, designed to demoralize the organized labor movement, and connived in by the management of the union to which they pay dues.

'For the good and welfare of the organized labor movement, it is hoped that your body will take appropriate action to halt this use of scabs.'

Bulletin referred to was distributed on lot and asked employes to list names of any persons they knew willing to accept casual extra work at $5.50, and to send their names to Central Casting Corp. It was indicated that similar action was being taken by other major studios.

SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT ON EXTRAS; OVERTIME PAY

Tentative deal has been set for an out-of-court settlement of Screen Actors Guild suit to collect overtime pay for film extras under the Wage-Hour Law. Full terms of settlement have been agreed upon. Guild auditors will have to examine claims involved before settlement is inked.

In announcing settlement, SAG stated:

'Case was originally filed in the Federal District Court in October, 1941. Guild's decision to aim for an out-of-court settlement sprung from the fact that trying case in court involved auditing the books of the producing companies. The court refused to order such an audit at the expense of the studios, and Guild auditors reported that it would have been prohibitive for the Guild to assume the expense of the audit.

'More than 1,300 claimants are involved in the suits, although it is pointed out that, because certain of of the claims are unsubstantiated by any factual data, many of the claimants will not be eligible for an allocation of the final settlement.' It is understood that several thousands of dollars are involved.

Film Unions Meet To Discuss Return To Labor Council

Question of unions and guilds outside the Central Labor Council reaffiliating with that organization following ouster of Harry Sherman as prexy will be discussed today at a conference of union heads at the Mayfair Hotel. Crafts that withdrew from the Council include the Screen Actors Guild, Moving Picture Painters Local 644, Teamsters, Musicians and Screen Set Designers. Screen Office Employes Guild and Screen Cartoonists Guild dropped out but have since reaffiliated.

150 ATTEND 20TH MEET TODAY

SKOURAS TO KEYNOTE SESSION

First session of annual western sales meet of 20th-Fox will be launched this morning in Fiesta Room of the Ambassador hotel, with vice president in charge of sales Tom J. Connors opening the meeting and then turning it over to W. C. Gehring, western sales manager. One hundred and fifty delegates will attend.

Two meetings today will be mainly devoted to general biz discussions; in addition to which addresses will be given by William J. Kupper, executive assistant to Connors; Paul Terry, producer of Terrytoons; comedy commentator Lew Lehr; Al Brick, western supervision of Movietone News; George A. Roberts, sales supervisor for March of Time; shorts subjects sales manager William J. Clark; and Richard de Rochemont, managing editor of March of Time.

President Spyros Skouras is slated to be highlight speaker tomorrow morning, with Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck also on agenda to describe production plans of 20th-Fox for the coming season.

Several pictures aimed for early fall release will be shown the sales organization Friday and Saturday mornings in Ambassador hotel theatre.

Delegates will be allowed to present suggestions on general product proposed at tomorrow afternoon session; as president Skouras is particularly anxious to obtain angles from the sales force on several of the pictures at present pencilled in for production. Complete product announcement will not be released to the trade until next week, according to present plans.

Defends Dogs—

Mrs. Jane Dorsey, wife of band leader Jimmy Dorsey, appeared in court yesterday to defend herself against damage suit filed by Mrs. June Price, former wife of Al St. John, pic director. Mrs. Price brought suit against the Dorseys for $4070 claiming the band leader, his wife and dogs did that much damage to rugs, drapes and other household items during the time they lived in the Sherman Oaks home, which she rented to them. Mrs. Dorsey declared in court that 'her dogs had been slandered.'

WHERE DO WE SLEEP?

Wartime housing conditions created unusual condition for those in charge of lining up hotel accommodations for the 150-odd visitors to the western sales convention of 20th-Fox. Although Ambassador hotel is being used as headquarters, latter hostelry could not take care of the overload of reservations for the film gang. Result is scattering of the latter into other spots, including the Chapman Park, Roosevelt and Beverly-Wilshire layouts. At a late hour last night several last-minute additions to the visiting list were standing in line waiting for quarters to be vacated, while others were moved into apartments near the hotel.

AND WHEN DO WE EAT?

Although 20th-Fox western sales meet opens this morning, fanfare dinners and parties that prevailed in pre-war periods for the visitors are definitely restricted. There's plans afoot to have a luncheon for the delegates at the studio during the next few days, but it had not been set last night. Reports of a couple of cocktail parties were current, but no definite time for the elbow-bending. In fact, visitors are expected to forage for themselves generally for the next four days, due to inability to provide service and food for the 150 delegates in any one room or spot.

CRAIG REINSTATED BY SAG; GRANTED APPEAL TO CLASS B

clined to do so the Board confirmed his suspension of one-year. In a statement accompanying the announcement the SAG indicated the Craig action was to remove a confusing side issue relative to autonomy for Class B members. The statement follows:

'At the Sept. 19 meeting of the Class B membership, the sole question to be considered will be a plan submitted by the Guild for creation of a separate and autonomous organization for the extras. The plan, representing months of careful consideration of the best interests of all groups of extras, will be fully presented and fully discussed.

PROMPT VOTE PROMISED

'Immediately after the Sept. 19 meeting, mail ballots will be distributed to Class B members for a prompt vote on the plan.

'There has been a tendency to inject issues of the personal conduct and personal ambitions of a few extras into the broader and much more important question of a new organization for all who do extra work. This question is too vital to extras to allow the issue to become confused. The livelihood of extras is at stake.

'For nearly 10 years the extras have enjoyed the benefits of the collective bargaining strength of the Class A members. Various methods of representation for the extras, within a single Guild organization, have been tried. Because of the inherent differences in the problems of actors and of extra players, none has proved satisfactory. Now the Board feels that the extras themselves must take primary responsibility for working out their group economic problems. At the same time, the Board recognizes its responsibility to help the extras launch a successful organization. The Board intends to see that a sound plan is presented, without confusing side issues. One such issue has been the case of Hal Craig, Class B member found guilty of conduct unbecoming a member of the Guild and suspended for one year.

APPEAL GRANTED

'Mr. Craig petitioned the Board to vacate its decision and to grant him a new trial. The Board has rejected both petitions. Mr. Craig also petitioned for an appeal to the Guild Class B membership. This has been granted by the Board, and Mr. Craig will be allowed to take his appeal before the Class B membership at a meeting called for that purpose, at the earliest opportunity following the regular annual meeting of the extra players on Sept. 19.

'In order that Mr. Craig may not suffer economic consequences of a delayed appeal to the membership, he has been temporarily reinstated and may work in pictures.

'When Mr. Craig appeared before the Board on July 26 to request a new trial, he was offered an opportunity to retract a damaging and unfounded statement made formally to a Government official and injuring the Guild. He was informed that after such a retraction, the Board would consider leniency. On Aug. 9, Mr. Craig through his attorney informed the Guild that he did not choose to make a retraction. The Board has therefore affirmed its decision finding Mr. Craig guilty of conduct unbecoming a member. He will be allowed an appeal to the Class B membership, but those proceedings, involving the conduct of one individual, will not be permitted to confuse the question of establishing a new and effective organization for all extra players.'

Craig was represented by Alexander H. Schullman, attorney for the Retail Clerks. Schullman had stated the case would be taken into Federal Court if Craig was deprived of the right to work and contended player's suspension was illegal.

BRITISH WANT U. S. FILM QUOTA CUT

rently 80 to 90% of films on British screens are from Hollywood.

English are complaining that since the unfreezing of U. S. coin 10 months ago, not a single British picture has been contracted for in America. 'For Which We Serve,' 'Spitfire,' 'One of Our Aircraft Is Missing' and 'The Invaders' were paid for out of frozen coin.

In New York, it is argued that quality of films, not coin considerations, are blocking deals. Film reps of U. S. and Russia made strides toward cementing friendly relations last week when Michail Kalotozow, prominent Soviet producer, left New York for Hollywood Friday to set up Coast liaison quarters. Intentions became known in Washington where Kalotozow went to present his credentials. He disclosed conversations with Ambassador Standley prior to trip here. Latter voiced enthusiasm over U. S.-Russian film ties.

HOYT SAYS OWI PIC DIVISION RIDDLED BUT'LL CARRY ON

Washington, Aug. 10.—Palmer Hoyt, director of the OWI said today that with the Motion Picture section virtually abolished by the Congressional slash in their budget from $8,800,000 to $2,250,000 there would be little sacrifice of efficiency under the curtailed budget. He stated his chief regret was the loss to his department of 46 field operations staff, necessitating the reorganization of his agency.

The domestic branch of the OWI today slashed 777 employees from its roll of 1269. Figures were not available as to the exact numbers in each of the departments making up the agency, but from Hoyt's statement it is apparent that the motion picture section took the brunt of the blow.

THE cult of Frank Sinatra, singer, who has raised a kind of mass femme hysteria for some occult reason, has confounded all the press agentry which has been applied to this personality phenomenon. For days the RKO praisery has been huddling to devise publicizing items, but the very things the department wished to happen have happened independent of their efforts. Even the Santa Fe railway sent out appeals to RKO to persuade the singer to detrain at a roped-off space at the Pasadena station upon his arrival today, instead of going on to the main Los Angeles station where the expected crowds might be less manageable. Sinatra's first west coast broadcast, incidentally, emanates from here Saturday night, at a cost of some $4,000 to Lucky Strike, before he is rushed to his appearance at the Hollywood Bowl. He goes then into RKO's 'Higher and Higher.'

FOR first time in history of Chaplin studio, an outside company is entering gates to use street set. Director Steve Sekely takes his Monogram company to La Brea ave. studio today for one day's shooting on 'Hitler's Women.' Herman Millakowsky, producer of picture, hit upon idea of renting Chaplin set, and nearly floored Chaplin's general manager when he made the unusual request. G.m. told him he didn't believe it would be possible, but he'd check with Chaplin. Ten minutes later g.m. called Millakowsky and said deal was okay and that he might make use of set at his convenience. With stage shortage what it is in studios, lowering of bars by Chaplin may mean that his studio may be engaged finally in active shooting, following idle period of several years.

EARL CARROLL SUED FOR 22G BY CANADIAN OVER GALS

Joseph Victor Desautels yesterday filed suit in Superior Court asking damages of $22,030 from Earl Carroll and The Hollywood Theatre Corporation. Desautels charged in his petition that Carroll agreed to furnish 33 performers with a chorus 'of 24 of the most beautiful girls in the world' for a two week engagement in his Montreal house, His Majesty's Theatre beginning the week of April 17, 1942. Only 23 players and a chorus of 13 ordinary type show girls appeared he stated.

Desautels further charged, 'the acts furnished were inferior, the performers were ill trained, the costumes were torn, old and filthy and the scenery was shabby and inferior.' He stated the troupe stayed only one week.

Beards were a sign of masculinity in ancient times before radio announcers plugged razor blades and shaving soap. If you study tintypes of the Civil War period you can almost tell an officer's rank by his whiskers. But whiskers have never caused a heart throb in motion pictures. Not even on the greatest throbber of his time, Rudy Valentino. It was one of those films in which Rudy aspired to higher things in drama and played the role of a doctor. Your correspondent does not remember the name of the picture. All he remembers is that Rudy broke out with a beard—a cute little vandykish affair, but still a bezitz. There was weeping and wailing among the femme customers, not because of the dramatic intensity of Rudy's acting but because he disguised his handsome mug. That was the one and only time he tempted fate with a chin adornment. A hero can get by with a mustache nowadays but it must be slim and streamlined, manly but not robust enough to interfere with the free flow of vitamins. Even with coffee off the rationed list, there is no longer any call for mustache cups. What, you may ask, what about Monty Woolley? The answer is well, what about Monty Woolley?

True To Life

(Comedy-Drama)

Gay escapist fare, 'True to Life' is a charming story with every ingredient which points to box-office success. It has songs by Mary Martin and Dick Powell, situation comedy assured of popular reception and as nice a romance as the screen has produced in many a moon. Sum total adds up to a comedy-drama of genuine merit, for whose success all concerned may take bows.

It's the tale of two bachelors—Dick Powell and Franchot Tone—who write for the radio, to tune of $1000 weekly salary each. They've written themselves out, however, and their sponsor gives them notice that if their radio heroine isn't made more human, more true to life, he's going to toss whole program off networks and they'll be out on their respective ears.

With this premise of finding new material, lads agree something must be done about it. While Tone philanders, Powell takes a walk in the rain, and comes upon Mary Martin singing in a little lunchroom. He goes in, orders dinner, then discovers he's left his wallet home and has only the price of coffee with him. Mary brings him his dinner, anyway, thinking he's broke, takes him home to introduce to her family and before he knows it Powell has been invited to stay there until he an find a job and get on his feet again. He agrees to stay when he discovers that Mary is his and Tone's radio heroine in real life, and by remaining to do 'research' on her and her family their ether program will be revitalized. His hunch is correct, and show, which is announced as a new one, goes great guns.

Plot works into complications from here, Tone, getting wind of Mary, dropping by one night to see for himself and immediately falling for her, offering competition for Powell who already is sunk. Screenplay by Don Hartman and Tarry Tugend has been cleverly worked out, with action building up to a more than engaging climax, type which audiences will go for and probably ask for a repeat. George Marshall directed with a light hand and breezy air, keeping in the mood of the story at all times.

Particularly well worked out are the characters of the family in whose midst Powell finds himself impermanently rooted. There's Victor Moore, the father, bit on the crackpot side who invariably is inventing something; Mabel Paige, the mother, a suspicious soul who doesn't think Powell is trying to find a job and who blatantly proclaims it to one and all, suggesting meanwhile that he leave them; William Demarest, the uncle, who hasn't worked in three years and with whom the father hasn't spoken in two. Then, there's

(Drama)

Paramount production. Co-stars Luise Rainer, Arturo de Cordova, William Bendix, Paul Lukas, Supporting cast: Katina Paxinou, Oscar Homolka, Rheinhold Schunzel, Frederick Giermann, Roland Varno, Felix Basch, John Mylong, Hans Conreid, Steven Geray. Director, Frank Tuttle. Producer, Sol C. Siegel. Screenplay, Lester Cole, Frank Butler. From novel by Stefan Heym. Photography, Victor Milner. Process photography, Farciout Edouart. Special photographic effects, Gordon Jennings. Art direction, Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. Sets, Bertram Granger. Music score, Victor Young. Editor, Archie Marshek. Costumes, Edith Head. Tradeshown in studio, Aug. 10, 1943. Running time: 88 MINS.

Tellingly enacted by a cast of brilliant principals, picturization of Stefan Heym's best-selling novel, 'Hostages,' is a compelling piece of dramatic endeavor. It marks the return of Luise Rainer after a three-year absence from screen in a story of the operations of the Czech underground during present Nazi occupation of Prague, as well as further projecting the dramatic talents of William Bendix, and as adult divertissement should draw at the box-office. Interest hinges chiefly on plot and portrayals rather than upon any significance which may be attached to subject matter.

What happens when leader of the underground—Bendix, playing role of attendant in men's room of a Prague cafe—is arrested, along with group of 25 hostages held until murderer of a German officer can be found, forms seed out of which the plot of 'Hostages' blossoms. Bendix is intermediary between underground and longshoremen who are going to blow up the docks at a specified hour, and he alone knows the exact time which underground must divert attention of the Nazis so longshoremen may do their work. Without this diversion the whole effort will fail.

Into this setting steps Arturo de Cordova, a Czech whom Nazis believe is working for them; Luise Rainer, daughter of Oscar Homolka, one of the hostages, largest mineowner in the country; and Paul Lukas, head of the Gestapo in Prague. Attempt of Miss Rainer to secure the release of her father is coupled with de Cordova's efforts to free Bendix, and opposing them is Lukas. Trio are interestingly linked, and other characters entering story are Katina Paxinou, member of the underground, Rheinhold Schunzel, playing role of German general; Homolka, and Roland Varna, latter in part of Miss Rainer's suitor.

Miss Rainer has lost none of her alluring quality during her absence and contributes a finely-shaded characterization, matched by Bendix as brains of the Czech movement. Paul

Destroyer

(War Drama)

Columbia production. Stars Edward G. Robinson. Supporting cast: Glenn Ford, Marguerite Chapman, Edgar Buchanan, Leo Gorcey, Regis Toomey, Ed Brophy, Warren Ashe, Craig Woods, Curt Bois. Directed by William A. Seiter. Producer, Louis F. Edelman. Screen play, Frank Wead, Lewis Meltzer and Borden Chase. Photography, Franz F. Planer. Film editor, Gene Havlick. Art direction, Lionel Banks; associate, Cary Odell. Interior decorator, Frank Tuttle. Music, Anthony Collins. Previewed in Los Angeles, Aug. 10, 1943. Running time: 99 MINS.

A salty tale of the U. S. Navy's swift and terrible 'tin cans,' the destroyers, which have borne the brunt of this war's sea engagements, is here fashioned into an exciting and timely ration of entertainment. It is an excellent vehicle for Edward G. Robinson, should account for its superior production merits with handsome profit, and is devised to appeal alike to men and women — an achievement not always reached in war melodramas.

Not much of its action, as a matter of fact, is battle violence, but when the particular destroyer, named John Paul Jones after its celebrated naval forebear, engages a flight of Jap warplanes and rams a Nip sub in Alaskan waters the suspense and excitement reaches a terrific pitch. These grimmer scenes are mated with a swift and ardent courtship between the young bosun's mate and Robinson's daughter which ought to satisfy the most romantic of audience elements.

Screen play by Frank Wead, an expert job, follows a natural sequence of showing the building and launching of the destroyer for this war's flotilla; selection and training

Nobody's Darling

(Comedy-Drama With Music)

Republic production. Stars Mary Lee. Supporting cast: Louis Calhern, Gladys George, Jackie Moran, Lee Patrick, Bennie Bartlett, Marcia Mae Jones, Roberta Smith, Lloyd Corrigan, Jonathan Hale, Sylvia Field, Billy Dawson, Beverly Boyd. Directed by Anthony Mann. Associate producer, Harry Grey. Screen play, Olive Cooper. Original story, F. Hugh Herbert. Photography, Jack Marta. Music director, Walter Scharf. Orchestral arrangements, Marlin Skiles. Vocal arrangements Ken Darby. Film editor, Ernest Nims. Art director, Russell Kimball. Set decorations, Otto Siegel. Dance director, Nick Castle. Previewed in Los Angeles, Aug. 10, 1943. Running time: 68 MINS.

Mary Lee in her second starring vehicle at Republic works too hard at her acting, is too self-consciously the ingenue, but is effective in her singing to balance up the performance for a favorable impression of charm and pleasant entertainment. Supporting juves are interesting in colorful roles, especially Jackie Moran as the young heart interest, Bennie Bartlett with his mild drolleries, and Roberta

with Robert Arden

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, the man who occasionally visits in Great Britain, is again meeting President Roosevelt, and according to the latest reports from Quebec, other Allied war leaders. The fact that the meeting seems to be slated for Canada may or may not be an indication of the fact that the war in the Pacific will come under lengthy discussion. In view of the military progress by Allied forces on Sicily and the Eastern front, it is rather easy to predict further Allied moves against the European continent—perhaps with the active participation of Turkey.

A BEAUTY at 14, Miss Hollywood a year later, singer with Ray Noble's ork in the Earl Carroll show the following year, and this year slated by Metro execs as a coming star, is the history behind Louise Burnett of San Diego, who is being prepped by the studio as a singer and actress. . . . When Frank Sinatra gets off train in Pasadena today he will be greeted by 12 jitterbugs, among others. The jitterbugs are recent winners in local dance hall contests — possibly to be turned into swoonerbugs.

Since everything in the Army is G.I., and Par's 'Dr. Wassell' is about the Army, lovely tresses of Laraine Day were cut to G.I. specifications —a two-inch hair bob.

CHARLIE SPIVAK and his ork play his first dance date here Saturday night when he gives out for cadets of the Santa Ana air base who throw party at Roosevelt hotel, but furloughes hear him first tonight at Hollywood Canteen. . . . Gene Krupa is in town for a few days. . . . Lyn Wilde, Metro actress, and Staff Sgt. James Cathcart, now at Santa Ana, met when they both were working with Ray Noble's ork, she as a singer, he a musician. They fell in love, but war interrupted romance only a short time. They are planning to be married soon.

Dean Murphy appeared on set of Metro's 'Broadway Rhythm' wearing pince-nez eyeglasses given him by F.D.R. in 1940.

LADIES' hat boxes have contained everything from what they were named for to storage vaults for money. But a new wrinkle was added when Metro's Ruth Hussey found honey-colored cocker spaniel pup inside a pretty hat box. It was first wedding anniversary gift from her husband, Lieut. Robert Longenecker. . . . Susanna Foster leaves Sunday for Minneapolis to attend premiere of Universal's 'Phantom of the Opera.' She goes next day to Cincinnati, then to Chicago and New York for appearances. . . . Current issue of Collier's carries personality sketch of Joan Harrison, Universal producer. . . . Cornel Wilde takes his wife to Santa Barbara next Monday for two-week holiday.

Martha Manning, stand-in for Claudette Colbert, marries Army Pilot Bud Smith in military ceremony to be performed at Santa Ana Air Base Saturday afternoon.

MARTHA RAYE and Joe E. Brown head talent list at Hollywood Canteen tonight. Others include Susanna Foster, Mary Healy, Charlie Spivak, Anne Shirley, Jennifer Jones and Pansy the Horse. . . . Article authored by Nancy Kelly on vicissitudes of present-day traveling across country was purchased by Redbook mag and will hit stands in early issue.

Cox Committee Hears Why Stations Had License Trouble

New York, Aug. 10.—Eugene L. Garey, counsel for the Cox Committee, investigating the FCC read into the record today a report by Robert K. Richards, an executive assistant in the office of censorship, quoting Lee Falk of OWI as having said concerning foreign language broadcasters: 'You must find out what their past associations have been and if they are open to suspicion, convict them on that and then take them off the air.'

Richards, in speaking of conversation he had with Sidney Spear, an attorney for the FCC, stated, 'when Falk finds a fellow who is doing some funny business, he tells me about it, then we wait until the station applies for renewal of license. Then Falk drops in on the station manager and tells him he should fire the broadcaster, if the station manager does nothing about it he finds plenty of trouble getting his license renewed. Finally the station would fire the broadcaster and shortly after that his license would be renewed.'

Garey charged that the FCC and OWI have been coercing foreign language stations in the hiring and firing of personnel.

young brother Raymond Roe, who's studying to be a doctor and who's always in search of either blood or a patient, and little sister, Beverly Hudson, who wants to marry Powell.

Story, original by Ben Barzman, Bess Taffel and Sol Barzman, has been plotted ever with an eye to entertainment, and Paul Jones, producer, has enlivened whole proceedings with expert touch. Miss Martin is at her very best as Bonnie Porter, who has a philosophy in life as pleasant as her singing in picture, and offers a performance which will win her even new admirers. Powell turns in bang-up portrayal, too, his warbling of two songs pleasing, and Tone gives one of his better, though briefer, interpretations. 'Family' all contribute adroit characterizations. On production end, Charles Lang's photography is entirely up to par, art direction by Hans Dreier and Earl Hedrick and set decorations by George Sawley atmospherically impressive and Edith Head's costumes tasteful. LeRoy Stone's editing is first-rate, too. Only criticism which may be made of film is its slight over-length.

Lukas is seen in another of his smooth Nazi impersonations and outstanding particularly is Schunzel as the general who kills Lukas. Other cast members who must be mentioned for roles well done include Frederick Giermann, Felix Basch, John Mylong and Steven Geray.

'Hostage' is a distinct directorial accomplishment for Frank Tuttle and as fine an achievement for Sol C. Siegel, as producer. Lester Cole and Frank Butler caught the spirit of Stefan Heym's book with admirable consistency and Victor Young's music score further adds to the atmospheric properties of Hans Dreier and Franz Bachelin's art direction. Victor Milner handled camera work, Farciout Edouart did process photography and Gordon Jennings is credited with interesting special photographic effects.

Lucy Monroe Winds Her Community Sing Reels

Lucy Monroe has washed up first series of one-reel Community Sings for Columbia, produced to encourage audience participation in singing of patriotic airs in theatres. Soprano was accompanied by RCA-Victor recording orchestra in rendition of such national chants as 'Army Air Corps,' 'Anchors Aweigh,' 'Over There' and 'Star Spangled Banner.' Shorts are similar in style to last season's 'America Sings With Kate Smith.'

of the crew; life ashore and aboard; the traditional incitements of the men; the thrills and dangers of the shakedown cruise, and finally the performance of the ship and the behavior of its complement in battle.

Direction by William A. Seiter, careful and technically advised preparation by Producer Louis F. Edelman and impressive performances by Robinson, Glenn Ford, Marguerite Chapman, Edgar Buchanan, Regis Toomey, Ed Brophy and others in support give the picture a vivid sense of reality. Its heroics are not too fatuous. The direction is perfectly attuned to the subject. The technical contributions are of top calibre.

Next to the authoritative performance of Robinson in a splendid character role, in value to the film's entertainment qualities, is the presence of Marguerite Chapman. She has striking beauty, poise and dramatic talent to spare. And she does her share of impetuous love-making as if she meant it, not merely as a matter of script direction.

Glenn Ford has a solid, salty role and handles it superbly as the chief petty officer who feuds with his immediate superior, the man he regards as a complete washout, and whose boss he in turn becomes after he marries the daughter.

The story asks you to believe that an elderly vet bosun of the last war, an expert ship builder who bossed the construction of the John Paul Jones and who pleads to be allowed to ship on her with his former protege, Regis Toomey, now her skipper, would be permitted to occupy such a berth. The very fact that he is old and outmoded, but still bristling with pride and love for the Navy—this fact it is which projects the troubles and dilemmas constituting the plot work of the story. He finally saves the ship after she is punctured by a Jap torpedo, by a herculean welding job at sea, and takes a demotion and humiliation in favor of the younger man with decent restraint.

Ed Brophy, engine room chief; Edgar Buchanan, a man plagued by seasickness; Leo Gorcey, a tough and cynical youngster; Warren Ashe, Craig Woods and Curt Bois, all give fine accounts of themselves. Much legitimate and easy-flowing comedy runs through the characterizations.

Authentic feel of the ship and of the sea as well as the thrills of trial cruise and battle action, are largely supported by the excellent miniature and processed shots contrived under supervision of Dave Allen. Superlative is the camera work of Franz Planer, and a good music score is incorporated by Anthony Collins and directed by M. W. Stoloff.

Nobody's Darling

Smith with a neat brand of individual comedy.

Screen play by Olive Cooper, from the F. Hugh Herbert original, gives Mary Lee and the carefully selected cast a sound story basis, backgrounded against Hollywood's film industry and its personages, with special focus on a school for the youngsters of picture celebs. Theme is that the parents of the principal youngsters are so concerned with their own waning importance and theatrical billings that they forget all about the talents and happiness of their kids. Once the attention of the elders is turned upon the sons and daughters, the distress and dilemmas of the latter are happily resolved.

Louis Calhern and Gladys George capably handle their assignments as parents of Mary Lee, a shy girl with awkward feet who tries hard for romance with the school's young playwright, Jackie Moran, and a singing spot in his play. Lee Patrick turns in an excellent performance as the school teacher. Lloyd Corrigan is the father of Jackie. Marcia Mae Jones impresses as the juvenile heart wrecker, with Beverly Boyd as rival.

Anthony Mann turns in a sound job of direction, with Harry Grey handling the production reins to realize full value of all the entertainment elements.

Mary Lee's voice has fine clear quality and volume and her delivery is agreeable. She sings 'Blow, Gabriel, Blow,' 'I'm Always Chasing Rainbows,' 'It Had to Be You,' 'On the Sunny Side of the Street.' A group of youngsters chant the roundelay, 'Row, Row, Row Your Boat.' Ken Darby ably looks after the music direction, Marlin Skiles did the vocal arrangements. Jack Marta uses his camera expertly, and other technical chores are well done.

J. WALTER THOMPSON FIRST IN PHOTO FINISH

Agency supremacy in the night time radio field is being claimed by the J. Walter Thompson, with a five-minute bulge over its closest contender, Young & Rubicam. With the fall season in full cry, JWT will have an aggregate of seven hours and five minutes of sponsored time weekly on the networks. Y & R had been acclaimed the champ in reports from the east.

Production personnel of the JWT programs has been reorganized, with Coast shows affected by entry of the New RCA hour show, which tees up over the Blue from here Sept. 4. At the production controls will be Antony Stanford, who also continues as producer of the Edgar Bergen java session, which resumes Sept. 5. Double assignment gives Stanford 90 minutes of broadcasting to handle within a space of less than 24 hours.

Joe Bigelow, chief scripter of Chase & Sanborn show, swings over to the RCA opus as head of the writing staff, which will be set up here and in New York. His spot on the coffee show will be taken by Mannie Manheim, who moves over from Kraft Music Hall, to be aided by Bob Mosher and Joe Connelly. Lester O'Keefe handles New York production end of RCA show and Fritz Blocki will look after other pickups. Bob Brewster continues as producer of Bing Crosby's Krafter, with Carroll Carroll as head of writing staff, which comprises Leo 'Ukie' Sherin, Vic McLeod, Stanley Davis and Elon Packard. Brewster and Carroll also preside over the Old Gold show. Lux Radio Theatre setup is undisturbed, with Sanford Barnett continuing as director, adaptations by George Wells and Harry Kerr writing the framework. Norman Blackburn carries on as agency contact on Pond's, Spreckels, Fleetwood Lawton and 'Breakfast at Sardi's' programs.

Revisions in the Hollywood setup were made at conferences between Dan Danker, veepee in charge of the Coast radio department, and Robert Colwell, radio exec of JWT, here from New York.

Estimated that total of around 500,000 people will thus be reached with blurbs for the show. This is the first time depot loud speaker has been used for matters outside immediate traffic and station announcements, and was permitted because funds from TITA go to the Army Emergency Relief.

St. Louis, Aug. 10.—Highlight in connection with opening of Warners 'This Is the Army' at the Ambassador Theatre here will be five-day encampment of 300 troops under camouflage in Forest Park, with attendant radio, newspaper and other publicity. members and relatives from accepting jobs.

Less than 100 of the 4,400 Class B members of the Screen Actors Guild have signified a willingness to work for less than $10.50, in an effort to eliminate the $5.50 scale, as was done by the cowboys when they nixed all $11 calls and upped the rate to $16.50. Letter seeking support of other unions was sent to the IATSE business representatives committee, Conference of Studio Unions, Carpenters, Teamsters and Musicians.

LETTER ASKS SUPPORT

Letter signed by Roy Lawson as chairman of the Screen Players Protective Committee, stated:

'The Screen Players Protective Committee petitions the officers and members of your organization for assistance in blocking the attempt by motion picture employers to break down the living standards of 4,400 members of an American Federation of Labor union—the Screen Actors Guild. With the cooperation of the Screen Actors Guild, waivers are being issued to non-union extras while thousands of paid-up AF of L extras, willing and available, are ignored.

'The attached bulletin, issued by Universal Pictures Corp., is prima facie evidence of this assault on organized labor. Extra players have no vote in the Screen Actors Guild, although they contribute over 70% of the dues. Screen Players Protective Committee, representing a majority of the SAG extra player members, asks the support of your organization in halting this practice, designed to demoralize the organized labor movement, and connived in by the management of the union to which they pay dues.

'For the good and welfare of the organized labor movement, it is hoped that your body will take appropriate action to halt this use of scabs.'

Bulletin referred to was distributed on lot and asked employes to list names of any persons they knew willing to accept casual extra work at $5.50, and to send their names to Central Casting Corp. It was indicated that similar action was being taken by other major studios.

Emerson's 'Tokyo' Lead

Faye Emerson has been set for femme lead in Warners 'Destination Tokyo,' which Delmer Daves is directing for Producer Jerry Wald.

Peverell Marley is recuperating at Good Samaritan Hospital from major operation, and plans to remain two weeks before leaving for final recovery at home.

SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT ON EXTRAS; OVERTIME PAY

Tentative deal has been set for an out-of-court settlement of Screen Actors Guild suit to collect overtime pay for film extras under the Wage-Hour Law. Full terms of settlement have been agreed upon. Guild auditors will have to examine claims involved before settlement is inked.

In announcing settlement, SAG stated:

'Case was originally filed in the Federal District Court in October, 1941. Guild's decision to aim for an out-of-court settlement sprung from the fact that trying case in court involved auditing the books of the producing companies. The court refused to order such an audit at the expense of the studios, and Guild auditors reported that it would have been prohibitive for the Guild to assume the expense of the audit.

'More than 1,300 claimants are involved in the suits, although it is pointed out that, because certain of of the claims are unsubstantiated by any factual data, many of the claimants will not be eligible for an allocation of the final settlement.' It is understood that several thousands of dollars are involved.

Film Unions Meet To Discuss Return To Labor Council

Question of unions and guilds outside the Central Labor Council reaffiliating with that organization following ouster of Harry Sherman as prexy will be discussed today at a conference of union heads at the Mayfair Hotel. Representatives of several motion picture crafts will attend parley, called by George Campbell of the Musicians.

Crafts that withdrew from the Council include the Screen Actors Guild, Moving Picture Painters Local 644, Teamsters, Musicians and Screen Set Designers. Screen Office Employes Guild and Screen Cartoonists Guild dropped out but have since reaffiliated.

Paul Smith, American Federation of Labor representative who is now operating the Council, made a plea for unity at Monday night's meeting. Smith was directed by Prexy William Green of the AF of L to take over the administrative and executive duties of the Council, as well as books and finances, and see if a harmony program could not be worked out.

150 ATTEND 20TH MEET TODAY

SKOURAS TO KEYNOTE SESSION

First session of annual western sales meet of 20th-Fox will be launched this morning in Fiesta Room of the Ambassador hotel, with vice president in charge of sales Tom J. Connors opening the meeting and then turning it over to W. C. Gehring, western sales manager. One hundred and fifty delegates will attend.

Two meetings today will be mainly devoted to general biz discussions; in addition to which addresses will be given by William J. Kupper, executive assistant to Connors; Paul Terry, producer of Terrytoons; comedy commentator Lew Lehr; Al Brick, western supervision of Movietone News; George A. Roberts, sales supervisor for March of Time; shorts subjects sales manager William J. Clark; and Richard de Rochemont, managing editor of March of Time.

President Spyros Skouras is slated to be highlight speaker tomorrow morning, with Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck also on agenda to describe production plans of 20th-Fox for the coming season.

Several pictures aimed for early fall release will be shown the sales organization Friday and Saturday mornings in Ambassador hotel theatre.

Delegates will be allowed to present suggestions on general product proposed at tomorrow afternoon session; as president Skouras is particularly anxious to obtain angles from the sales force on several of the pictures at present pencilled in for production. Complete product announcement will not be released to the trade until next week, according to present plans.

Defends Dogs—

Mrs. Jane Dorsey, wife of band leader Jimmy Dorsey, appeared in court yesterday to defend herself against damage suit filed by Mrs. June Price, former wife of Al St. John, pic director. Mrs. Price brought suit against the Dorseys for $4070 claiming the band leader, his wife and dogs did that much damage to rugs, drapes and other household items during the time they lived in the Sherman Oaks home, which she rented to them. Mrs. Dorsey declared in court that 'her dogs had been slandered.'

WHERE DO WE SLEEP?

Wartime housing conditions created unusual condition for those in charge of lining up hotel accommodations for the 150-odd visitors to the western sales convention of 20th-Fox. Although Ambassador hotel is being used as headquarters, latter hostelry could not take care of the overload of reservations for the film gang. Result is scattering of the latter into other spots, including the Chapman Park, Roosevelt and Beverly-Wilshire layouts. At a late hour last night several last-minute additions to the visiting list were standing in line waiting for quarters to be vacated, while others were moved into apartments near the hotel.

AND WHEN DO WE EAT?

Although 20th-Fox western sales meet opens this morning, fanfare dinners and parties that prevailed in pre-war periods for the visitors are definitely restricted. There's plans afoot to have a luncheon for the delegates at the studio during the next few days, but it had not been set last night. Reports of a couple of cocktail parties were current, but no definite time for the elbow-bending. In fact, visitors are expected to forage for themselves generally for the next four days, due to inability to provide service and food for the 150 delegates in any one room or spot.

CRAIG REINSTATED BY SAG; GRANTED APPEAL TO CLASS B

clined to do so the Board confirmed his suspension of one-year. In a statement accompanying the announcement the SAG indicated the Craig action was to remove a confusing side issue relative to autonomy for Class B members. The statement follows:

'At the Sept. 19 meeting of the Class B membership, the sole question to be considered will be a plan submitted by the Guild for creation of a separate and autonomous organization for the extras. The plan, representing months of careful consideration of the best interests of all groups of extras, will be fully presented and fully discussed.

PROMPT VOTE PROMISED

'Immediately after the Sept. 19 meeting, mail ballots will be distributed to Class B members for a prompt vote on the plan.

'There has been a tendency to inject issues of the personal conduct and personal ambitions of a few extras into the broader and much more important question of a new organization for all who do extra work. This question is too vital to extras to allow the issue to become confused. The livelihood of extras is at stake.

'For nearly 10 years the extras have enjoyed the benefits of the collective bargaining strength of the Class A members. Various methods of representation for the extras, within a single Guild organization, have been tried. Because of the inherent differences in the problems of actors and of extra players, none has proved satisfactory. Now the Board feels that the extras themselves must take primary responsibility for working out their group economic problems. At the same time, the Board recognizes its responsibility to help the extras launch a successful organization. The Board intends to see that a sound plan is presented, without confusing side issues. One such issue has been the case of Hal Craig, Class B member found guilty of conduct unbecoming a member of the Guild and suspended for one year.

APPEAL GRANTED

'Mr. Craig petitioned the Board to vacate its decision and to grant him a new trial. The Board has rejected both petitions. Mr. Craig also petitioned for an appeal to the Guild Class B membership. This has been granted by the Board, and Mr. Craig will be allowed to take his appeal before the Class B membership at a meeting called for that purpose, at the earliest opportunity following the regular annual meeting of the extra players on Sept. 19.

'In order that Mr. Craig may not suffer economic consequences of a delayed appeal to the membership, he has been temporarily reinstated and may work in pictures.

'When Mr. Craig appeared before the Board on July 26 to request a new trial, he was offered an opportunity to retract a damaging and unfounded statement made formally to a Government official and injuring the Guild. He was informed that after such a retraction, the Board would consider leniency. On Aug. 9, Mr. Craig through his attorney informed the Guild that he did not choose to make a retraction. The Board has therefore affirmed its decision finding Mr. Craig guilty of conduct unbecoming a member. He will be allowed an appeal to the Class B membership, but those proceedings, involving the conduct of one individual, will not be permitted to confuse the question of establishing a new and effective organization for all extra players.'

Craig was represented by Alexander H. Schullman, attorney for the Retail Clerks. Schullman had stated the case would be taken into Federal Court if Craig was deprived of the right to work and contended player's suspension was illegal.

BRITISH WANT U. S. FILM QUOTA CUT

rently 80 to 90% of films on British screens are from Hollywood.

English are complaining that since the unfreezing of U. S. coin 10 months ago, not a single British picture has been contracted for in America. 'For Which We Serve,' 'Spitfire,' 'One of Our Aircraft Is Missing' and 'The Invaders' were paid for out of frozen coin.

In New York, it is argued that quality of films, not coin considerations, are blocking deals. Film reps of U. S. and Russia made strides toward cementing friendly relations last week when Michail Kalotozow, prominent Soviet producer, left New York for Hollywood Friday to set up Coast liaison quarters. Intentions became known in Washington where Kalotozow went to present his credentials. He disclosed conversations with Ambassador Standley prior to trip here. Latter voiced enthusiasm over U. S.-Russian film ties.

HOYT SAYS OWI PIC DIVISION RIDDLED BUT'LL CARRY ON

Washington, Aug. 10.—Palmer Hoyt, director of the OWI said today that with the Motion Picture section virtually abolished by the Congressional slash in their budget from $8,800,000 to $2,250,000 there would be little sacrifice of efficiency under the curtailed budget. He stated his chief regret was the loss to his department of 46 field operations staff, necessitating the reorganization of his agency.

The domestic branch of the OWI today slashed 777 employees from its roll of 1269. Figures were not available as to the exact numbers in each of the departments making up the agency, but from Hoyt's statement it is apparent that the motion picture section took the brunt of the blow.

WHEN Charles D. Spangler, now lieutenant in the Information Branch of Chemical Warfare Service in Washington, and his wife, the former Kay Danes, tried to interest Hollywood studios in their joint story, 'Prison Ship,' a year ago, the prospectus was thumbed on the grounds that the Japs 'wouldn't commit such crimes' as the narrative depicted. Two days ago the Washington Evening Star carried an AP story by a survivor of a torpedoed Jap troop carrier filled with Allied prisoners from Hong Kong, which specified 'black hole' horrors almost precisely as Spangler and his wife had incorporated in their tale.

HVC MAY BOOK CANTEEN TALENT

250 of them have been appearing largely at the Canteen.

This left only 150 of the top ranking players to cover the hundreds of Army camps and Navy stations throughout the country, as well as the offshore bases. Many of these have made two and three trips this summer, with some of them trooping continuously.

It is said, however, that a large number of players when approached for camp tours have taken the position they are contributing their part to entertainment of servicemen by appearing at the Canteen. There is possibility agreement may be reached by directors and HVC for latter to directly book talent appearing at the Canteen. In this way, various appearances could be rotated, with all players carrying their part of burden of taking entertainment to isolated camps, as well as participation in War Bond rallies and appearances for other Government agencies.

doubtful. In all, there are 84 appliactions for new stations with 250 watts or less, plus 13 applications for boosts from 100 to 250 watts. It is believed that the tubes can probably be obtained from War Production Board for any transmitter licensed by the commission, but licensing of new transmitters has been limited to low power because tubes for higher powered transmitters are not available. Twenty-one transmitters ranging in power from 500 to 5,000 watts are on hand.

In addition to the tube shortage it is held by the commission that directional antenna would be required for new stations with more than 250-watt power. And there critical materials would be called for. Applicants for these new stations are, therefore, invited to inform the FCC of their present plans and desires within 30 days.

Whenever a guy has it, he has it, and you don't know why, or how he got that way. Old-timers in the show business have spent years and millions trying to find out what it is all about. Along comes an ordinary-looking lad named Frank Sinatra with an ordinary-sounding voice, and the old women forget their age and the youngsters cut the rug on a railroad platform in dignified Pasadena. The oldsters in the show business, who have been studying all the angles since Barnum's day, simply shrug their shoulders and say: 'Well, that's it.'

If Warners sent all those brass bands to Italy, promulgating six simultaneous premieres of 'This Is The Army,' the Italians would start dancing in the streets and forget all about Badoglio, who is only a stand-in for Mussolini, who played a support role for Hitler and never gave any too much support.

Hollywood, once the impish child of show business, has reached maturity, with traditions and everything. At least, some call 'em traditions, but out in the neighborhood areas the customers call 'em re-issues.

Your grandpop shed a furtive tear now and then when Richard Mansfield or Robert Mantell emoted all over the stage for three acts and a flock of scenes. And the more scenes there were, the more scenery they chewed. Those were the days of thespian acrobatics when an actor was considered a bush leaguer unless he could rattle the rafters in the gallery with a soulful sigh. And when King Lear cut loose with a burst of wrath at his daughter's ingratitude, you thought there was an explosion in the gashouse. The boys and gals are more repressed nowadays on stage and screen, but the radio still goes in for unnecessary noises. Out yonder on the moonlit plain.

Appointment In Berlin

(Melodrama)

George Sanders is familiarly seen again as a British agent in Germany, in tried and true fashion, but as often as this theme has been utilized 'Appiontment in Berlin' emerges bang-up entertainment. Character of Lord Haw-Haw, the Englishman who once drew British hatred through broadcasting from Berlin, inspired the story, Sanders undertaking the role of a British flight commander cashiered out of the Army, then enlisted in the Secret Service to serve England. Picture is strong on action, with the inevitable but thrilling chase by the Gestapo for fitting conclusion.

As directed by Alfred E. Green from Horace McCoy and Michael Hogan's screenplay, the Samuel Bischoff film is due to hold the interest of any class audience. Espionage angle has been played to fare-you-well with Sanders in top form, and comparatively new personality, Marguerite Chapman, evokes engaging attention. She plays a German who, though working for the Nazis, is not with them in spirit, and she draws a characterization finely-patterned. Onslow Stevens enacts a thoroughly convincing role, too, as her brother, high up in the Nazi order, who kills his sister finally when she is attempting to leave Germany with Sanders. Personality interest is high in this melodrama which never lowers itself to accepted cliches, every impersonation a standout.

Story by B. P. Fineman gains motivation through Prime Minister Chamberlain returning from his second visit to Hitler with word that he has secured peace for Britain. Sanders, an officer in the RAF, takes his plan of appeasement as a disgrace to England, publicly proclaiming the fact so vigorously that finally he is forced to resign his commission. Whereupon, he is invited by the Secret Service chief to become an espionage agent, an assignment which leads eventually to his being branded a traitor and sentenced to serve a prison term. With his release comes the ultimate assignment, leaving for Sweden where he is contacted by Nazis and invited to become one of them through his 'hate' for England. Action thereafter leads to his broadcasting as 'The Voice of Truth' to England, coded messages to his Secret Service chief embodied in each broadcast, and a well-worked-out climax.

Impressive are the brief but action-packed final scenes of the British air fleet attack of islands off Holland, lighted up by the flare which follows Sanders' fatal plunge in his stolen plane into huge gas reservoirs. These scenes are outstanding examples of miniature and process work

What's Buzzin', Cousin?

(Comedy-Drama With Music)

Columbia production. Co-starring Ann Miller, Rochester and John Hubbard, with Freddy Martin and his orchestra. Supporting cast: Leslie Brooks, Jeff Donnell, Carol Hughes, Theresa Harris, Roy Gordon, Bradley Page, Warren Ashe, Dub Taylor, Betsy Gay, Louis Mason. Director, Charles Barton. Producer, Jack Fier. Screenplay, Harry Sauber. Based upon story by Aben Kandel. Additional dialog, John P. Medbury. Photography, Joseph Walker. Editor, James Sweeney. Art direction, Lionel Banks, Paul Murphy. Sets, Joseph Kish. Dance director, Nick Castle. Musical director, M. W. Stoloff. Reviewed at Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, Aug. 11, 1943. Running time: 74 MINS.

Enlivened by Ann Miller's dancing, Freddie Martin's music and Rochester's comedy, 'What's Buzzin', Cousin?' is first grade supporter material for double bills. It seldom gets off the beaten path in what little story it has to offer and its pattern is anything but new, but it suffices and is up to the mark intended. Audiences will find it agreeable pastime.

Story take-off has John Hubbard, a successful young Los Angeles attorney with a love for singing, abandoning his practice for the summer to join Freddie Martin's ork as soloist. Rochester, taking the summer off his regular radio show — name of Jack Benny is never mentioned but his identity can't be missed—goes along with the band, too, as they start their eastward trek, and troupers soon find themselves in a deserted town, where action thereafter unfolds, in an empty hotel.

Soon after company moves in, Ann Miller arrives with trio of chorus girl friends. Ann has inherited hostelry, left her by her grandfather, and she and her friends have paid off the lien against property. Discovering they've thrown away their money on a worthless proposition, gals are distraught until Hubbard gets bright idea and spends lot of his own dough to fit up hotel and make a resort of it, with Freddie Martin's band to draw in cash customers. Only customers don't show up for hotel's opening. Gold is found on property, though, there's a rush to settle in the town, there's skullduggery aplenty, Hubbard and Ann split up, but everything's happy in final clinch.

Outstanding is Rochester's comedy, one of funniest moments being his telephone conversation with his 'boss'—Benny, of course, supposedly on other end. Freddie Martin's music ever is a treat, John Hubbard warbles number of songs and Ann Miller offers couple of enticing dance numbers. Personality standout is young comedienne named Jeff Donnell, in dumb-bunny role, who's destined for better roles. Carol Hughes and Leslie Brooks, couple of lookers, are Ann's other two pals, and Theresa Harris is good as Rochester's gal friend.

Charles Barton gets credit for directing this Jack Fier production, and Joseph Walker handled photography is good shape. M. W. Stoloff directed the music and Nick Castle staged dances of femme star and her girls. Screenplay was written by Harry Sauber from Aben Kandel's original story, and John P. Medbury wrote additional dialog.

The forthcoming Quebec conference may become the most important meeting of modern times. It is obvious at present that from now on political factors and events will be equally as important as military victories. The United Nations at present are a political alliance—and that very factor is like a marriage concluded for material gain. The Axis was an 'unnatural alliance' and is therefore cracking at the seams. At Quebec, political problems, especially those of Europe, will have to be given the full consideration they deserve—with an all-around honest attempt by each member of the United Nations to create common interests for the future, after the common enemy of the past has been destroyed.

"There's a new team of comics in the world of show business to be reckoned with from this point on, folks, and it's an idea grounded in precedent to give them plenty of running room in billing and on screen. They're Frank Fay and Billy Gilbert, and they're not like Abbott and Costello, but they stack up in this first of their pictures much as Bud and Lou stacked up in their first, therefore it's a good bet they'll be going on and up in the scale of popularity when the public gets a look at them."

FREEMAN DENIES PAR USES PAID ADS IN PIC

Y. Frank Freeman, vice president in charge of operations of Paramount studios yesterday issued the following statement: 'My attention has been directed to published articles appearing in several newspapers and trade papers (not Daily Variety) to the effect that a scene is being used in Paramount's production of 'Lady in the Dark' showing billboards or electric signs featuring advertised products. Further these published statement intimate that Paramount received a large sum of money for the inclusion of this scene in the picture.

'This is totally and completely without any grain of truth. I wish to deny that there is a scene in 'Lady in the Dark' showing electric signs or billboards advertising commercial products. Paramount was never approached directly or indirectly by anyone to include scenes of advertising in this picture and the whole story is an unfounded rumor made out of synthetic cloth.'

CARROLL DOESN'T MIND 22G SUIT—BUT DEFENDS HIS GALS

Earl Carroll doesn't mind being sued for a mere $22,000 but when a theatre operator challenges his slogan of many years standing that 'through these portals pass the most beautiful girls in the world,' then his dander is really up. And that goes for Canada, too. Yesterday one Joseph Victor Desautels of Montreal slapped a suit on Carroll claiming that he was shorted by 10 girls in the line and further the troupe was 'inferior, ill trained and wore torn and filthy costumes.'

Not only was business good in Montreal, states Carroll, but Desautels optioned the revue for another week in Toronto and paid off in full. That was two years ago, says Carroll, which prompted the expression 'astounded.' To prove that his girls were 'exquisitely lovely,' he hauled out his scrap book. Wrote the Canadian critics: 'the girls were lovely and graceful' . . . 'Mr. Carroll won his name by boldly announcing that in his show were the most beautiful girls in the world and did much to substantiate that claim.'

Carroll rests his case there, at least until he goes to court.

and add highly to the interest attached to this sequence. Commendable at all times is Alfred E. Planer's photography, Lionel Banks and Walter Holscher's art direction and set decorations by George Montgomery, montage effects by Aaron Nibley, and M. W. Stoloff's direction of Anthony Collins' music. Film was produced by Samuel Bischoff, who gave it good send-off.

CRAIG STANDS PAT AND SAYS FELLOWS WILL OK HIM

Following notification by the Screen Actors Guild last night that his suspension had been lifted pending appeal to the Class B members, Hal Craig, film bit player, stated: 'The SAG's action in suspending me was entirely illegal. Time will tell as to who was constructive and who was destructive, and who was guilty of misconduct. I am naturally prepared to prove my contention at the proper time and at the proper place, what was contained in my letter to the War Manpower Commission.

'The purpose of any union is to protect its members against non-union help encroaching upon the work that its members rightfully deserve. The conditions still exist that caused me to make the statement that I did, and that is that non-union workers are still being hired by the Producers.

'I still feel that if it was not within the power of the SAG to remedy a very bad situation that they should have applauded my action in writing to the WMC as consturctive in trying to help them achieve something that would benefit their members. I feel certain that all B members will approve my action in trying to stop the issuance of waivers to non-union extras, when my case is brought before them on appeal.

'In the SAG's reference to confusing side issues, may I state that as far as any confusion is concerned, it comes only from the Guild statement. My action has been very clear and comprehensible. I have only one goal in mind and that is to help my brother actors in securing a real honest to God union.'

and probably will in short order approve sale of the three stations by the Blue.

It was expected that the application would seek approval for the transfer of control of the Blue network as licensee and it is generally believed that the Blue network would continue as licensee in name. Formation of American Broadcasting System, Inc., does not necessarily mean, however, that the name Blue will be dropped although it is not unlikely that Noble intends to call the chain the American Network. Officers of the new corporation were listed as Edward J. Noble of Greenwich, Conn., president; Earl A. Anderson, Upper Montclair, N. J., vice prez, and C. Nicholas Priaulz, Yonkers, N. Hollywood Players Help Boom Frisco's Drive for Beds

San Francisco, Aug. 11.—Beds for Buddies drive got away to an auspicious start at a luncheon today at the St. Francis hotel attended by 350 civic leaders and a delegation of picture people from Hollywood. George Mann, chairman of the northern California committee, presided and presented to the assemblage the setup to be followed in raising that area's quota of $100,000. He told of trailers to be made and shown in theatres and the collections to be taken up on the fund-raising campaign.

In the Hollywood group, which trained up for the luncheon to hypo the takeoff, were Mayor Fletcher Bowron, Leo Carrillo, Ruth Hussey, Preston Foster, Laraine Day, John Carroll and Willard Keith, head of the State War Council. Cesar Romero, in the uniform of the Coast guard, and Benny Rubin also were on hand.

Mayor Angelo Rossi told the gathering that there were enough beds in Frisco to accommodate all furloughees and that 1,100 more were being brought in to take care of any unexpected overflow. It was pointed out that other cities in the bay area and to the north need beds for servicemen on leave and in these towns the funds for the northern area would be used largely. It was announced that the state would match dollar-for-dollar all coin collected in the drive in this area.

Mixup in trains spoiled Mayor Rossi's reception plans. He had a committee and police escort at the station awaiting the train's arrival but due to a last minute switch from the Lark to the Owl, the Hollywood delegation was landed in Oakland across the bay two hours late.

NY LEGIT OPENING

CHAUVE-SOURIS OF 1943

New York, Aug. 12.—'Chauve-Souris of 1943' opened at the Royale doubtfully tonight. Whatever chance Russian revue had was spoiled by air conditioning which didn't work, so audience took a beating. Leon Greanin, fellow with beard, did announcing and nearly talked show to death, akin to late Nikita Balieff but without that personality's humor. Fortunately most numbers are brief, otherwise first nighters would have walked in greater numbers. Revue laughless and minus novelties of original show.

Vera Pavlovska, contralto, is the best of the singers, scoring with 'Song of Chauve Souris' and also top voice in sad songs that Balieff made audience like. Ballet bits okay but not important. Broadway would have welcomed show in light of Russia's great fighting heart, but found little to get enthused over in revue presented under adverse conditions.

Dawn was a glorious time of day in bygone years when the show business was confined to the stage. A player's playtime began about midnight, when he had wiped off the greasepaint and forgotten the rigors of the drama. Invariably he'd ease the fumes of night from his tonsils and declaim: 'Night's candles have burned out and jocund day stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops.' And there wasn't a mountain top within 400 miles. Anyway, it was a jocund day.

Phantom Of The Opera

(Drama with Music)

Universal production. In Technicolor. Stars Nelson Eddy, Susanna Foster, Claude Rains. Supporting cast: Edgar Barrier, Leo Carrillo, Jane Farrar, J. Edward Bromberg. Fritz Feld, Frank Puglia, Steven Geray, Barbara Everest, Hume Cronyn, Fritz Leiber, Nicki Andre, Gladys Blake, Elvira Curci, Hans Herbert, Kate Lawson, Miles Mander, Rosina Galli, Walter Stahl, Paul Marion. Produced by George Waggner. Directed by Arthur Lubin. Screen play, Eric Taylor and Samuel Hoffenstein. Adaptation, John Jacoby. Based on composition, 'Phantom of the Opera,' by Gaston Leroux. Photography, Hal Mohr and W. Howard Greene. Technicolor director, Natalie Kalmus. Art direction, John B. Goodman and Alexander Golitzen. Sound director, Bernard B. Brown. Set decorations, R. A. Gausman and Ira S. Webb. Film editor, Russell Schoengarth. Costumes, Vera West. Musical score and direction, Edward Ward. Opera sequences staged by William Von Wymetal and Lester Horton. Orchestration, Harold Zweifel and Arthur Schutt. Previewed in Los Angeles, Aug. 12, 1943. Running time: 95 MINS.

'Phantom of the Opera' is essentially great theatre and here gets magnificent treatment to set it up as one of the foremost money-making film entertainments of the year. That it has been made twice previously, the last time in 1930, has nothing to do with its present Technicolor presentation, except to testify to its timeless vitality. The present version for the first time captures and fully exploits the basic musical nature of the dramatic fiction of the Paris Opera and its haunting phantom, crazed with love for the young star. It thus blends two of the strongly favored entertainment elements of the day, with all audiences, the macabre and the musical, combined with adroit showmanship and highest skills from all production departments to back up the superb performances.

Calibre of the offering was made possible because of Susanna Foster, primarily. Whole picture was focused on role of the young operatic star and the ability of the Universal singer to carry it off. Miss Foster, reared by and for the screen, confirms her status as peer of any of the film singers with a brilliant demonstration of voice and exciting personaality, free from irritating mannerisms. The color cameras have a beautiful subject, and there is much talent to go with the allure.

With the proper handling of that role assured, and Nelson Eddy and Claude Rains to complete the star bracket, Universal executives and Producer George Waggner went the limit in giving 'Phantom' lavish production and Technicolor elegance. Waggner not only presided as producer but was especially fitted for the assignment because of his wide knowledge of music, including success as a composer and librettist. He did a libretto for each of the three operas used in the picture and wrote the lyric for 'Lullaby of the Bells.'

Story of the 'Phantom' varies widely from the two previous versions of the Gaston Leroux composition. It is not, like the Lon Chaney starrer, a horror tale with the madman in fantastic makeup. The excellent screen play by Eric Taylor and Samuel Hoffenstein, with adaptation by John Jacoby, deals psychologically with the 'phantom' to provide legitimate motivation and hence a credibility which the earlier

Bad Man Of Deadwood

Republic production. Stars Roy Rogers. Supporting cast: George (Gabby) Hayes, Carol Adams, Herbert Rawlinson, Henry Brandon, Sally Payne, Hal Taliaferro, Jay Novello, Horace Murphy, Monte Blue, Ralf Harolde, Jack Kirk. Producer-director, Joseph Kane. Original screenplay, James R. Webb. Photography, William Nobles. Editor, Charles Craft. Musical director, Cy Feuer. Reviewed at Hitching Post, Hollywood, Aug. 12, 1943. Running time: 61 MINS.

Roy Rogers goes into a gallop with this story of a gunman who cleans up a town, and receives lusty support from George (Gabby) Hayes, in a comic role, and a picked company of bravos. Picture stacks up in the western market and situations have been milked dry by producer-director Joseph Kane, who knows how to get the most out of a saddler with breezy direction. James R. Webb's original screenplay plunges Rogers into traditional trouble, and William Nobles lensed with keen eye toward photographic effects.

Town of Deadwood proves too tough for many honest business men who try to set up establishments there and are run out of town by town boss, Ralf Harolde. When Gabby Hayes and his daughter, Sally Payne, operating a medicine show, are ordered out of town, along with Rogers, who's been trailing along with wagon for no reason in particular, Rogers decides to do something about it and is aided by group of men who have suffered similar fate in past. Final accounting unveils identity of real town boss, in surprise story twist, to be newspaper editor who ostensibly has fought town's vicious element all the while.

Story has been worked out with an eye to action and excitement, and it succeeds admirably in both goals, Rogers tops as a hard-riding, straight-shooting hombre who performs in best accepted Old West style. Hayes has a fat part as the old medicine show professor, one of his best roles to date, and Henry Brandon is smooth as the editor. Carol Adams provides romantic interest, Herbert Rawlinson does outstanding bit as U. S. judge who cannot convict guilty parties due to evidence always missing, and Sally Payne is responsible for nice bit of trouping as Hayes' daughter. Rogers' songs are minimized for action.

The Law Rides Again

(Western)

Monogram production. Co-stars Hoot Gibson and Ken Maynard. Supporting cast: Betty Miles, Jack LaRue, Emmett Lynn, Kenneth Harlan, Thunder Cloud, Chief Many Treaties, Bryant Washburn, John Bridges, Fred Hoose, Charles Murray, Jr., Hank Bell. Director, Alan James. Producer, Robert Tansey. Original screenplay, Frances Kavanaugh. Photography, Marcel Le Picard. Editor, Fred Bain. Musical director, Frank Sanucci. Reviewed at Hitching Post, Hollywood, Aug. 12, 1943. Running time: 55 MINS.

Second of the Hoot Gibson-Ken Maynard lopers, 'The Law Rides Again 'is cut to formula but furnishes good action entertainment all the while. Hoot and Ken are authorized by U. S. Commissioner in Arizona territory to discover why Indians suddenly have broken their treaty and gone on warpath, and their quest lands them in plenty of trouble. Co-stars are getting into stride in this latest of their series for Monogram, with lots of riding, shooting and fighting to please cash-customers.

Robert Tansey has given picture class with his careful production and Alan James' direction keeps Frances Kavanaugh's original screenplay moving at all times. Plot has everything a western should have, including Indians and the cavalry coming to the rescue. Two stars make good running mates, and there's Betty Miles for femme interest, in sizeable spot.

Hoot and Ken find Kenneth Harlan, the Indian agent, is behind Indians unearthing the hatchet. He's a cagey gent, though, and before the situation is cleared up there's murder and the inevitable gun-fight for a climax, enough bullets zipping to mow down half a Jap division. Story is a satisfactory offering for average western fan, giving promise of things to come with boys leaving to blaze new trails.

Two stars are ably abetted by Jack LaRue, in a likeable heavy role; Emmett Lynn, as an old scout; Harlan, the doublecrossing Indian agent; and Hank Bell, as sheriff. Miss Miles is especially effective as leading lady. Photography by Marcel Le Picard is of the best, and Frank Sanucci's musical direction is an added attraction.

'Trumpet Man' Bought By MG For Cummings

Metro has purchased 'The Trumpet Man,' original by Eric Charrell, for its fall production slate, and turned it over to Jack Cummings for making. Story relates experiences of a timid trumpet player who gets nowhere until five girls take his career in hand and zoom him to national prominence.

with Robert Arden

The startling announcement that the Soviet Union was not invited to the Quebec conferences indicates that the vast political problems are likely to take precedent over military problems when President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill meet. It is very important to note that neither the Washington or London Soviet ambassadors are at their posts. The only inference is that, so far as realistic Stalin is concerned, there is nothing to discuss before Great Britain and America have a concrete plan for a post-war cooperation of all parties in the anti-Axis war.

By ALTA DURANT

INGRID BERGMAN will remember yesterday for a long time to come. Her vocal coach, Arthur Rosenstein, brought a man to her dressing room at Metro and asked her to sing 'The Last Rose of Summer' for his friend, 'Mr. Jones.' When she finished her coach proudly exclaimed, 'You have just been auditioned for the Metropolitan Opera.' 'Mr. Jones,' he confessed, was Earl Lewis, co-director of the Met. Miss Bergman gave out with her famous blush and almost collapsed. . . . Believe it or not, but when Dame May Whitty portrays a role in Metro's 'Gaslight' the make-up artist will have to make Dame Whitty, who is 78, and looks 50, look like a 60-year-old. . . . Tommy Dorsey and his bride, Pat Dane, are giving up the huge house of the late George Fitzmaurice in Bevhills for a Sunset Strip apartment. They blame domestic help scarcity.

Frankie Sinatra would have drooled to see how the autograph fiends descended on Bing Crosby at the Vine Derby yesterday noon.

SHADES of 'God Bless America.' Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed wrote a song 20 years ago titled 'We Will Meet Again In Honolulu,' and it is just now going to press. . . . Columbia is going to have a lion, too. His name is 'Lionel the Lion.' His papa is Dave Fleischer, the cartoonist, and the mischievous Lionel makes his bow soon. . . . Add niceties — Gene Austin, when he heard his singer and bass fiddle player, Eddie Bee, was going into the Army, gave cigarette concession to his young wife, Dorothy, who will divvy her time between the job and two-months-old baby.

Jack Benny wrote Mary Livingstone from North Africa that 'some officers asked me if I wanted to go leopard hunting this afternoon, about 40 miles from here.' (Editor's note—he didn't.)

TODAY is Actors Day in Federal court. Ballerina Toumanova, Melchior Lengyel, Hungarian playwright, and the Bus-Feketes appear for their final citizenship papers. . . . Harold Cohen, drama ed of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, is eating for free again. This time it's at the home of Aleen and Jacques Leslie. . . . After lifetime of doing everything together, Wilde Twins, Lee and Lyn, yesterday were separated for first time. They recorded Cole Porter's 'Easy To Love' separately, song they warble in 'Andy Hardy's Blonde Trouble.'

Ginger Rogers insisted that 'Tender Comrade' get under way today, recalling that last pic, which started on Friday the 13th, 'Kitty Foyle,' won her Acad award.

FRONT LINE EXTRAS ASK $16.50

Screen Actors Guild, which is now preparing to arbitrate extra wage proposals with the Producers.

Following communication is being sent to members of the Essential Players Association, as well as other interested Class B members of the SAG:

'Having patiently sat back and allowed various individuals, so-called self-appointed leaders, etc., to malign, misquote and misrepresent, our, the Essential Players, effort, your committee at this time finds it necessary to make a public answer to these accusations and carefully to give each member of this association a clear and concise understanding of what the Essential Players advocate.

'From various conversations on sets we have become aware of the fact that a good many of our coworkers, particularly those that have not signed our agreement, are not fully conversant with our wage adjustment proposal made to the Screen Actors Guild. The proposal made is as follows:

'A minimum of $16.50 per day was proposed for all foreground atmosphere actors, covering all job classifications. To thoroughly understand what is meant by all classifications, we proposed that the job be priced, rather than clothes or the individual.

'This would cover all of the many job classifications, for example, stevedores, doctors, senators, cops, nurses, stenographers, maids, bell hops, hotel clerks, fight seconds, reporters, etc. In regard to all large sets, such as cafes, theatres, fight arenas, etc., it was proposed a minimum of 100 foreground atmosphere actors be paid $16.50 per day. This would cover practically every type of set you have ever been called to work upon.

'There are many good reasons supporting this proposal. One is that it should not be necessary to get the sanction of the War Labor Board, as we are not asking for a raise in wages but merely proposing that a wage scale, which has been voluntarily paid by most of the studios at various times over a period of years, for uniforms, street clothes, costumes, etc., be made the minimum for designated work. This definitely refutes the charges that this proposal originated with a particular group to further their own interests, but applies equally to all character actors and all recognized foreground atmosphere actors.

'We also wish to inform you that we have made every effort possible to work with the various so-called leaders towards unity, but have found that to protect our agreed purpose, this cannot be done. Therefore, we wish to state that the Essential Players Association, regardless of the publicity to the contrary, has no intention of affiliating with any other group.'

kyo,' Staff Sgt. Clifford R. Wherley, 17 year-old army 'veteran,' Robert Prescott of the Flying Tigers and J. R. Mason, of the U. S. S. Hornet.

KATE SMITH GETS HAND

Through the courtesy of Variety Club of Washington, Tent 112, 50 wounded soldiers from the Walter Reed Hospital, fresh from the front were brought to the theatre in army ambulances and saw the preem. Stage show preceded the pic with Ladd Lyon, Lyda Sue and Garfield Swift heading the Roxyettes Revue. A military guard of honor presented the colors, then the newsreel went on after which 'TITA' made its bow. Audience was wild in its acclaim of Kate Smith, home town girl, when she sang 'God Bless America.'

After the pic was over spotlight tried to pick off Irving Berlin, who walked modestly into the theatre during the Roxyette number and took a seat in back of the house. Berlin was finally persuaded to bask for a few moments in the spotlight. His appearance in the 'TITA' sequence on the screen brought forth the noisiest demonstration of the evening.

MANY NOTABLES PRESENT

Not since the opening night of the stage version of 'This Is the Army' has there been such a gathering of the great and distinguished. Among those who attended were: Mrs. James Doolittle, Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, who were also on the First Nighters Committee. Patron's list which was headed by Mrs. Roosevelt also included, Bernard M. Baruch, Mr. and Mrs. George Creel, Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen T. Early, Honorable and Mrs. James V. Forrestal, William M. Jeffers, Jesse Jones, Admiral Ernest J. King, Hon. and Mrs. Frank Knox, Charles Michelson, Donald M. Watson, Mrs. Leland Harrison and others.

Advance campaign, which followed pattern of New York premiere was directed by Charles Einfeld and Mort Blumenstock with Frank LaFace carrying out local details. Newspapers, radio and merchants assisted.

20th Plans Heavy Campaign of Advertising

Daily newspapers of the United States will be used for one-third to one-half page space a month to promote 20th-Fox releases during the next year; space in fan and national magazines and trade papers will be greatly increased. This information was conveyed yesterday to delegates of western regional sales meet of the company by Hal Horne, advertising and publicity director of the organization.

In line with new pre-selling of product procedure—which will be possible because of time element between completion of production and release—greater outlay for advertising will be possible. In addition to its own advertising, and cooperation with key first runs on participating basis for openings and holdovers, special department has been established by Horne for promotion of product when latter hits the subsequent runs and smaller communities. In support of this, special field exploitation department for the subsequents will augment the regular exploiteers for the first runs. This will necessitate expansion of the field hypo staff, Horne stated.

Greater exploitation down through subsequent runs will result in synchronizing sales efforts with the field men so that maximum number of customers are reached through individual campaigns. In addition, special mat and feature services will be utilized for weeklies, foreign weeklies and the Negro press, and national tieup bureau will secure commercial tieups on individual personalities and pictures throughout the year, Horne added. In addition, separate advertising and exploitation department and staff will be set up for the short subject department, including March of Time.

Dinehart's 'Ten Percent'

Alan Dinehart finished yesterday in Columbia's 'Tropicana' and starts today in 'Ten Percent Woman.'

ZANUCK PROMISES NEW FACES FOR NEW YEAR PIX

At the afternoon session of the 20th-Fox sales meet yesterday Darryl Zanuck gave a brief talk on production, referring to the obvious inroads of the war on production and studio manpower, but declared that the company had never before been in as strong a position as presently. He traced star development, and promised that new faces would flash from the 20th-Fox banner for the box offices. He pointed out the valuable story properties in hand was pursuance of company policy to obtain the best play and novel properties that would lend themselves to expensive pictures of roadshow calibre. Zanuck then outlined production plans for 'One World,' 'Wilson,' and 'Purple Heart,' which he will personally produce, and closed with thanks to the sales organization for its record-breaking job this year.

Joseph M. Schenck followed with congrats to the sales force for hanging up greatest job in history of the company. He referred to the heavy increase in production costs, but regardless of that fact, 20th-Fox had planned the largest group of big pictures in its career. Schenck paid tribute to distribution vice prez Connors on establishment of new records in all departments, in addition to his development of organization manpower which resulted in promotion of William Kupper from the ranks to post of general sales manager.

President Spyros Skouras closed the afternoon session with disclosure of the heavy financial obligation of product outlay this year, which is 50% more than last season. Skouras pointed out that today is the time to plan and secure the company's position for the post-war period.

Skouras pointed out that the demand for big pictures only was being met by the next season product. He dedicated the company to assist in developing the greatest possible strength of theatres generally for mutual benefit.

At the opening of the after luncheon gathering, Joseph Moskowitz, Fred Metzer, Harry Brand, and Lou Schreiber were introduced and took bows.

Femmes March On

Femme adsales managers of 20th-Fox — comprising 15 in various branches who were promoted to those posts since the first of the year—have made record increase in business over the same period of the year previous in their individual exchanges.

charge of world distribution for the organization.

Connors pointed out that the 39 releases would all carry A budgets greatly increasing overall porduction costs of the company, as B product has been eliminated in the studio plans. In view of this, he impressed on the sales delegates that they would have the strongest lineup of box office product in the company's history.

Darryl Zanuck will personally produce two pictures; film drama based on the life of Woodrow Wilson carrying title of 'Wilson,' and adaptation of Wendell Willkie's 'One World.' At this point, it is anticipated by 20th-Fox execs that both 'Song of Bernadette' and 'Keys of the Kingdom' will rate roadshow presentation.

Other dramatic features listed by Connors include: Ernst Lubitsch's 'Heaven Can Wait' and 'All-Out-Arlene,' 'Jane Eyre,' 'Rickenbacker, Story of an American,' 'Guadalcanal Diary,' 'Happy Land,' 'Tampico,' 'Buffalo Bill,' 'Lifeboat,' 'The Lodger,' 'Eve of St. Mark,' 'Home in Indiana,' 'Army Wife,' 'The Sullivans,' 'Torpedo Squadron 8,' 'Command Performance U. S. A.,' 'Bomber's Moon,' 'Holy Matrimony,' 'Claudia,' 'Roger Touhy — Gangster,' 'Purple Heart,' and 'Paris After Dark.' Virtually half of the dramatic features listed are on various war phases.

Total of nine Technicolored filmusicals will be turned out for the 1943-44 program. List includes: 'Pin Up Girl,' 'Greenwich Village,' 'Moment for Music,' 'Where Do We Go From Here,' 'Sweet Rosie O'Grady,' 'Wintertime,' 'The Gang's All Here,' 'State Fair,' and 'Mexico City.'

O'Loghlin's Death Saddens 20th-Fox Sales Meet

Disclosure of James P. O'Loghlin's death yesterday morning at Montreal put damper on the 20th-Fox sales meet. William Gehring, who originally hired O'Loghlin for 20th-Fox nearly 20 years ago, made the announcement at the morning session, and asked for one minute of silent prayer from the delegates.

O'Loghlin, 55, passed away after a two months illness. He was promoted to post of general sales manager for Canada three weeks ago after serving as Dominion district manager for 18 years. Deceased was a pioneer in Canadian film distribution, having been with Pathe (Specialty Film Import) and Regal Films, as general manager in each instance before joining Fox. He had been ill for the past two months, and was given unlimited leave of absence a few weeks ago to recuperate. Three daughters, one son and a brother survive.

David Loew Sets Up New Picture Finance Biz

David L. Loew, who with Arthur Lyons will produce as Producing Artists, Inc., yesterday opened offices in California Bank Bldg. in Beverly Hills to handle secondary financing of motion pictures.

Project calls for Loew to finance stars, directors and producers with proper qualifications in independent film ventures, with Loew contacting primary financing and handling secondary money personally, as well as assisting with release negotiations.

Financing enterprise is to be entirely separate from Producing Artists, Inc., and will be operated by Loew personally, without partnership of any kind, either direct or indirect.

PROTEST BLANKET EXEMPTIONS

Conference of Studio Unions, representing approximately 10,000 film workers, yesterday sent out a call for an immediate meeting of the industry's Labor-Management Committee to take up question of exemptions under the War Manpower Commission's 48-hour week program. Letters protesting any blanket exemption for Unioneers without individual crafts being consulted are being sent to William Hopkins, regional director of the WMC at San Francisco, Producer representatives and local WMC officials.

Conference also instructed Prexy Herbert Sorrell, delegate to the L-M Committee, to take a position against blanket exemptions unless they are previously approved by unions affiliated with the organization. Conference delegates said they were getting on record now so that exemptions would not be made without their knowledge.

The independent guilds Advisory Council, also has gone on record as opposing any 48-hour exemptions without approval of crafts affected and have instructed their L-M delegate, Mary C. McCall, Jr., prexy of the Screen Writers Guild, to take that position at the first meeting of the committee. The two groups represent nearly 15,000 workers.

The Conference also received a letter from the indie Advisory Council asking its support in urging the WMC to establish a central office to handle industry problems. It was pointed out that five different offices in widely separated districts of the county now handle these matters, often making it necessary for workers to drive 20 or 25 miles.

De Mille's 62nd Anni Brings Hi Jinks On 'Wassell' Set

Big doin's yesterday on set of Paramount's 'The Story of Dr. Wassell,' when Cecil B. De Mille, director-producer, was feted on his 62nd birthday.

Father Time, with scythe, ear-trumpet, sheet and long white beard was there as C. B.'s first fan, and Signe Hasso presented director with huge cake bearing 100 candles.

Said Miss Hasso, for all to hear and marvel at, over the loud-speaker, 'It is well known that you have been here since 1776, Mr. De Mille, so we weren't quite sure how old you were.'

Croaked Father Time, in person of Renny McEvoy, 'I saw my first De Mille picture when I was knee-high to a grasshopper.'

Returned De Mille . . . 'I suspect I am sometimes hard to get along with. If I have said anything or done anything that may have seemed harsh, well, I hereby apologize—temporarily.'

versions did not have. As the plot developed, the accompanying opera sequences also grew in importance almost equal to the dramatic narrative. The characters, principal and subordinate, were given a pattern of sound and plausible behavior, adding greatly to the reality and suspense and the dreadful denouement in the catacombs beneath the Paris Opera house. It is here that the maniacal violinist entraps the young singer for a time after he showers the heavy chandelier upon the theatre audience as a climax to his several murders.

Nelson Eddy, wearing a black wig, has plenty of range for his baritone delivery, in solo and in duet with Miss Foster. Handling his assignment splendidly, he offers a normal romantic interest in the young singer, in contrast to the unbalanced devotion of the murderous 'phantom,' and the well enacted rivalry of Edgar Barrier in the part of the Surete operator who is hunting down the killer of the theatre cloisters.

Claude Rains intelligently assumes the character of the mad violinist whose homicidal tendency is unleashed when he believes his concerto has been stolen by a music publisher, and imprints a haunting performance, by turn tender and terrifying.

Jane Farrar capitally sings the role of the jealous Biancarolli, prima donna. Splendidly performed also are the parts carried by J. Edward Bromberg, Fritz Feld, Frank Puglia, Steven Geray, Fritz Leiber (as Lizst) and Leo Carrillo, with many others well cast in lesser parts.

Arthur Lubin adds a brilliant chapter to his directorial credits, telling his story with dramatic fire and pace, guiding his characters unerringly, combining his narrative and musical elements effectively and showing versatility over his previous comedy assignments with Abbott and Costello and lighter material.

Hal Mohr and W. Howard Greene get magnificent results with the Technicolor cameras, used in striking combination with the color schemes and decor arranged in symphonic patterns which are never permitted to go garish by the art directors, John B. Goodman and Alexander Golitzen. Vera West's costumes are notable.

One of the 'Phantom's' foremost credits for maintaining top calibre goes to Edward Ward who arranged the musical score and directed it. He composed the refrain, 'Lullaby of the Bells,' which is hauntingly reprised, and worked with George Waggner to create the outstanding operatic selections which give the picture its distinctive tone. William Von Wymetal and Lester Horton staged the operatic sequences, and William Tyroler directed the chorals. Extraordinary fine quality of sound is achieved by Sound Director Bernard B. Brown.

'GONE' GROSS IN U. S. REACHES $31,000,000

'Gone With the Wind' grossed $1,000,000 during its fourth year of exhibition just completed, according to Metro, which released the David O. Selznick picture. This brings total domestic gross to $31,000,000, with close to 60,000,000 paid admissions in four-year period.

Studio reports in foreign market 'Gone' shattered all records in length of run and grosses, picture now in its fourth year of continuous exhibition at Ritz Theatre, London.

According to Metro figures, first road show engagements played to 25,362,700 persons; second release hit 24,065,279 patrons; third drew 10,500,000. Studio plans to shelve film end of the month, and keep it there for another year before giving it is fourth release. Film still has many world markets which haven't seen it due to war.

NY LEGIT OPENING

RUN LITTLE CHILLUN

New York, Aug. 15.—'Run Little Chillun' was revived at the Hudson Friday night, the management taking a chance at opening the colored show during the year's hottest period. Although well done, indications are that it will have limited appeal. About 50% favorable press comments may help.

Clarence Muse was brought from the Coast to stage the show, as he did out there during War Production Administration. The performance is little changed from that seen here 10 years ago when it fared moderately. The Hal Johnson choir performance is the main lure.

Big scenes are the two colored revival meetings, one approaching the frenzy of a religious orgy and the other a more extended church session with the congregation getting religion in spades.

Caleb Peterson, who was in the film version of 'Stage Door Canteen,' is very good as the backsliding hero, with Edna Mai Harris from coast

THERE'LL be no housing shortage for members of 20th-Fox's 'The Sullivans' company when they arrive in Santa Rosa, Calif., to spend a number of weeks there for location scenes for the pic. Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Two lovers in a garden long ago
Are whispering where sunkist roses blow.
He pours sweet nothings in her pearly ear,
The words a star-eyed damsel loves to hear.
And as the sound track registers their sighs
A bombing plane goes roaring through the skies.
Two lovers watch the plane with grief and pain—
They have to play their loving scene again.

Stage drama grows a bit high in the vugarities of diction and plot but radio reverts to the nostalgic days when virtue prevailed and righteousness triumphed over phenagling just before the final curtain. CBS is reviving one of your grandpop's favorite tear-jerkers, 'The Villain Still Pursued Her.' There were villains then, even as today, and they pursued the gal past the crossroads and beyond the old mill but were always foiled in the last act, just as they were about to carry out their wicked intentions. Nowadays the villain catches up with the blonde in the first scene, and the show goes on from there.

Now we have motorized art. In the simpler days the guardians of the law walked along the curb with elongated crayons, plastering hieroglyphs on tires of motor cars which had lingered beyond the appointed time in Hollywood blvd. Now art and mechanics form a new hook-up. John Law rides on a specially-built motorcycle, and in his right hand he carries a three-foot non-explosive bazooka on the end of which is attached a crayon. Whizzing along the street, John can leave his mark on hundreds of tires, whereas he could place the brand of Cain on less than five in the old hoofing days. It saves shoe leather but it burns up gas—and motorists.

Claudia

(Comedy)

20th-Fox prouuction. Features Dorothy McGuire, Robert Young, Ina Claire. Supporting cast: Reginald Gardiner, Olga Baclanova, Jean Howard, Frank Tweddell, Elsa Janssen, John Royce, Frank Fenton, Ferdinand Munier, Winifred Harris, Jessie Grayson. Produced by William Perlberg. Directed by Edmund Goulding. Adapted to screen by Morrie Ryskind. From the play by Rose Franken. As produced for stage by John Golden. Music, Alfred Newman. Photography, Leon Shamroy. Art direction, James Basevi and Albert Hogsett. Set decorations, Thomas Little; associate, Paul S. Fox. Film editor, Robert Simpson. Costumes, Rene Hubert. Special photographic effects, Fred Sersen. Song by Alfred Newman and Charles Henderson. Tradeshown in Los Angeles, Aug. 14, 1943. Running time: 90 MINS.

'Claudia' offers one of the most fascinating character probings the screen has undertaken, and so provocatively is it's heroine presented that the production has every chance of competing on even terms with the more prosperous war dramas, musicals and so-called escapist entertainment of the day.

The film, with several of the principals from the stage play, is more effective than the latter. Like its Broadway version, the Rose Franken show, exceptionally adapted by Morris Ryskind, dwells first with comic emphasis on the naive young bride to whom the commonplaces of marriage and sex and birth and neighborly relationships all come with astonishing impact, then runs through increasing pathos to sharp and serious drama. The perplexed young husband, the girl's mother, upon whom she has an inordinant independence, and other characters are still interesting human beings.

Dorothy McGuire undeniably makes the stellar grade in a superb performance as her film bow. So indelible is the enactment that it is difficult to think that anyone else might have carried the exacting title role. She created it on the stage and plays it to the life; an impulsive, undisciplined, shallow-pated adolescent bride whose erratic behavior offers much amusing comedy with interludes of touching anguish.

Robert Young is just the man for the husband, tolerant, at times vastly patient, again furious at his wife's vagaries. Ina Claire plays the mother with the correct emphasis at every turn. Reginald Gardiner is excellent as the British author who lives next door and attempts to prove that he has no hesitancy in playing with other men's wives. Olga Baclanova is the tempestuous opera star who tries to buy Young's farm home from the wife at enormous profit. Frank Tweddell and Elsa Janssen are the stand-by servant couple.

Edmund Goulding understands that 'Claudia' is essentially a woman's play and handles his assignment accordingly, intelligently holding an unstable main character from flying apart in her various moods and exhibitions, and telling the story of Claudia's development with keen insight and emotional power.

William Perlberg puts his particular brand of production care and excellence upon the offering and gets effective contribution from every technical department to turn out a choice piece of top grade entertainment. Leon Shamroy's photography, Alfred Newman's music and the art work by James Basedi and Albert Hogsett are especially notable.

Sleepy Lagoon

(Comedy-Drama With Songs)

Republic production. Stars Judy Canova. Features Dennis Day. Supporting cast: Ruth Donnelly, Joe Sawyer, Ernest Truex, Douglas Fowley, Will Wright, Herbert Corthell, Ellen Lowe, Forrest Taylor, Kitty McHugh, Eddie Chandler, Jack Raymond, Margaret Reid. Director, Joseph Santley. Producer, Albert J. Cohen. Screenplay, Frank Gill, Jr., George Carlton Brown. Based on original by Prescott Chaplin. Photogarphy, Bud Thackery. Musical director, Walter Scharf. Music and lyrics, Ned Washington, Phil Ohman. Song, 'Sleep Lagoon,' Eric Coates, Jack Lawrence. Editor, Richard Van Enger. Art director, Russell Kimball. Sets, Otto Siegel. Wardrobe, Adele Palmer. Previewed in Hollywood, Aug. 15, 1943. Running time: 65 MINS.

Followers of Judy Canova will feel they've gotten their money's worth with this final picture under singing star's Republic contract. It's strictly corn, first to last, type the sticks goes for, but it's of doubtful appeal for metropolitan audiences. Story has been tailored to fit the Canova personality, and in this respect writers have been successful. Albert J. Cohen surrounding star with plenty of production values.

Title of Hit Parade song of couple seasons ago has been used as basis for story, Sleepy Lagoon in this case being name of small city where Judy operates a coffee shop. Judy is running for mayor, as picture opens, with women of town behind her, and she wins hands down.

With cocktail bars, dance emporiums and what-have-you closed to protect its fair citizenry, Judy decides to re-open an old amusement park and calls in her favorite uncle, Ernest Truex, whom she believes to be a big carnival man, to run it. Truex, actually a henchman for The Brain, racketeer played by Douglas Fowley, arrives with his boss and park is opened to great fanfare, but with a gambling hall in the Tunnel of Love. It's Fowley's idea to take the populace of Sleepy Lagoon, and Truex is forced to string along by his boss, who has plenty on him.

This premise offers an opportunity for a wealth of type of action Canova fans go for and a lot of comedy between Judy and Dennis Day, and Judy and Joe Sawyer. Judy and Sawyer warble a comedy duet which more than gets by, the sequence where they're in the Chamber of Horrors worth plenty of laughs. Judy sings couple of solo numbers, too, as does Dennis Day, who plays Launcelot Hillie, an earnest young crackpot of a doctor, and also appears in one sequence as Dennis Day, the radio star. It's Day, as Launcelot, Judy's cautious suitor, who sings title song.

Plot goes to town when Judy sets

Irwin Sparks Plays For Servicemen at Naval Aid Playtime

There's a variety of divertissement on view at the Playtime theatre, where Naval Aid Auxiliary is presenting a series of five playlets by the Brentwood Players with the supplemental aid of solo specialties. By and large, the enterprise is the English colony's contribution to two worthy projects—free entertainment for servicemen and funds for Naval Aid.

Best of the plays is Noel Coward's 'Fumed Oak,' the only piece rating two scenes. It's the old story of the brow-beaten husband finally turning on his tormentors but given a fresh, crisp going-over by Charles Irwin, longtime one of the better emcees. When he lets go on the nagging wife, mother-in-law and spoiled brat and tells them off it's the high spot of the evening. The studio moguls who sat in with gold braid and the usual run of premiere regulars must have been sufficiently impressed with his and other performances to give their agents a jingle. If this be showcasing in addition to the charitable adjunct, then there's much to be gained by those who are giving their services free.

Just to name a few of Play Time's other standouts, there's Eva Gabor, pert, talented and easy on the orbs; Henry Morgan, who gave Saroyan's 'Hello Out There' a sound and lusty delineation; Alan Carney and Wally Brown, a pair of comics with a breezy line or patter (a bit rough at times for that class audience); Philip Merivale and Gladys Cooper, a pair of finished performers, and Beulah Bondi, always solid on the comedy side. There are also a few youngsters who show promise of being heard from.

Opening ran to midnight which means Director James Whale must do some hacking. Solos by Philip Dorn and John Abbott are none too forte and to fill stage waits they may well call on Irwin to spin some of his English tales that have convulsed dinner parties around here for years. Running time gets a trim automatically as Deanna Durbin and John Charles Thomas were strictly premiere attractions. Staging is first rate and Whale was hauled out of the wings to take a bow for his fine direction of the changing moods of the various turns.

Enterprise is gratis all the way. Half of the house is reserved for ducat buyers, the remaining pews being turned over to USO for servicemen. It is a worthy project and should be supported. For what it has to offer it's a good buy in the theatre.

with Robert Arden

The military picture looks very promising indeed. The political situation, however, still is somewhat obscured. Confidential reports indicate that the Nazis are readying an air fleet and especially trained crews for a last and desperate attack on the British Isles, especially at the various ports of embarkation for the potential invasion forces. This move, win, lose or draw, will be the final effort of the Nazi regime, and I am fairly confident that the Quebec conference will deal with this aspect. The participation of Anthony Eden and Cordell Hull indicates definitely that political problems will occupy the greater part of the agenda at the conference.

Frisco Nitery Talent Raised to Offset 20% Tax Gouge

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—American Guild of Variety Artists local here has raised the pay scales for nitery entertainers from 10 to 15 per cent, to offset, to an extent, the 20 per cent federal payroll deduction.

Increases will have little present effect, however, since virtually all San Francisco entertainers are receiving more than the old schedules, because of the shortage of talent.

The old minima to which the 10 to 15 per cent boosts will be added are $65 for 'A' night clubs, $55 for 'B,' $45 for 'C,' and $40 for 'D.' Chorines were formerly paid $40 in 'A' spots and $36 in 'B.'

The new scales will be generally in effect by the end of the month.

WMC Socks Exchanges, Theatres in New Non-Deferable List

deferment from military service on any grounds — occupational or dependency.

According to Manpower chief, Paul V. McNutt, 'The time has come when every worker must justify himself in terms of his contribution to the war effort.'

On the new list of 'critical' jobs are four broadcasting classifications—broadcast mechanics, radio communications technicians, receiver testers—radio and Radar, and radio engineers. This list, according to McNutt, is 'to search out particular skills and to see that they are so employed as to speed victory, whether their employment is in industry or military services.'

Draft boards have been instructed to give 'special consideration' to men doing any of the 149 jobs on the list, provided they are using their skill 'in war-useful jobs.' If they are not in 'war-useful jobs' by October, they lose all claim to consideration for deferment. Men to fill these jobs may be hired only through referal from uses.

The new list of non-deferables includes all employees of amusement ticket agencies, dance, music, theatrical and art studios and schools, night clubs, music stores.

Non-deferable jobs, regardless of the business in which they are performed, include advance and publicity men, barkers, booking agents (apparently including exchange and circuit bookers) charmen and cleaners, doormen, elevator operators, errand boys, literary and actors' agents, managing agents (theatrical and film), porters, ticket takers, ushers and valets.

'In addition to the activities and occupations set forth above,' said War Manpower Commissioner Puckisly, 'the status of idleness is to be treated as a non-deferrable activity.' (Habitual idlers are the target here, rather than persons whose living involves periodic unemployment.) Expansion of this list is intended to encourage the transfer of men in these jobs to essential work—especially fathers, who will, if they fail to transfer from non-deferable jobs, be ineligible for deferment on dependency grounds.

Issuance of the critical list, according to WMC officials, should not affect the standing of the earlier 'essential' lists, which include picture production. They were forced to admit, however, that determination of essentiality, despite all their lists, is still up to the local boards, and they cannot guarantee that local boards will take any of their lists seriously.

Recourse is provided in the event that workers deemed essential by Washington are refused deferment consideration by local boards. Appeals have a fair chance of being upheld, unless the employer has failed to make every effort to schedule replacements for his key men.

Picture people here were not greatly bothered by the failure to include industry jobs in the critical list, even though they had been breaking their necks to get cameramen, sound technicians, film editors, cutters and directors on the roster.

WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—All of show biz will have its eye on Capitol Hill next month when Congress returns from fishing and grass-root testing. Seldom has there been a session with its attention so much on pictures, radio and other angles of amusement.

First and foremost is the new and stiffer tax bill. Reported as under consideration by the law-makers is a heavier admissions tax, on the ground that people have plenty of money to spend for their amusements and will not mind paying a couple of extra pennies to Uncle Sam.

Second, and pretty well known by now, are the bills to rewrite the Federal Communications Act, clipping the FCC of some of its powers over commercial radio. Contrary to the general impression, however, the leadership in both Houses which is determined to amend the act, is not a particular friend of the networks. On the contrary, such people as Senator Burton K. Wheeler, co-author of the White-Wheeler Act, are definitely anti-monopoly minded and look askance at some chain operations.

Third is the likelihood of loud demands on Capitol Hill for the Justice Department to move for complete divorcement between production and exhibition of pix. It is not considered probable that the two bills in Congress—one for divorcement; the other for an end to block booking and blind selling—will go anywhere. This will not, however, prevent legislators from airing complaints and getting a wide audience.

Of course, such pending measures as the Wheeler bill to prevent a father draft, are also of great interest to the entertainment industry.

JUMPS INTO STORY

CHALK this one up to a gallant, young exponent of show business.

Lieut. James Hanley, writer attached to the Army studio at Astoria, L. I., is a youngster who came into the service from pictures. Understand he worked a while for Walt Disney.

He was assigned to Fort Benning to do some scenarios on paratroops for service productions. Hanley tried his hand for a few days and then reported to the commanding officer:

'I can't put realism into these things, until I get the feel of paratrooping. I would like to qualify as a paratrooper, sir, and make the required jumps.'

Hanley did, and is now entitled to wear paratroop insignia. And the scenarios are coming along fine.

ONE ADMISH IN ITALY

YOU may have known that some Fascist groups in Italy enjoyed reduced rates at motion picture theatres. Well, it's all over now. Rome Radio announced recently that theatres had suspended special rates to members of 'Dopolavoro,' which was the Eytie equivalent to the Nazi 'Strength Through Joy' movement. . . . Egyptian Government, looking around for new sources of revenue, has slapped stiff increases on its admissions taxes for theatres, race courses, and other places of amusement. Increases are 20 to 25 percent. And the tax on winning pari-mutuel and lottery tickets is up from 10 to 15 percent. . . . Nazis claim 34 new plays were staged by the German theatre last month. . . .

ARMY is highly pleased with the two industry films scheduled to do right by the WACS. They are, of course, 20th-Fox's 'All Out Arlene,' said to be a sort of female Private Hargrove; and the MGM 'Women in Uniform' being scripted by Anita Loos. They are just what the Army needed to help along its recruiting campaign among the gals.

LEWIS' AMBISH

HERE'S a story never told before —why Bill Lewis, former CBS vice-prexy, resigned from OWI. There has been plenty of speculation, mainly along the lines that he was disappointed because it was Palmer Hoyt and not Lewis who moved into the vacancy created when Gardner 'Mike' Cowles quit to go back to newspapering.

Real reason is that Lewis wanted to take over the OWI overseas radio bureau. He felt it needed proper coordinating along the lines of the job he had done with the domestic radio bureau.

Elmer Davis sounded out Robert Sherwood, director of the overseas branch, and came back to Lewis with a flat 'No.'

Wonder if Davis regrets the two-letter word, following that '—little, moronic king—' episode which created such a furore.

KEEP EYE ON OWI

NOW that Elmer Davis is back from North Africa, look for some interesting developments in OWI. . . . Palmer Hoyt, Jr., son of the chief of the OWI Domestic branch, celebrated a 20th birthday here the other day. . . . Capt. and Mrs. Lee Tracy, now anchored in this town, are doing some heavy entertaining for army and civilian brass hats these days. Tracy came east a couple of months back, to report on operations of a military police unit he headed at a Jap internment camp. He's been here ever since.

THAT Staff Sgt. Lew Christensen at Camp Blanding, Fla., is the Christensen who formerly danced with Zorina in pictures. You will recall he was one of the founders of the American ballet and also shook a toe with the met in New York. . . . You remember that some of Gen. MacArthur's men have occupied the Tobriand Islands, north of the Eastern point of New Guinea. Most sensational feature of the occupation from the native viewpoint is a hot Army jazz band. Names of the musicians have not reached Washington, but they are said to be kings of the islands.

Autonomy Plan for Extras Goes to Board Tonight

Detailed plans for separation of the Class A and Class B memberships of the Screen Actors Guild will be handed to the SAG Board of Directors tonight for its approval prior to being submitted to B members at the annual meeting Sept. 19. Proposal is said to call for issuance of a sub-charter by SAG, giving the extras the right to select their own officers, hire their own employes, collect their dues, negotiate their own wage deals, etc.

It is probable that separate offices or headquarters will be established for the two groups if the proposal is accepted by the B members and approval by the Board. The SAG, however, will retain a veto power, in order to protect its union jurisdiction over the acting fields in motion pictures. Just how far this veto power will extend is not known at this time.

It is understood SAG also is setting up a voting procedure for the new union which would prevent any individual or clique from grabbing control of the organization. To further forestall such a move, Guild officials have announced funds to be turned over to the new union will be issued over a period of time instead of being handed over in a lump sum.

Question of representation for the new union to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent body of the SAG, is another question that must be settled. The SAG voluntarily accepted reduced representation in the AAAA in order to eliminate any idea group was trying to control other branches, including Equity and the American Federation Radio Artists.

If plan is approved by the Board tonight, it will be submitted to B members Sept. 19 and a ballot on its acceptance will be taken by mail immediately after the meeting.

WMCA Sale Injunction Sought by Flamm Against Noble

New York, Aug. 15.—Motion for temporary injunction to restrain Edward J. Noble, chairman of the Life Savers Corp., from disposing of Station WMCA during pendency of suit brought by Donald Flamm, the station's former owner, was held under reserved decision by Justice David Peck of the New York Supreme Court after hearing arguments. Flamm as plaintiff seeks to rescind sale of the station to Noble.

Noble recently purchased the Blue Network, and under regulations of the Federal Communications Commission is required to dispose of WMCA. Flamm says he was forced to sell the station for $850,000, and told the court that he was an 'unwilling' seller, a charge which Noble denied in court.

MR. SWOON BOWL DEBUT SUPER; WHAT KIDS WANT

By GEORGE PHAIR

It all depends on your age and gender. To femmes of fifteen, or thereabout, Frankie Sinatra was the darlingest songbird ever heard in Hollywood Bowl, but to males of voting age he was just another crooner, crooning in the wrong neighborhood. Most of the 10,000 customers who filled the bowl to its wartime capacity were adolescent Sinatriacs, ready to shriek, squeal, gurgle or giggle on the slightest provocation while their masculine escorts registered ennui and asked 'How does the guy get away with it?'

There was no swooning in the aisles, probably because the swooners had cooled off while Vladimir Bakaleinikoff and his symphonists struggled bravely but hopelessly to enamor a meadowful of jive addicts with square music under a harvest moon. There were sporadic squeals about 10 p.m. when the announcer bellowed that the Great Man was being whisked to the Bowl with all possible speed. Then another 15 minutes of waiting while the squealers leaped to their feet every time they saw a flashlight, thinking Mr. Swoon had arrived.

His entrance was strangely quiet. Two fellows in white coats and black pants walked out on the stage without an introduction. One of them, Doc Stoloff, drew his trusty baton and started swinging at the orchestra. The other, with his white coat fashioned on the zooty side, stopped behind the mike. Vast silence seemed to say: 'Well, well! So this is Frankie, himself!' His first song, 'Dancing In the Dark,' limped. It was interrupted by 24 newspaper photographers who exploded flashlights right under his nose, and in the offing were heard feminine giggles and masculine guffaws.

Flashlight barrage continued through 'It's Always You' and kept on while he warbled 'Old Man River,' which he prefaced by announcing, modestly enough, that he was not going to sing like Paul Robeson and other noted songsters. 'I am not in their class,' he said coyly. 'Not yet.'

By that time Frankie's tonsils had warmed up. When he cut loose with 'Night and Day' he opened his bag of tricks and great was the gurgling and cooing among his idolators, each of whom knew that he was singing directly at HER. He sang intimately, personally, like a guy parked with his gal in Lovers Lane, and the Man in the Moon seemed to wear a big round smile as he ogled over the trees in left field. The voice grew more intimate in 'You'll Never Know,' and when he exuded 'I Hear Music When I Look at You' there were girlish shrieks such as 'Ain't he precious,' punctuated by basso profundo remarks of a derogatory nature, referring to a disagreeable odor although the surrounding gardens were sweet with the aroma of night-blooming jasmine.

Frankie wound up his concerto with an impish ballad, 'She's Funny That Way,' and a heart-to-heart talk with his bobby-sox public on the happy merging of swoonism with classicism in the art of music.

As he was whisked away by a flock of traffic cops there was a final chorus of gurgles, mingled with masculine sounds redolent of night-blooming raspberry.

AGVA Spotting Acts For Camp Shows In Seattle Area

Seattle, Aug. 15.—With vaude and variety acts now able to get ten weeks or more of booking in the Pacific Northwest, chores of Duke Westcott, local representative of the American Guild of Variety Artists, have materially increased. This along with numerous calls for free work through various governmental and charity channels, keeps Duke hopping but doesn't keep him from showing up at the local Marine Hospital each Tuesday night along with a number of acts to entertain wounded and disabled service men at the hospital.

USO has no budget or facilities to entertain these men, and AGVA has willingly taken up the task of furnishing weekly shows to cheer the wounded and convalescents, with local and visiting acts gladly cooperating. Often such acts hop to the hospital between shows and such emergencies create strange scheduling. Recently the Mills Bros. quartet was on first and other acts were hesitant to follow, but the audience response was so good that such an unusual occurrence was taken in stride.

AGVA has also been one of the major contributors, along with the Musicians Union, to the daily programs in Victory Square.

Judy plays her customary self, and Dennis Day likewise enacts his familiar character. Ruth Donnelly is owner of a radio station who backs Judy for mayor and further backs her during her more than active administration, contributing her usual good job, and Joe Sawyer is in for considerable footage as Fowley's dumb strongarm man. Parts in general are well played. Joseph Santley's direction is swift-paced and takes advantage of situations which were worked out in screenplay by Frank Gill, Jr., and George Carlton Brown. Ned Washington and Phil Ohman wrote melodious songs, apart from title number, which was co-authored by Eric Coates and Jack Lawrence. Walter Scharf handled musical direction and Russell Kimball did a rather elaborate job of art work.

Sheehan Will Take Script East for OK Of Rickenbacker

Script for 'Rickenbacker: The Story of an American' will be completed about Sept. 1 and Winfield Sheehan, who will produce picture for 20th-Fox, takes screenplay east for Capt. Rickenbacker's approval. Sheehan will huddle with Edwin Burke, one of script's writers, in New York on any changes required.

Sheehan had been holding off until Capt. Rickenbacker's return from Russia for completion of script, thinking to incorporate any additional material Rickenbacker might have to offer, so story would be brought up to date. Content of Rickenbacker's trip to Russia as War Secretary Stimson's personal emissary must remain strictly confidential, however, so Sheehan has given go-signal to his writers here to wrap up screenplay.

Sets for picture already are in construction stage, and both a star and director are to be announced shortly for film.

INDIES WIN SEEN IN FITE ON DECREE

Washington, Aug. 16.—Complaining bitterly about current distribution practices—particularly blocks-of-five booking, high percentage deals and trade showings—many exhibitors have written the Department of Justice suggesting that the New York consent decree be scrapped. This information was disclosed today by Tom C. Clark, assistant attorney general in charge of the anti-trust division.

'Most of them don't mention theatre divorcement, either,' said Clark. 'You try to figure it out. Looks to me like they'd like to go back to the good old days—with everybody for himself.' Clark is getting from 15 to 20 letters daily from exhibitors, each outlining objections to present distribution practices. He doesn't

350 SINGERS QUIT EXTRA RANKS TO JOIN A JUNIORS

Move by top film extras to switch their Class B memberships in the Screen Actors Guild to Class A Juniors was seen yesterday when it was disclosed SAG Board of Directors had approved change in classification for approximately 350 singers. As Board met to consider separate union setup for extras, following announcement was made on switch of singers:

'Action resulted from a petition presented to the Board, in which the singers stated that they felt they had a closer professional identity with bit players than with extras, since their work involves the learning and delivering of lines, which in their case are sung rather than spoken. LEGIT OPENING

MY DEAR PUBLIC

Detroit, Aug. 16.—Irving Caesar's 'My Dear Public' still is in the rough stage of being half-way between a revue and a musical comedy. Show, which ran past midnight at its open- at the Cass suffers from a superabundance of talent, an overload of music, (including at least four sock tunes) which are in its favor on making the grade when it hits Broadway in three weeks. However, plenty of work will be required to shuttle it down, transfer material out of the rich first act into the second half and bring up the story, at present

TINT OUTFIT BOOKED YR. AHEAD

With most of the major studios rushing in to get reservations for Technicolor tinting of features, situation has developed to point where bookings of Technicolor camera equipment and crews, and laboratory processing, are being lined up for late 1944.

Producers, during the past three years, have found that color photography has enhanced total gross values of pictures far in excess of extra costs on the camera and print ends; and on several occasions, moderate box office pictures have rolled up surprising grosses through Tech tinting.

Metro, 20th-Fox and Paramount are in the van as biggest customers of Technicolor this year with about 10 each planned, while Universal is finding color a valuable box office asset and holding commitments for one camera unit and corresponding BANDMEN are following the cinematic fortunes of four crooners, all former singers with name orchestras, and are making book on who'll emerge as marquee material. Frank Sinatra naturally is on the rail, bolstered by a buildup that is without parallel in recent years. But coming along fast are Vaughn Monroe, Perry Como and Dick Haymes. Metro is setting great store by Monroe and will groom him for stardom in his next picture. Como gets a big pitch by 20th-Fox when he plays opposite Betty Grable. Failing there, 20th will fall back on Haymes, who is under option to the Westwood studio. The Como fans, who claim he can 'sing the others out of town,' are playing him as the heavy favorite. Monroe also is well-backed and Metro thinks well enough of him to double his coin on the next picture. Just now Sinatra is cock o' the walk, but in the other camps they're beaming, 'Wait till our man comes to bat.' Place your bets now, men, on the 'Bobby Socks' derby.

SCREEN Actors Guild disclosed yesterday that a man had worked two or three weeks, one week under contract at Paramount, without a SAG card. Voluntary extra called Central Casting for a job, giving name of Lee DeSilva, who was out of the city. He was sent to Paramount, where he remained one week under contract. He later was given daily callbacks for another week or two. DeSilva returned to the city, called Central for work, and was sent to Paramount on interview. Casting officials insisted they already had one Lee DeSilva, and promptly dismissed the non-Guilder when DeSilva displayed his union card. Now extra organization is preparing demands that the SAG police studio sets more closely to determine that only Guilders are employed.

OFFICE of Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California is sending out copies of new California Industrial Welfare Commission code and regulations covering the amusement and recreation industries of the state, to all indie exhibs for study and posting. Regulations are the result of recent hearings of IWC, at which Jack Berman of ITO attended. Minimum wages are upped to 50c an hour—from 40c previously—on 40-hour week basis, with 55c minimum for any employe working less than 40 hours weekly. This applies particularly to ushers, cashiers and doormen of theatres. ITO is advising all exhibs to carefully study the order to conform to the new scales.

Acme Brewing Company and Mission Orange Juice bought out balconies of the Wiltern and Warners Downtown respectively. They turned the tickets over to USO and advertised for the service boys to come and get 'em, first come, first served.

submerged in the welter of color, music and personalities.

The story seems to concern Howard as the Zipper King who gets tangled up in show business through his wife, Shutta. It affords a romp for Howard, with the best comedy material in years, as he falls afoul a genius of the Orson Welles stamp (Brotherson), for God-knows-what-reason puts on a disappearing act and winds up as a discovery of his discovery. That evidently is the story with some incidental business of Miss Miller being in love with the genius, who comes to want success.

The strength of the production, which is plenty, rests in the strong cast, sound music, great hoofing by Tapps and the colorful chorus and its comedy. Sounding like sure fire hits are the tunes, 'Our Private Love Song,' 'I Love to Sing The Words' and 'May All Your Children Have Rhythm,' with a number of others on the catchy side.

Howard walks off with the honors with pat black-out scenes and one hilarious sketch, in which a pair of geniuses, a butcher and his pal, expound a plot with double talk, and another, in which he gets out of bed to sing, 'If You Want To Deal With Russia.' Tapps does three slick dances, Miss Miller and Shutta share a half dozen numbers to good advantage and the entire cast comes off with plenty of attention in the present over-long form.

It may have movie potentiality since the story often gives promise and it is bolstered with a great score and comedy which should line up on the story shortly.

Trádeshown in Los Angeles, Aug. 16, 1943. Running time: 85 MINS.

Parading 48 of its stars and top players, Warners crams a volume of diversion into the swiftly-paced collation of song, dance and novelty numbers which comprise 'Thank Your Lucky Stars' '85 minutes of sheer entertainment. Picture's distinction lies in the nature of the performances, which differ, generally, from the roles in which these stars ordinarily are seen—as if they had been called upon to perform impromptu. Customers who are personality fans especially, will be regaled, and the offering should find cordial welcome in almost any situation.

Headliners include Eddie Cantor, Humphrey Bogart, Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Errol Flynn, John Garfield, Jack Carson, Edward Everett Horton, Joan Leslie, Ida Lupino, Dennis Morgan, Hattie McDaniel, 'Spike' Jones with his City Slickers, Ann Sheridan, Dinah Shore, Alexis Smith and George Tobias. They appear in 15 numbers, mostly built around the songs by Arthur Schwartz and Frank Loesser, who exceed their own record and that of other cleffers for filmusicals with 12 compositions. Each of these numbers features one or more name presonalities advantageously with a unique display of talent.

The story thread ravels largely about Eddie Cantor, involving an impersonation of himself in backstage difficulties and relying for its comedy on Cantor kidding himself and his repute as a foremost showman and entertainer. Two studio producers, Edward Everett Horton and S. Z. Sakall, want to get Dinah Shore for a benefit performance without also having to take Cantor, whose protege she is. Eddie outsmarts them and insists on going along as chairman of the committee. This is a pain in the neck to the producers and RKO production. Stars Jean Arthur and John Wayne. Supporting cast: Charles Winninger, Phil Silvers, Mary Field, Don Costello, John Philliber, Grady Sutton, Grant Withers, Hans Conreid, Peggy Carroll, Ariel Heath, Sugar Geise, Joan Blair, Tom Fadden, Ed Waller, Nina Quartaro, Alex Melesh, Cy Kendall, Paul Scott, Charles D. Set decorations, Darrell Silvera and Al Fields. Gowns by Edward Stevenson. Edited by Theron Warth. Trade shown in Los Angeles, Aug. 16, 1943. Running time: 85 MINS.

Jean Arthur has established herself, together with many other fine demonstrations of thespian gifts, as the screen's most interesting lovemaker. Her scene on the steps with Joel McCrea in 'The More the Merrier' will not soon be forgotten. Her romantic ventures with John Wayne in RKO's 'A Lady Takes a Chance' are of the same kind. These tantalizing amours are strictly censorproof—at least, have been thus far —but are far more provocative than many long kisses and ardent embraces in their diffidence but determination. Also the Jean Arthur brand of screen love-making is exceedingly negotiable merchandise at the box office, and 'Lady Takes a Chance,' having this and numerous other entertainment merits, will fare very handsomely among the year's best comedies.

Miss Arthur is a distant worshiper of the 'west.' She goes on a conducted bus tour from New York to the coast, hoping to meet up with an equally romantic cowboy. When, at a rodeo, John Wayne is pitched from a bucking bronc into her lap, she knows she's met her man. From then on, he's a goner, fight as he will to hold to his single blessedness and the hit-and-run tactics with femmes to which he's accustomed. For a time—a precarious hour—she believes she's made a mistake in him. He 'insults' her with a logical mistake, and detests her when she steals a blanket off his pet horse during a desert trek, but comes to halter after she cooks for him in a motor inn and exercises other wiles which bring him to New York to snatch her bodily from three former suitors after she's run back home.

Miss Arthur brilliantly exploits this brand of comedy under the sympathetic direction of William A. Seiter. The star and Seiter are a happy and natural combination. John Wayne contributes his share of the amusement as the one-track minded

Hand in hand with the military pressure upon the Hitler regime goes a distinct deterioration of Hitler's power over occupied countries. Norway, potential invasion goal of Allied forces, was singled out by Hitler's Gestapo for particularly terroristic measures. The forthcoming official conference at Quebec is still the object of much speculation and is anticipated by well informed circles to become the birthplace of historic decisions. It still hasn't been contradicted that political decisions made at the Quebec conference will overshadow by far those of a military nature.

So This Is Washington

(Comedy)

RKO production. Stars Chester Lauck (Lum) and Norris Goff (Abner). Supporting cast: Alan Mowbray, Roger Clark, Mildred Coles, Sarah Padden, Minerva Urecal, Dan Duncan, Matt McHugh, Barbara Pepper. Produced by Ben Hersh. Directed by Raymond McCarey. Screenplay by Leonard Praskins and Roswell Rogers, from original story by Roswell Rogers and Edward James. Set decorations, Ben Berk. Music direction, Lud Gluskin. Edited by Duncan Mansfield. Tradeshown in Los Angeles, Aug. 16, 1943. Running time: 64 MINS.

Best of the Lum and Abner pictures, this sally of the crossroads Yankee store keepers to Washington to observe how the wheels of national government churn is a fine example of solid American humor, alive with laughter and shrewd commentary, for which both radio and their previous films have established a vast and ardent audience.

Ben Hersh, as producer, has smartly accelerated the pace of these comedies, and Ray McCarey turns in a polished and showmanly piece of ace direction to exploit every bit of drollery and characteristic Lum-and-Abnerism in the superior screen play by Leonard Praskins and Roswell Rogers, from an original by Roswell Rogers and Edward James.

The laconic storekeepers go to Washington, with a resounding village sendoff, to interest the government in something which Abner calls 'synthetic rubber.' They have a heck of a time finding room, finding a listener for their project, learn a great deal, in fine satiric vein, about Congressmen and other Washington dignitaries, and remain there for a time as capitol park bench sages, advising department heads et al on matters of grave and not-so-grave moment. National heroes, they return to their native haunts in dire trouble because little Abner has sustained a case of stubborn amnesia by getting a head bump during a demonstration of his 'synthetics.' Another bump cures him, and the boys are glad to be back again among their neighbors and customers.

Rooming situation in the capital is developed for a choice bit of antic comedy, into which Alan Mowbray is projected as a benevolent promoter of the inventive 'genius' of the 'common man.' Roger Clark is a reporter from Lum and Abner's home town and essays to help them get their invention aired, but helps mess things up through his romance with Mowbray's pretty secretary, Mildred Coles. Dan Duncan is a corker as the grandpappy who runs the L & A store during their absence. Barbara Pepper has a good bit as a taxi driver. Sarah Padden and Minerva Urecal handle their assignments well.

Lud Gluskin adds a very considerable merit to the show with his musical direction, made quite an element in this picture, and the technical chores in every department hold up fine quality of the offering which is headed to bring plenty of coin into the RKO coffers.

HERE'S a bit of good news for the gals who've been trying to get just the correct shoes to match that new gown. And this is from a source close to the horse's mouth. Powers-that-be are going to lift the ration restrictions on shoes about Nov. 1, I'm told. So next thing in order is buying frocks to match the new shoes. . . . Pays to be patriotic. At least, Donald Stuart thinks so. Red-headed character actor went over to Metro other day to give a pint to the blood bank. McLeod saw him and sez, 'That's the fellow I've been talking about for "The Canterville Ghost." What's his name?' Anyhow, Stuart was tossed at once into role of Sir Valentine in Oscar Wilde story. As to the blood, we haven't heard whether he gave it or not.

Barbara Hale won a role yesterday for which she had some 30,000,000 rivals. She plays part of Frank Sinatra's sweetheart in RKO's 'Higher and Higher.'

ELEVEN members of crew of the 'Memphis Belle,' flying fort, will be guests of Jack Warner at 'TITA' preem tonight. . . . Lupita Tovar will be mistress of ceremonies for the 'TITA' broadcast in Spanish to Latin America from Warners Hollywood theatre tonight. . . . Mordecai Gorelik, production designer, speaks on scene designing in Rembrandt Hall at Pomona college Thursday. . . . Margo back today from four-week p.a. tour. . . . Warners hosted Czechoslavakian ambassador to Washington, Col. Vladimir Hurban, his wife and a party of dignitaries yesterday. . . . Gus Schilling, Lee Trent and Betty Rowland did a jam-up job at the Hollywood Canteen Sunday night, with La Roland turning on plenty of 'heat.' . . . Ann Corio arrived from the east to do her eastern stint as the Sultan's Daughter.

If it's true it's the greatest story of the year: Sam Jaffe, now a producer as well as an agent, turned down two candidates which HIS agency sent for tests in 'The Sullivans.'

JOE E. LEWIS was guest of honor at a party given by Lew Wertheimer at the Savoy. . . . Jean Parker celebrated her (?) birthday with a dinner party at the Trocadero. . . . Joan Fontaine threw an informal cocktail party Sunday night at her home for Mitchell Leisen and members of the 'Frenchman's Creek' set. . . . General John J. Christmas, assistant chief of automotive division of the Army, will be luncheon guest, along with his party, today at Paramount. . . . Ann Sheridan will get out 5,000 special photos to adorn Xmas greetings for that many boys in service from Iredell county in North Carolina. . . . Lieut. Jesse Lasky, Jr., formerly stationed at Astoria, L. I., now is at Dayton, Ohio, training for overseas. . . . Lieut. (j.g.) Tom Frandsen, former radio announcer, here on furlough from his New Orleans base. . . . Mrs. Buck Jones has sold her Susanville, Calif., ranch, and will move to her Van Nuys ranch home.

Fly Tells Broadcasters Be Calm, Their Licenses Are Safe

Washington, Aug. 16. — Chairman James Fly of Federal Communications Commission said today that as long as he is in office the FCC will not discontinue 'watching broadcasting to our foreign-born population in the enemy's own language.' He said this surveillance is 'an undeviating duty to which we shall undeviatingly devote ourselves during the war.' Fly said it appears that charges of fear and terrorism in the industry seem to have sprung from exaggerated description of this work. 'Everyone in the industry knows that the average broadcaster has no worry over the continuity of his license,' he said assuringly.

Fly said that he has been head of FCC for four years and that there are more than 900 stations. During that time not a single station has been put off the air by FCC for a single hour because of its program content, he declared. Fly said he had received expressions of sympathy regarding the investigation by members of congress but he would not discuss them in detail. His communications from Capitol Hill are consistently sympathetic, he said.

buckaroo. Charles Winninger adds one of his consistently fine performances as Wayne's wise old buddy. Others who share capitally in the proceedings are Phil Silvers as the tour conductor, Mary Field, Miss Arthur's tour companion, John Philliber, Grady Sutton, Grant Withers, Hans Conreid and Nina Quartaro.

Robert Ardrey's bright and humorous screen play incorporates for picturesque and exciting effect most of the standard elements of the conventional western picture as props for the romantic maneuvers—a saloon gang fight, which is a pippin, a dice game in a crooked den, chases, rodeo riding thrills, a night on the lonely desert—all leading to that romantic moment atop a hay wagon and subsequent sparring by the two lovers to get each other straight. Original story is by Joe Swerling.

Frank Ross as producer invests the offering with quality and a sure-fire brand of showmanship, with Richard Ross as associate producer. Roy Webb and C. Bakaleinikoff take good care of the musical requirements, and Frank Redman, with Vernon L. Walker on special effects, make their cameras picture the proceedings eloquently.

PUBLIC HEARINGS ON $8,000,000 BLUE DEAL

Washington, Aug. 16.—Federal Communications Commission is expected to announce public hearings on the application for sale of the three Blue network stations—WJZ, New York, WENR, Chicago, and KGO, San Francisco—to the American Broadcasting System, approval of which was sought from the FCC last week. The sum involved in the network deal ($8,000,000), details of the new corporation and of stock ownership and the importance of proceedings to the public will probably lead to assignment of the hearing when the Commission meets tomorrow. FCC Chairman James Fly said today that he expects to see that the public hearings are set, adding that the matter is so important that little time will be lost acting upon it. He emphasized that he was speaking for himself rather than for the entire Commission.

they maneuver to have him spirited away while the rehearsals are under way. Meantime the two youngsters who carry the romantic interest, and who have been victimized by a Hollywood agent, hatch a scheme to have Cantor's double, a rubberneck bus driver, impersonate the entertainer so that the Cavalcade of the Stars can proceed with themselves and the others desired by Producers Horton and Sakall in for the featured spots. Cantor's frantic efforts to head off the results of the masquerade carry him into all sorts of misadventures, including a violent session in a hospital for mental cases and an encounter with Hollywood Indian extras. Thus Cantor multiplies his characteristic comedy in the two coinciding roles for hilarious results. In the dialog and the gags, Cantor doesn't spare his own professional idiosyncrasies. All is projected against a Hollywood background.

Humphrey Bogart does a characteristic skit as a tough guy outtoughed by Sakall. Bette Davis sings 'They're Either too Young or Too Old' number. Olivia de Havilland, Ida Lupino and George Tobias do an amusing jitterbug dance. John Garfield does a song-recitation. Errol Flynn sings a British bar song. Dinah Shore sings 'Thank Your Lucky Stars.' Joan Leslie, in role of a song writer, chants a number, and Dennis Morgan sings. Ann Sheridan adds a lyric and a decorative allure as conductor of a love class for the femme beauts in Dormitory Dolls. Alexis Smith stands out in a dance number. Jack Carson and Alan Hale share a turn on stage. Hattie McDaniel and colored ensemble sing a wedding march in hot tempo, 'Ice Cold Katy.' Don Wilson is an announcer. Ruth Donnelly is a hospital nurse, Willie Best a soldier, Henry Armetta a barber, Joyce Reynolds a girl with a book.

Team of Warners contract dancers comprise the team of Ten Lucky Stars, directed by LeRoy Prinz as a specialty unit and a core for the larger dance ensembles. Las Estrellitas compose another group of Latin-American girls from prominent families, featured in the 'Good Neighbor' number. In all, 148 showgirls appear in the various numbers, and cast has a total of over 300 femmes.

Mark Hellinger, the producer himself appears in a brief role as himself, as does Dave Butler, the director, in discouraging a guy who looks like Eddie Cantor from a stage career. Hellinger does a whale of a job of executive control and organization in holding together a show of such diverse elements and scope and at the same time emphasizing each performer contribution for its full entertainment value. Butler's direction is an equally outstanding job of showmanly smartness and veteran's skill.

Music is the bond which gives picture cohesion and distinction comparable to the top names in the performer bracket. Arthur Schwartz and Frank Loesser maintain their repute among the top composers in the industry with a round dozen diversified and interesting numbers, written more or less to specifications for the star actors.

Screen play by Norman Panama, Melvin Frank and James V. Kern, from an original by Everett Freeman and Arthur Schwartz, is brightly adapted to elicit the odd and diverting and often unsuspected talents of the players. The dance numbers add another credit to the abilities of LeRoy Prinz, who created and staged them. Arthur Edeson's cameras give the show fine pictorial glitter, and Anton Grot and Leo E. Kuter skillfully add the art embellishments to carry out the lavish production scheme under Producer Hellinger. Milo Anderson deserves kudos for his distinguished costuming.

Leo F. Forbstein did the musical direction to hold up his contribution to the film's quality, and Ray Heindorf did the orchestrral arrangements and Dudley Chambers the vocal. Spike Jones and his City Slickers insinuated a hot and effective number.

In addition to the local openings at Warners Hollywood, Downtown, and Wiltern; 22 other houses in the southern California and Arizona area are launching the picture. Two houses in long Beach and pair in San Diego are in the list, which includes: San Pedro, Huntington Park, Phoenix, Tucson, Pomona, Riverside, San Bernardino, Bakersfield, Taft, Santa Barbara, Banning, Fresno, Porterville and San Luis Obispo.

From reports on advance sales from the coast theatres, it is anticipated that close to $500,000 will be realized on the combined openings for the Army Emergency Relief. Around $60,000 of this will be tabbed in the local area, which includes a one night pitch at Academy, Pasadena.

Masters of ceremonies will function at all three theatres with Eddie Cantor co-ordinating at Hollywood mike.

BEEFS ON DECREE PILING UP

know how many complaints are being received by the Department's 12 field offices, but is convinced that there are enough to show genuine exhibitor interest. Aside from the individual letters, there have been numerous plans, complaints, analyses and what-not submitted by various exhibitor associations and groups.

Full docket of the various complaints in order of their frequency and importance will probably be laid before producers and distributors next month, before any final determination is made by the Department. Clark expects to make another trip to Hollywood early next month to talk to production heads; go over the various complaints with them; hear any ideas that might be presented for solution; and producers' own complaints beside justification of producer-distrib theatre operations.

Exhib complains have covered a multitude of distribution practices thus far, including the withholding of films, clearance deals, trade showing, rental prices and percentages, block booking, forcing of shorts, and numerous others. Where there's so much smoke there must be some fire, the government attorneys are convinced, and the problems are to find out exactly who's responsible for the fire and the best way to quench it.

Although decision to reopen the suit on the consent decree would mean a knockout battle and reams of publicity which would probably be adverse to the industry, the government has behind it a stronger threat than a court battle in the Kilgore divorcement bill now pending before the Senate. A re-write of the old Neely bill, this one would have a fair chance of passage should it be reported out by the Senate Judiciary Committee. Congress is not overly friendly to the film industry at this time, largely because of the several recent pictures friendly to the Administration, and a pressure campaign by exhibs possibly could put through the bill if it came to a vote.

With it hanging over their heads, producers and distributors are not expected to be too tough with Clark when it comes to working out solutions of the myriad distribution problems. In fact, it would not be too surprising to find that, in their attempt to avoid a Congressional vote or court battle, the producer-distribs would not only forestall divorcement, but actually give indies a much better break than actual divorcement could provide.

NEW DEAL TILTS 3,000 AGVA MEMBERS HERE 20G A WEEK

New contract deal with Florentine Gardens calling for six-day week and a substantial up in pay for performers has been signd by the Los Angeles Local of the American Guild of Variety Artists. Simultaneously it was announced that 3,000 AGVA members in Los Angeles territory now are drawing $20,000 more weekly as result of new wage scales made effective by Guild this month.

Deal with Gardens, negotiated by Florine Bale, AGVA regional director, increases pay of principals from $45 they received for seven days, to $75 for six days. Scale for members of chorus is increased from $33.50 to $45.

Practically all other spots are expected to approve six-day week following action of Florentine Gardens in falling into line. Many had been waiting to see what Gardens did on six-day week and increased pay scales.

AGVA announced yesterday that it is now getting full cooperation from agents, who are demanding to see Guild cards before booking performers. This applies particularly to club dates. AGVA headquarters also are being advised of all contracts as they are signed.

Miss Bale leaves Aug. 25 for Salt Lake City to set up scales and working conditions for niteries and other spots in that area. Working arrangement will be made with Musicians Union along same lines that crafts now operate here.

Technicolor Booked Year Ahead in Big Rush to Color laboratory reservations for the necessary prints, which will give that studio at least six features in color this coming season.

Because of the precision required in Technicolor special cameras, only a certain number are available for production purposes. In addition, specialized camera crews and technicians have to be carried both during production and between pictures.

Processing of Technicolor prints is a definite engineering undertaking, with each print reportedly going through 20 or more operations before completion, in comparison to the small number of operations for black and white film. Lab workers have to be carefully trained, and Tech has been able to keep up replacements through losses to the armed services; with many women now employed in the plant. As an engineering project, the Tech lab figures certain capacity of both negative and positive that can be handled—so producers are required to schedule pictures in accordance with pre-arranged plan.

Studios are required to make advance bookings of both camera equipment and crews for specific dates, with little leeway if a script is not ready or casting complete. These bookings also dovetail with future laboratory dates that will insure the producer getting his prints at a specified time when release date has been set.

RKO has not made a Technicolored feature of its own for several years, while Columbia has one or two on the Tech schedule during the year. United Artist producers will generally have to dovetail in any color features if the Technicolor schedule will allow through cancelled reservations by others of the majors.

350 SINGERS QUIT EXTRA RANKS TO JOIN A JUNIORS

Junior membership will be voluntary; singers who intend to continue to accept extra calls will remain in the B classification. It is anticipated that approximately 350 singers will be involved in the transfer.'

Class A Juniors, like B members, have no vote on Guild policy matters, but otherwise enjoy the same privileges as regular Class A members. It is understood many other essential extras have been considering the switch, prefering to remain with the Guild if an individual union is set up for extras.

As the Board prepared autonomy setup for submission to extras at annual meeting Sept. 19, Screen Players Union came out in favor of elimination of the $5.50 scale, and stated petitions would soon be circulated on sets in favor of a separate autonomous charter for extras, to be issued by the Associated Actors and Artistes of American or the American Federation of Labor.

In announcing its program for a separate charter, Screen Players stated:

'Not only must the $5.50 wage scale go, but a complete readjustment of wage scales must be negotiated. In 1937 the Screen Actors Guild won for you a 10% increase in wages. Six years have elapsed and in that six years you have won a 50 cent decrease in your wage scale (4½%). Living costs have gone up, income taxes and other taxes have gone up, all other unions have won a substantial increase in wages for their members and you have won a 50 cent decrease. Robert Montgomery, in his retiring speech, said "It is the duty of a union to see to it that its members are better off today than they were yesterday and better off tomorrow than they are today." Has this been done?

'Next month the Screen Actors Guild is going to offer you a plan of autonomy. Our advice to you is, if the Screen Actors Guild recommends it, then vote against it. A few years ago the Guild recommended that you vote away your only representation, your council. You did and you found out that that was a mistake. They then recommended that you vote yourself a wage decrease and you did and you found out that also was a mistake. If at the meeting next month, the SAG should recommend that you vote to accept a 'local' charter from the Guild, you must certainly be suspicious of it and vote against it. Why does not the Guild send to you now, a complete breakdown for the plan for your autonomy for your consideration between now and the time of the meeting. You could study it and find out if it is the best plan. If it is the best plan then we will all accept it.'

Union tossed boquets at the Essential Players, Screen Players Protective Committee,' Cowboys, etc., for their efforts to better conditions of extras.

STICKS THEATRES SHOW 50 PERCENT UPSWING IN BIZ

New York, Aug. 17.—Small town theatres, hard hit by both the draft and worker migrations to metropolitan areas, staged a terrific comeback during the past six months.

Trend is reflected in 50% biz upswing, and stronger film grosses which are hitting pre-war levels following the near-fatal slump. Improved conditions are attributed to the flow of heavy coin sent back by servicemen and war workers, in addition to the $150,000,000 War Department dependency benefits. Money can't be spent on cars, refrigerators and other nick-nacks or furnishings, so it's being funneled into the picture houses of the rural sectors.

CHECKMATING an impression that seems to have gained wide coverage in Hollywood, Winfield Sheehan, who is producing the Eddie Rickenbacker picture at 20th-Fox, points out that in the contemplated reelage not a single gun is fired. Not a battle-cry is heard, no drums beat, and there are no bugle-calls. There are no waving of flags, marching men or any combat scenes whatsoever. Instead of being a war picture, as is generally believed, picture is the story of a man, a barefoot boy so poor he wore shoes which weren't even mates and whose family had to raise its own food. The plot tells how our American democracy gave this boy the opportunity of making something of himself. Rickenbacker film covers 40 years of our history, with the focus on one man's life pointing up the drama in these dynamic years. Story goes strong for laughs.

RAPID turnover of theatre personnel nationally is resulting in increasing cases of embezzlement, gypping on expense accounts, and resale of loose tickets. Situation has been particularly serious among small independent circuit operators and individual exhibs, who do not have the careful policing system of major circuits. In the New York area exhibs are being cautioned to ease up on frequent rotation of too many ushers and others into ticket-taker berths for relief duty. Managers are warned to curtail their own supper hours to keep eyes open on operation between 5:30 and 7 p.m., when most defections occur.

RADIO writers won't be as hard hit by the draft as was first supposed. Checkup of western region membership of Radio Writers Guild by Paul Franklin, national prez of the organization, reveals that less than 20 of the remaining membership of around 200 are vulnerable to induction. Before Pearl Harbor the Hollywood membership stood at 232, and of this number about 15 are in the service or with government agencies. Roughly, one-third of the current membership is comprised of women, and most of the others either have been rejected as physically unfit for active service or are over the age limit.

proximately $12,000,000 on the 43-44 cost sheets. Others are 'For Whom The Bell Tolls' now getting de luxe showing, 'Lady In the Dark' recently completed and 'Dr. Wassell.'

Twentieth-Fox will have three that will cost $9,000,000. They are 'Wilson' and 'One World,' to be produced by Darryl Zanuck and film based on life of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker which Winnie Sheehan will produce.

These three films will absorb 22% of the $41,000,000 which 20th has allocated for 39 films to be released during 1943-44. It is understood, however, that with this heavy coin thrown toward the making of these three that the product will possibly be 30 instead of 39 films on the season.

Recent trip of Barney Balaban, prexy of Paramount, is understood to have been as a result of seeing cost sheets mount on 'Frenchman's Creek,' Balaban is said to have told the studio execs that hitting over the $3,000,000 mark in the production of a film was rather venturesome and that production would have to be watched closely in the future.

Lassie Come Home

(Drama)

Metro production. Featuring Lassie, dog star. Cast: Roddy McDowall, Donald Crisp, Dame May Whitty, Edmund Gwenn, Nigel Bruce, Elsa Lanchester, Elizabeth Taylor, Ben Webster, J. Patrick O'Malley, Alan Napier, Arthur Shields, John Rogers, Alec Craig. Director, Fred M. Wilcox. Producer, Samuel Marx. Screenplay, Hugo Butler. Based upon novel by Eric Knight. Photography, Leonard Smith. Technicolor color director, Natalie Kalmus. Associate, Henri Jaffa. Musical score, Daniele Amfitheatrof. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. Sets, Edwin B. Willis, Mildred Griffiths. Special effects, Warren Newcombe. Editor, Ben Lewis. Tradeshown in Los Angeles, Aug. 17, 1943. Running time: 90 MINS.

Metro owns a genuine moneymaker in this heart-warming screen epistle in Technicolor, imbued with all the attributes which go to make up a box-office hit. A remarkable picture, it is the odyssey of a dog. Naturally, it will be compared with 'My Friend Flicka,' another animal picture, which scored roundly at the turnstiles, but where 'Flicka' was the story of a boy and a horse throughout the film's length, 'Lassie' revolves mainly around a dog and its efforts to span the distance separating it from its master. The picture unfolds tenderly, and its authors have caught the spirit of Eric Knight't novel with moving sincerity.

'Lassie' marks the first directorial assignment of Fred M. Wilcox, and assures his future as a director with a flair for the emotional. Scenes throughout are colored with feeling, and audiences are bound to follow the travels of Lassie, the dog, and her destiny, with all the interest that attaches to human relationships. Wilcox has made every scene count, building dramatically upon the single aim of the dog—to go home to her young master.

The path takes Lassie from Scotland all the way to Yorkshire, and it is upon this journey that events of the story reach a richly-embellished high. Picture opens with Lassie, a fine Collie, owned by Donald Crisp and his son, Roddy McDowall, in Yorkshire. Crisp's only possession is Lassie and he can ill afford to keep her, being out of work and unable to support his family. He finally yields to the persuasions of Nigel Bruce, wealthy duke of the neighborhood, to sell the dog and with many misgivings turns Lassie over, to be groomed for showing.

After number of episodes showing Lassie escaping from the kennels and returning home, dog is taken to Scotland, to duke's estate there. Short time later she gets away, and

Adventures of a Rookie

(Comedy)

RKO production. Co-stars Wally Brown and Alan Carney. Supporting cast: Richard Martin, Erford Gage, Margaret Landry, Patti Brill, Rita Corday, Robert Andersen, John Hamilton, Ruth Lee, Lorraine Krueger, Ercelle Woods, Toddy Peterson, Byron Foulger. Director, Leslie Goodwins. Producer, Bert Gilroy. Screenplay, Edward James. Original story and adaptation by William Bowers, M. Coates Webster. Photography, Jack MacKenzie. Musical director, C. Bakaleinikoff. Art direction, Albert S. D'Ogostino, Walter E. Keller. Sets, Darrell Silvera, William Stevens. Gowns, Renie. Editor, Harry Marker. Tradeshown in Hollywood, Aug. 17, 1943. Running time: 64 MINS.

Takeoff venture of RKO's new comedy series of rookie life needs considerable sparking to elevate it to position of real laugh-getter. Principal fault lies in material, which does not permit its two stars, Wally Brown and Alan Carney, opportunity to exhibit their fun abilities in comic channels. Picture evokes mirth at intervals, but, in main, screenplay tends to hold down the principals. Best that can be said is that film is strictly supporting fare.

Title is keynote to film's narrative—it's the adventures, or misadventures, of trio of rookies from their draft until they march from camp ostensibly to go overseas. What's packed between is nonsensical hodgepodge which should have benefitted by more adroitness in building pattern but which, in its present state, slows action to a walk.

Brown and Carney, along with Richard Martin, are always getting into trouble. Brown is former smart-cracking orchestra leader, Carney a dumb truck driver and Martin, ever the innocent victim who goes along for the ride, a wealthy young songwriter and nephew of the camp's commanding officer. Routines between Brown and Carney are interspersed freely throughout film. Without so much of this footage action would have been speedier and feature easier to take. These bits of business are used to link various situations, which have the boys doing evreything from inadvertently going AWOL to being quarantined for scarlet fever in a girl's house.

The two stars try valiantly and offer promise of better things to come, rating a hand for work well-done. Hit performance of picture, though, is portrayal of Erford Gage, as hardboiled top sergeant. He gives part everything he has and that's plenty. Richard Martin is good, too, in straight role, remainder of cast turning in acceptable support.

Direction by Leslie Goodwins is as

The Fallen Sparrow

(Spy Melodrama)

RKO production. Stars John Garfield and Maureen O'Hara. Features Walter Slezak, Patricia Morison and Martha O'Driscoll. Supporting cast: Bruce Edwards, John Banner, John Miljan, Sam Goldenberg and Hugh Beaumont. Directed by Richard Wallace. Produced by Robert Fellows. Screenplay by Warren Duff. Based on novel by Dorothy B. Hughes. Photography by Nicholas Musuraca. Film editor, Robert Wise. Special effects by Vernon L. Walker. Art directors, Albert S. D'Agostino and Mark-Lee Kirk. Production designed by Van Nest Polglase. Assistant director, Sam Ruman. Music by Roy Webb. Musical direction, C. Bakaleinikoff. Tradeshown in L. A. Aug. 17, 1943. Running time: 91 MINS.

'The Fallen Sparrow' is a consistently-paced and suspenseful spy meller that will give a profitable account of itself in the regular runs, with John Garfield turning in particularly effective performance in the lead.

Plot concerns the adventures of Garfield after his return to this country after serving in Loyalist army in Spain. He's harassed by secret Nazi agents, and along the way is unfolded the cause for the latter condition: seems his battalion wiped out a Nazi unit in Spain, and captured the German battle flag. It's repossession is major concern of Hitler agents, who had tortured Garfield in a prison camp until letting him escape to this country for eventual disclosure of hiding place of the pennant.

Garfield cuts short recuperation vacation in Arizona to return to New York when apprised that an old pal has been killed, and he connects the murder with his own secret.

Then follows series of adventures in which Garfield is haunted by the unseen torturer of Spain, who's here continuing on trail of getting back the banner. Maureen O'Hara comes into the picture as a suspected clue, sticks around to have Garfield fall in love with her, and then is disclosed as a Nazi agent. Walter Slezak is a supposed refugee who turns out to be the main heavy in the proceedings. Martha O'Driscoll is a night club singer, and Patricia Morison a socialite—both coming under Garfield scrutiny for subversive activities. At the windup, Slezak is knocked off, while Miss O'Hara is nabbed by the FBI to allow Garfield to hop off for Spain to recover the battle flag in its hiding place in Spain.

Garfield ably handles his assignment, with Miss O'Hara turning in a fine performance as the girl. In addition to providing major supporting role, Miss O'Driscoll sings one folk song in good voice. Slezak is cunning as the pursuer, while good support is provided by Miss Morison, Bruce Edwards, John Banner, John Miljan and Hugh Beaumont.

Script by Warren Duff generates usual audience confusion and suspense in the proceedings, while Richard Wallace's direction proceeds at a good pace throughout. Technical contributions, including camera work by Nicholas Musuraca, are standard.

Tunesmiths On 'Island'

Ted Koehler and Burton Lane have been set by Paramount to write songs for 'Rainbow Island,' Technicolor musical which will star Dorothy Lamour, Eddie Bracken and Gil Lamb.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

Military events, even the conquest of Sicily, were pushed into the background by President Roosevelt's arrival at Quebec and the impending opening of his conferences with Prime Minister Churchill, which in well informed circles are believed to be of historic importance. First of the problems which will have to be decided is unquestionably the future relationship with, and the position of, the Soviet Union. The USSR now has clearly emerged as a first rate power which will have to be reckoned with, both in the war against Japan and the establishment of new conditions in the postwar world. I would like to point out the fact that Stalin is in a very interesting, if not important position. He is closer both to Berlin and Tokyo than the Allies. That is an extra favorable position for bargaining.

Lassie Come Home

here starts the odyssey, which is told by the camera so compassionately.

Episodic is the action hereafter—Lassie encountering a killer dog as she attempt to make her way through a band of sheep; her swimming a raging torrent; Dame May Whitty and Ben Webster, an old couple living near the river, taking her in, more dead than alive, and nursing her back to health; continuing her travels, taking up with a pots-and-pans traveller, Edmund Gwenn, and staying with him as he pursued his trade until at a turn of the road they part; her escape from a pair of dog-catchers, and ultimately her return home.

Simplicity marks the telling of this story, and the picture is filled with touching moments. Lassie responded perfectly to the dictates of the director, working perfectly with the actors. Particularly fine is the sequence where she remains with Dame May Whitty and Ben Webster, her leaving them a tearful play upon the emotions, and the sequence where she takes up with Edmund Gwenn was done with sly humor. Outstanding, too, are the scenes between Lassie and Roddy McDowall, their relationship being a beautiful thing and something which will appeal to every audience.

Samuel Marx went the limit in filling the picture with production qualities. The picture is a decided achievement for him as a producer.

Exquisite, too, is Leonard Smith's photography, his backgrounds as fine as anything glimpsed on the screen, and musical score by Daniele Amfitheatrof catches the mood of the picture. Hugo Butler wrote the screenplay, adapted from Eric Knight's novel, with a keen eye to dramatic and human interest values.

Cast without exception is outstanding. Donald Crisp turns in one of his finest portrayals as the understanding father, Roddy McDowall convincing as the boy and Elsa Lancabester giving a moving performance as the mother. Edmund Gwenn is unusually effective as the travelling peddler. Nigel Bruce endows role of the duke with assurance and a new personality, Elizabeth Taylor, playing part of his granddaughter, looks like a comer. Dame May Whitty, Ben Webster and J. Patrick O'Malley are others to be applauded. Lassie, the dog, will be long remembered.

EXTRA LIST SHRINKS TO 1,500

ONLY 100 ON $5.50 A DAY CALL SHEET

Less than 1,500 film extras contact Central Casting Corp. daily for studio jobs, although some 4,500 Class B members are enrolled with the Screen Actors Guild, virtually all of whom are eligible for extra work, it was disclosed yesterday by Central officials. This figure does not include a small percentage of outstanding character actors who are employed on their individual abilities.

The total had been estimated by SAG tops at 1,400. This was confirmed by Central casting directors, who said the bottom of the barrel had been scraped when they contacted 1,500 players. It is understood SAG is now conducting a survey to determine the status of the remaining thousands.

MANY IN DEFENSE WORK

Production officials explained the small number by stating many extras are now employed in the defense plants, others are in the armed services, while still others are housewives who occasionally call for jobs and persons who make their living outside the industry, but carry SAG membership cards as a spare tire or so they can call in for a job on their day off, etc.

The former SAG-Producer Standing Committee recommended these people be dropped from the rolls. Move was endorsed by the Class B members of SAG, but it is understood proposal was vetoed by Producer attorneys who feared lawsuits might result from action.

Central said small number of extras available to casting directors daily explained the necessity for frequently asking the SAG for waivers to employ outsiders. This pertains particularly to $5.50 calls, less than 100 regular extras being willing to work for that figure. Of approximately 1,100 extras employed at $5.50 in July, it is understood approximately 80% were outsiders procured on waivers.

This estimate, as well as issuance of waivers, is expected to come up at annual meeting of Class B membership Sept. 19, despite announcement of SAG that nothing but separate autonomy for Class B members would be considered. Specific agenda for an annual meeting can not be set in advance and subjects may be limited only by vote of the membership itself, according to extra leaders.

107 KEY OPENINGS OF 'TITA' SLATED TO GRAB $1,000,000

New York, Aug. 17.—Initial 107 key openings of 'This Is The Army,' all of which will be launched by Friday, will show gross in excess of $1,000,000, according to Warner sales execs. Amount will exclude totals of preem openings, many of which were scaled at $5.50 and $11.00 tops, with all proceeds being turned over to Army Emergency Relief Fund. Houses participating included Warners string of Hollywood, Downtown, Wiltern, Huntington Park and San Pedro; with the FWC Academy, Pasadena, brought in via local citizen demand for one night advanced scale showing. Film celebs scattered around the various houses to give ticket-buyers and onlookers an extra run for their coin.

Army units, including champ drill outfits, were present at the various theatres; while much equipment was brought out for display. Various Army bands from nearby bases were also assigned to each theatre to provide music.

AFRA-MUSICAL GUILD MERGE UP AT CHI MEET

New York, Aug. 17.—Possible merger of the American Federation of Radio Artists and the American Guild of Musical Artists is on agenda of AFRA convention at Chicago Aug. 28-29. Committees from both unions have been meeting here during the past month under the chairmanship of Lawrence Tibbett, prexy of both unions.

If AFRA and AGMA solve constitutional and other difficulties involved, merger would set pattern for subsequent consolidation of affiliates of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, especially of AFRA and AGMA with Actors Equity Association, which has been discussed during past year.

Possible objections might stem from certain officials and difficulty of finding work for present employes of two unions. However, Tibbett declared there would hardly be opposition based on best interest of memberships. Joint committee is to make report at convention.

QUIZ COAST INDIES ON DECREE

EXHIBS ASKED TO LIST ALL UNFAIR PRACTICES FOR U. S.

Every independent exhibitor in the Pacific Coast area, comprising states of California, Oregon and Washington, is being mailed special questionnaire by PCCITO on unfair trade practices and purported violations of the consent decree entered into by the five theatre-affiliate major companies in November, 1940.

Questionnaire was prepared by PCCITO following meeting of its representatives with Tom C. Clark, assistant U. S. attorney general in Los Angeles several weeks ago. At that time, Clark, who has charge of Department of Justice anti-trust division, stated that he was anxious to obtain data from independent exhibs on consent decree operations to guide course of government action when effective period of the decree expires on Nov. 20, 1943. PCCITO will turn over all returned questionnaires to Clark for latter's guidance in further action against the five major companies. In setting up its line of questions for exhibs to answer, PCCITO comments that it treats with the 'sins of omission, as well as commission' of consent decree operation.

Questionnaire is split into two divisions—unfair trade practices; and consent decree clauses. Trustees of the PCCITO figured that both were related, and answers would provide ammunition for Clark and his department.

SPECIFIC QUESTIONS ASKED

Under consent decree clauses, form asks for specific data on any forcing of groups of features as requirement for buying other blocks; details on forcing of shorts with features; whether five picture selling plan endangered established run; refusal to sell some run; refusal, after request, to cancel any licensed picture on moral, religious or racial grounds; discrimination on clearance; withholding of prints arbitrarily, and showing preference to competitor; refusal of any distributor to license features on run requested.

Pertinent are questions covering section XI of the decree, on theatre expansion of major circuits. Two queries of far-reaching importance read:

'(A) has any consenting defendant acquired or built a theatre in competition to you? If so, has it endangered your run, interfered with your licensing feature pictures, increased clearance against you or affected you adversely in any other particular. (B) has the consent decree permitted further expansion of affiliated circuits in your territory?'

BLOCK BOOKING COMPARISON

Final question under consent decree division asks 'compare the manner in which the distributors are licensing their feature pictures to you in limited blocks with the former licensing of their full season's product, state your reasons why the consent decree has not eliminated block booking.'

Another pertinent question listed asks 'How do you prefer to license features: explain whether you would prefer to license from distributors their full season's feature product, properly identified, with an unrestricted 20% cancellation privilege, or some other basis rather than the present licensing clause in the consent decree.'

'UNFAIR PRACTICES'

Under heading of 'unfair trade practices' PCCITO asks for info on undue increase of film rentals, and reasons why tilts were unjustified; any detrimental effect of additional first runs; effect of arbitrary designation of playdates on biz; effect of distrib policy of demanding excess gross percentage; and data on any deal to sell or enter into operating agreement with producer-affiliated circuit, and reasons for same; effect on theatre operation through distributor hoarding of pictures, or delaying release of completed product; any pressure to compel licensing of features by distribs by intimating questioning of exhib loyalty for non-purchase or showing.

Important question revolves on practice of circuits dualing two A features, and it asks 'explain in detail how you are injuriously affected by the practice of different distributors licensing their feature pictures to affiliated circuits on a basis whereby they can present two A pictures on one program, while demanding from you arbitrary percentages or high flat rentals which prevent you from equal opportunity.'

Board of trustees of PCCITO are slated to meet today and tomorrow in San Francisco, with drive to get exhibs to fill out and return questionnaires to be given impetus at the sessions. Clark is due on the coast early next month, and PCCITO figures to have representative returns to turn over to him.

BRITISH CENSOR DELETES LORD'S PRAYER FROM 'CANTEEN'

British motion picture censors have ordered The Lord's Prayer eliminated from 'Stage Door Canteen.' Industry leaders were somewhat shocked yesterday when Sol Lesser received word that singing of the Prayer by Gracie Fields, one of the emotional highlights of the picture, was being deleted by British censorship. One of them remarked, 'And it was only a short time ago that a tirade against the American picture industry was started in British parliament because our censors deleted the word 'bastard' from Noel Coward's 'In Which We Serve.'

Some execs were unable to explain the action, particularly since Gracie Fields has contributed a big part of her time to entertaining the armed forces and is a prime favorite with the military personnel. While it is understood no reason was given for the deletion, in the past British censors have ordered the Lords Prayer eliminated when recited in films.

NY LEGIT OPENING

MURDER WITHOUT CRIME

New York, Aug. 18.—'Murder Without Crime' opened at the Cort tonight with little chance to make the grade. It is melodrama with an English reputation. Like a majority of such hits over there, the reverse is likely here. One-set four-person play would be a cinch to clean up, provided it were diverting. Performance is a duolog between male characters, a corresponding pair of femmes being secondary. Scene is a flat in Mayfair where Stephen and Drena quarrel as his wife phones she is returning to end their separation. In ensuing scuffle, the mistress is stabbed, and, believing the girl dead, the husband secretes the body in the Ottoman divan. Matthew Man, who lives downstairs, senses something wrong, and for nearly two acts the two men verbally fence. Finally, after blackmailing Steve, the gabby visitor takes a lethal drink and it's found that the girl isn't murdered at all.

Brataigne Windust stepped into the show as Stephen. Henry Daniell is the wordy friend; Frances Tamehill and Viola Keats complete the cast. None seems to have a sympathetic part.

DICKIE JONES, 16, third of the 'Henry Aldrichs' on the radio, under contract to Young & Rubicam for five years, goes to New York next week to make his debut in the role on Sept. 1. He was selected after four months of testing which had hundreds of candidates before the mike and under scrutiny of the author, Clifford Goldsmith, who insisted that this time the 'Henry' must be of the same age actually as he is on the radio program, and that he would be available for stage and screen, if necessary. Young Jones has been living with the author's family at Nantucket all summer to learn the 'Aldrich' lingo and manner, with all expenses paid but not on salary, as a final test. Lad had an air show of his own in Dallas, Tex., at age of five, which hit southwest stations under monicker, 'The Little Cowboy Rambler,' and it was there that Hoot Gibson found him in 1932 and brought him to Hollywood for screen career.

Gilman has assured the studio there would be no recurrence of such attacks on its players, as Fidler's scripts are being subjected to the closest scrutiny. Full cooperation will be offered the studio by Gilman to clean the slate of past grievances.

W. R. FRANK is preparing intensive national pre-selling campaign for his forthcoming production, 'Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, His Life and Loves.' Present plan is not to seek release for picture until after its completion, and, in line with this, Frank is conducting a campaign designed to create exhibitor demand for the production, which will be filmed at General Service studios beginning Sept. 8. Frank has taken space in all leading national trade papers and will send descriptive literature to 17,000 theatres, representing virtually every house in actual operation in the country. Coincidentally, Frank is putting on publicity campaign reaching every possible medium, including national syndicates.

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

In Hollywood at eventide when sunny day has fled,
A stranger has no place whereon to rest his weary head.
A Soldier or a Sailor or a Coast Guard or Marine
Is often found asleep at morn upon the village green.
Producers in the movie biz are in the selfsame fix—
They cannot find sufficient space to shoot a flock of pix.

Not so long ago a landlord with a rental studio on his hands did more emoting than all the thesps who were playing quickies from day to day in his rental studio. Whenever the landlord saw a stranger approaching with a document he didn't know whether it was a genius with a new screenplay or a guy from the finance corporation with a new notice. Nowadays a rental studio is busier than a motel on a weekend.

When you sat in a dentist's office long ago you picked up a slick-paper magazine and read something about the Diamond Horseshoe, chiefly about dowagers with diamond-studded lorgnettes and pearl necklaces and tiaras and other appurtenances of Metropolitan music. There were a few words in the last paragraph about a Martinelli or a Galli Curci or some such person who was tolerated for the sake of art. So Billy Rose is slapping a Diamond Horseshoe on the screen and swooners invade the Hollywood Bowl. Probably Paul Whiteman did not realize what he was starting when he introduced George Gershwin into the sacred precincts of Carnegie Hall. When you pick up a slick magazine in your dentist's office today the only dowagers you see are Miss Maukesha or Miss Hoboken of 1942 placing the crown of beauty on Miss Waukesha or Miss Hoboken of 1943. Novocaine and magazines make life more cheerful nowadays in a dental antechamber.

In soulful tones the cowboy sang, as if his heart would break.
He sang of love, but really his passion was a fake.
The lowing of the fatted steers
Resounded in his hungry ears,
And he was thinking, as he sang, about a hunk of steak.

The Seventh Victim

(Mystery Drama)

RKO production. Cast: Tom Conway, Jean Brooks, Isabel Jewell, Kim Hunter, Evelyn Brent, Erford Gage, Ben Bard, Hugh Beaumont, Chef Milani, Marguerita Sylva, Mary Newton, Wally Brown, Feodor Chaliapin. Producer, Val Lewton. Director, Mark Robson. Screenplay by Charles O'Neal and DeWitt Bodeen. Music, Roy Webb. Music direction, C. Bakaleinikoff. Photography, Nicholas Musuraca. Art directors, Albert S. D'Agostino and Walter E. Keller. Set decorations, Darrell Silvera, Harley Miller. Edited by John Lockert. Tradeshown in Los Angeles, Aug. 18, 1943. Running time: 70 MINS.

Here is a death-dealing mystery which is different, and which is calculated to appeal to the connoisseurs of the whodunits as well as to the less discriminating. It fits snugly into the groove of RKO productions which have had unusual and in several instances phenomenal success in the murder-mystery category, and should on its own account fare very well at the tills.

'Seventh Victim' is considerably off the hard-beaten track of film chillers. Its target character, played by Jean Brooks, is the seventh victim of a cult of evil - worshipers whose existence and identity she has unintentionally revealed. Picture is developed as a drama of reaction on the characters, rather than a melodrama of grisly events, and discards most of the cliches which have threatened to end the popularity of this brand of double-bill entertainment.

In the screenplay by Charles O'Neal and DeWitt Bodeen, the victim, herself an unintentional murderess, is driven to self-destruction through terror of the cult and her own unstable mental balance. Involved with the strange group through her own demand for excitement, the girl deeds away a profitable business and disappears from the ken of her friends. A younger sister, played by Kim Hunter, leaves school to search for her in New York; finds several men on the trail, a husband, a psychiatrist, a poet, and falls in love with the husband, Hugh Beaumont, before she knows his relationship to the sister. Efforts of all these interested persons to prevent the death of the terrified girl who all her life has threatened suicide are unavailing. She hangs herself in the noose she has kept dangling theatrically in an empty rented room to remind herself of her probable fate.

Tom Conway, featured lead of this RKO series, enters the picture comparatively late, and has no more prominence than the other major characters. He is the psychiatrist. Audience by this time has become acquainted with the nature of the weird dilemma and the persons involved.

Players all turn in excellent enactments, convincing, credible, giving proper value to the mystical elements and exploiting the mystery of event and motive very persuasively under the capable direction of Mark Robson. Suspense is carefully built up and is never allowed to be broken by intruding some of the usual hocus-pocus of the average screen puzzler. Sharing the good performances with Conway, Miss Brooks and Kim Hunter are Isabel Jewell, Erford Gage, the poet, Ben Bard, spokes-

2,232,205 SERVICEMEN SEE H'WOOD PIX IN NORTH AFRICA

American 16 mm films, donated by the motion picture industry for free exhibition to overseas military personnel, were viewed by 2,232,205 'persons in uniform' in the North African area of operations during June, according to report received last night by Francis S. Harmon, executive vice-chairman of the War Activities Committee. The aggregate audience attended 2,132 screenings.

Features included 'Stage Door Canteen,' and 'Arsenic and Old Lace,' both sent overseas prior to first-run releases in this country. 'Casablanca, 'In Which We Serve,' and 'Pittsburgh.' Reporting on benefits to the armed forces in foreign areas from the industry's contribution of 16 mm pictures, Capt. Hampton W. Howard, head of Army Overseas Motion Picture Service, wrote from Iran:

'It has been my good fortune to observe the service in operation on three continents and I can assure you there is no greater appreciated, nor more valued recreation than these pictures, which in many cases of necessity are exhibited under the most adverse conditions imaginable.

'A word of praise is due also for the Special Service officers overseas who, realizing the morale value of American made motion pictures, perform prodigious feats in seeing that, be it by plane, train, truck, jeep or messenger, the films get through and the "show goes on" regardles sof obstacles.'

with Robert Arden

The arrival of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden at Quebec, as well as the announced arrival of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, underlined the long anticipated fact that this sixth meeting of the Allied war leaders will deal with extra important political problems. It seems unlikely that any military move, such as an invasion of the Continent, will be undertaken before the conference has been concluded. This was made evident by a broadcast from the Allied radio station beamed at Europe, in which the people under Hitler's heel were warned to prepare themselves for immediate action with Allied forces which are coming 'soon.' In the meantime, the Soviet armies on the eastern front are continuing their advance, and we may expect highly important strategic developments this coming weekend.

ARMY LAUNCHES DRIVE ON LA CROWD MARK

'This Is the Army' launched a box office offensive of smashing proportions yesterday in the three local first run houses—Hollywood, Downtown, and Wiltern—that indicates that first week biz will hit record high take for any picture for a week in the Los Angeles area.

Warner theatre officials set running time of shows at two hours and 38 minutes following preems at the three houses Tuesday night, but early yesterday afternoon eliminated most of the short subject footage—only retaining the cartoon and newsreel. This allows for seven shows daily at the Downtown and six each at the Hollywood and Wiltern; and total show seats per day of 42,900.

Downtown launched its regular-scaled run yesterday morning at nine, with house clocking 3,675 paid admissions five hours later—with heavy lineup. Hollywood and Wiltern, both mild matinee houses because of nabe locations, also caught strong early trade, with former hitting high for weekday trade.

According to Warner tabulations last night, total of 23,671 customers walked through the turnstiles at the three houses yesterday.

Paid admissions, in breakdown of figures, chalked up 7,302 for six shows at the Hollywood for the day; 9,730 for seven shows at the Downtown, and 6,639 at the Wiltern with six shows.

One factor that was indicated in preventing maximum turnover at the night shows was staying powers of many customers to sit through second running of 'TITA' to hold down grosses to some extent.

Everett, Wash., Sets Pace For Small Towns

Everett, Washington, with population of around 30,000, turned in surprise preem gross for 'This Is the Army' Tuesday night, clocking total of $7,000 to lead the large number of small towns that got the picture away at $11.00 and $5.50 top showings.

Fox and State Theatres in San Diego tabbed $9,800 and $3,600 respectively, while two houses in Seattle grossed $27,500. With returns from the 75 preems in the coast area still incomplete, leaders outside of the Los Angeles area include: Riverside, $5,800; Huntington Park, $2,350; Spokane, $6,200; Tacoma, $5,300; and Fresno, $4,250.

'TITA' preemed last night at the Fox, San Francisco, hitting sellout of $21,000, while the Fox Oakland caught capacity gross of $14,000.

SAG WARNS IT WILL FITE NEW XTRAS UNION TO FINISH

Screen Actors Guild tops declared yesterday that SAG will fight any attempt of extra leaders to affiliate atmosphere players with another International union or any attempt to by-pass the Guild by going to the American Federation of Labor for a direct charter grant. Making it plain the Guild has no intention of surrendering any of its jurisdiction, leaders referred to the successful fight of SAG when Willie Bioff and George E. Browne went to the AF of L in an effort to encroach on the actor jurisdiction in the motion picture field.

Leaders said the SAG was perfectly willing to give the extras a separate autonomous union, with their own collective bargaining rights, if a majority wanted it, but said every precaution would be taken to protect its jurisdiction, including that of extras. One top pointed out that a direct charter grant to the extras by the AF of L or the Associated Actors and Artistes of America would enable the new organization, if it so desired, to take in 20,000 or 25,000 members, enabling it to swing the AAAA and thereby giving it control of the entire entertainment industry, including stage, films, concert, radio, etc.

It was indicated that such a setup would undoubtedly be pounced upon by some racketeer and that both the actors and extras would wind up behind the eight-ball. It is understood autonomy proposal to be submitted to Class B membership Sept. 19 will call for a charter from the SAG, but will give the extras the right to manage their own affairs, including negotiations, election of officers, hiring of employes, finances, etc.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Federal Communications Commission today served notice that it does not intend to let its 'thaw' policy, announced last week, to apply in areas where the radio coverage is already adequate or nearly so. Proposed findings and conclusions denying without prejudice the application of R. O. Hardin and J. C. Buchanan doing business as the Nashville Broadcasting Co., for a new station to operate on 1240 kilocycles and 250 watts were announced. The action was in conformity with the equipment freeze policy of April, 1942, the Commission said. Nashville has three stations, all affiliated with networks.

NAB ASKS LIMIT ON FCC RULE

500 of the 912 licensees for standard broadcast in this country.

Reports from meetings in nearly half of the 17 NAB districts were read during the session. These were the first meetings for these groups since the Supreme Court decision on the network rules last May, and it is reported that without exception they favored a rewriting of the Communications Act.

The committee discussed legislative plans and policies for the association, with particular stress on the White-Wheeler bill before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and the Holmes bill before the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Both bills would divide the FCC into two parts—one to handle common carriers, the other broadcasting—and would otherwise limit the powers of the government agency. Although the White-Wheeler bill, scheduled for September hearing, has not been formally postponed, it is doubtful now that the hearings on it will get under way next month.

Manpower policies are certain to occupy the major part of the time of Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee. Wheeler also has indicated that he thought the bill might be a bit too strong and that he might rewrite it. On the other hand, there is mounting Republican pressure for action on the Communications bill.

There was also discussion of the need for full-time NAB legislative counsel. No decision was reached, although it is thought likely such a position will be created in the near future.

BIG WRITERS PAY TILT IN NEW INDIES DEAL

Writer deal with independent producers calling for flat deal minimums of $1,500 for features and $1,000 for westerns has been set by the Screen Writers Guild. Special membership meeting of SWG to ratify Basic Minimum Agreement has been called for Aug. 31 at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Pact, which has already been okayed by the indie producers and the Guild negotiating committee, runs for six years from May 1. It also carries clause calling for a minimum of $125 per week, the same as contract with the majors, although most indie writer deals are on a flat basis.

Agreement will result in a substantial up in pay for hundreds of scriveners, some of whom had been turning out westerns for anywhere from $250 to $400. It is understood indies put up a hard fight for a lower minimum on flat deals, but

CASEY TO CLEAR PIC DRAFT STATUS

Pat Casey goes to Sacramento next week to discuss draft deferments for key industry workers with state Selective Service officials. It is understood some studio heads became alarmed when draft boards grabbed a publicist and other film employes after deferments as essential industry workers had been granted.

Some draft officials are said to feel industry went too far in asking that publicists, hair stylists, makeup artists, etc., be deferred as essential or not replaceable. It is reported they favor granting deferments for electricians, artists and other craftsmen who can not be replaced without extensive training.

BILLY ROSE LOSES TO LOEW'S IN ZIEGFELD THEATRE BIDS

New York, Aug. 19.—Billy Rose lost out in his effort to lease the Ziegfeld Theatre here today, when Supreme Court Justice Bernard Botein, of N. Y. State Supreme Court, authorized trustees of Ziegfeld to enter into lease for one year with Loew's, Inc., at $67,500 annual rental. This is a jump from the present lease of $50,000 Loew's paid annually on Ziegfeld used as picture house.

In addition, court instructed the trustees to hold Loew's check for $480,000 pending progress of reorganization of W. A. R. Corp., owners of house. This was bid for purchase of theatre. Sealed bids had been ordered by the court, both for lease of one year starting Sept. 1 and for outright purchase. Loew's purchase bid was $480,000.

Only other bid was by Rose, who repeated his former bid of $425,000 for purchase and $55,000 for lease, with other bids with maximum $451,000 for purchase and $60,000 lease price.

NEW master booking chart for the southern California and Arizona territory on all WAC releases has been prepared by Wayne Bell, chairman of distribution for WAC in this area. Locked-booking chart will apply to all government releases of two reels or less, and conforms to the government desire to play off the specific pictures in shortest space of time. It supersedes previous master lock-booking plan which was set up on short notice several months ago for this territory which was found to be inadequate to serve maximum number of theatres. Under new lock-book chart, theatres were checked individually for preference on playdates, with practically all replying and both circuit and reps of independents approving. Lock-booking chart now will be used in the future on all WAC reels of under two reels. System conforms closely to government desires for getting quick playoff on any subject.

MICHELE MORGAN and Jack Haley, stars of Tim Whelan's 'Higher and Higher' at RKO, are finding it somewhat difficult to understand great flood of publicity that has emanated on Frank Sinatra in connection with picture, especially in view of fact his role does not and cannot compare with theirs in film. Pair is said to have intimated as much to publicity department, which is in a spot insofar as stars are concerned, for deluge of publicity was doing of city desks of local newspapers and not studio plants. Flacks now are up against matching Sinatra's space in papers with that mentioning two stars of picture, and they're at their wits' end trying to plan campaign for pair to equal the singer's.

NEW SEATTLE FIRE MEASURE LOSES

Seattle, Aug. 19.—Fire laws pertaining to cabarets and night clubs here remain the same—calling for 12 square feet of space for each customer. During recent hearings before the City Council a new ordinance calling for 20 square feet per patron, or 15 square feet if tables and chairs were anchored, was defeated after it was shown that Seattle has one of the most stringent of such laws in the country. Only Detroit, calling for 15 square feet per customer, allowed more space.

This was revealed in a survey conducted by the Washington State Restaurant Association, according to Executive Vice-President Ray Dale, who states that most cities call for from 6 to 10 square feet of space.

JUDGE OFFS SUIT AGAINST LOEWS

New York, Aug. 19.—Justice Bernard Botein in N. Y. State Supreme court today dismissed $1,000,000 action against Loew's, Inc., brought by Grafton Films, Inc. Plaintiff's suit was based upon exhibition and distribution contract involving 'The Stars Look Down.'

Judge gave plaintiff leave to file another complaint, dismissing original complaint on grounds of not sufficient cause of action. Grafton, who had been assigned rights to picture by Grafton Productions, Inc., charged Loew's had violated contract by withholding picture from distribution for 16 months, so that picture grossed only $106,000.

In yonder picture studio rise pillars fair and tall,
A palace, you would think, equipped with many a royal hall.
Its pillars and its porticos and ornamental doors
Are all propped up behind the front by dusty two-by-fours.

And when you see the gilded stars who strut the firmament,
And hear the echoes of applause by which the skies are rent,
You think of lumber palaces that rise in gilded show
And of the sweating flacks who toil to keep the stars aglow.

Astronomers up on mount Wilson spend their lengthy years studying the habits of stars which are fixed in their stellar magnitudes and never change from one generation to another. They could learn a lot about stars by climbing down off the mountain and walking into a film studio where the publicity astronomers are continually answering questions, such as:

'How come I ain't shining when a hick from New Jersey is glittering all over the front page, with four-column layouts?'

Not even an astronomer, or an astrologer, or a press agent, or a city editor can figure who is going to shine on tomorrow's front page.

When you see lines of customers waiting at the door of a restaurant and other lines waiting at the door of a film house, you realize that the cause is the same. The studio vaults are full of pictures and the cold storage houses are full of ham and eggs, and Joe Public has a pocketful of coin. The boys are making hay while the war shines, and it ain't hay.

When a male piano duet in a vaude act goes into court to complain about each other and demand peace bonds, you know it is one of those things, even though the boys hate each other. Joe Tinker and Johnny Evers hated each other honestly and worked harmoniously as the greatest double-play combination in the history of baseball. Each in his daily stint tried to show the other guy up, which resulted in plenty of activity east and west of second base, thereby helping to win ball games. The old baseball managers cultivated personal feuds to keep the boys on their toes. Frank Chance and John McGraw never heard about the word 'morale' but they had the general idea. On or off the ball field, their athletes were in there swinging, either at each other or at the enemy. The boys on a football team must push each other around before they harmonize in that one melodic note, a touchdown.

Death Valley Manhunt

(Western)

Republic production. Stars Wild Bill Elliott. Features George 'Gabby' Hayes. Supporting cast: Anne Jeffreys, Weldon Heyburn, Herbert Heyes, Davison Clark, Pierce Lyden, Charlie Murray, Jr., Jack Kirk, Eddie Phillips, Bud Geary, Al Taylor. Produced by Eddy White. Director, John English. Screen play, Norman S. Hall and Anthony Coldewey. Original story, Fred Myton. Camera, Ernest Miller. Film editor, Harry Keller. Music score, Mort Glickman. Reviewed at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, Aug. 19, 1943. Running time: 55 MINS.

Bill Elliott, called Wild Bill Elliott since his Republic stardom, has the stature and the heft to carry a western tale with conviction and to make it impressive above the general run of these melodramas of gun and saddle. In 'Death Valley Manhunt' he gets the added advantage of a good script by Norman S. Hall and Anthony Coldewey and an original tale of merit by Fred Myton and Eddy White, with White also acting as associate producer. Picture will please throughout the westerns sectors and is another step in keeping Elliott among the peerage of saddle stars.

Story is foreworded as the saga of one of those fighting frontier marshals who helped found in western America the principles for which the nation now fights with her allies. Details of the contest between Elliott and his antagonists have to do with the fortunes of a group of independent oil well drillers who run up against violent opposition by a lawless band working for a legitimate major company which in itself is blameless.

Action starts with violence of a bank holdup and never slacks pace under direction of John English. Elliott comes back into a U. S. Marshal's post, after retirement and at first apparently operates against his old friends in the interest of the lawless group headed by Weldon Heyburn. Gabby Hayes is his comedic pal, who gets laughs and a moment of tenderness with a pet pooch who shares with his bearded master a tendency toward hay fever. Herbert Heyes ably plays a venal judge. Davison Clark has a sturdy role as leader of the independent drillers. Anne Jeffreys attractively takes care of the romantic interest. Seen to good account too, are Pierce Lydon, Charles Murray, Jr.

Direction by English drives hard and fast to hold the melodrama to spectacular action and to several outstanding thrills, especially a stagecoach battle with coach hurtling from wrecked bridge. This also is one of camera highlights in the excellent job by Ernest Miller.

One of the elements in Bill Elliott's conviction in restrained heroics is his commendable refusal to over-dude himself with such western togs as never were on plain or lea, but which, if kept up by some of the prominent saddle stars, soon will be adding a costume-design credit to the cast sheet.

Connors' Canadian Trek

Black Market Rustlers

(Western)

Western in modern togs, dealing with cattle rustling by auto van, but otherwise thoroughly in the pattern of the standard sagebrush melodrama, 'Black Market Rustlers' fills the bill for the dual-bill action fans. It adds to its riding, shooting and score-evening violence a direct appeal to audiences not to patronize the black markets, as a patriotic measure. Ray Corrigan, Dennis Moore and Max Terhune, veteran screen riders, have a solid story to cinch on in the George W. Weeks production, and Director S. Roy Luby gives the narrative a fast ride in the approved style.

Showing to excellent advantage is Evelyn Finley, rated along carefully through four pictures by Producer Weeks, and now demonstrating that she is a promising actress as well as an expert rider. She provides the romantic interest in 'Black Market' with Dennis Moore and is capable of more exacting assignments than she has yet had.

Paced by the Corrigan-Terhune-Moore trio, performances are all equal to demands of the script by Patricia Harper, relating the victory of government agents in stamping out cattle rustling de luxe.

Picturesque elements of the tale are well taken care of by Edward Kull's camera. Production has not been skimped, and entertainment of the order expected by western patrons.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

From all appearances it took President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill only 24 hours to decide upon the military phase of the war. The official announcement said the Allies are going to 'bomb, burn and ruthlessly destroy the people responsible for creating this war.' That, of course, means the continuation of all-out aerial warfare against Nazi Germany and Nazi-held parts of Europe. Whatever other military moves were decided upon are of such a nature that they cannot be divulged at present. The political decision, of far greater importance, in my humble opinion, than the military ones, will follow, and startling announcements can be expected in the coming week.

Henigson Suing Myron Selznick And Stromberg

Henry Henigson, yesterday filed suit in Superior Court against Myron Selznick and Hunt Stromberg claiming he was frozen out on a commission contract. Henigson petitioned the court to order Stromberg's newly formed independent producing unit to give an accounting of profits.

Petition relates that agreement was made Dec. 8, 1941, whereby Henigson was hired by Selznick on a salary plus commission basis to get business for Selznick and that Henigson was to get 50 percent of sums accruing from any independent motion picture deal the firm might make with Stromberg. An oral agreement provided, Henigson alleges, that even if he left Selznick's employ he was to receive half of all such money as might develop.

Henigson then stated that on July 29, 1942, Stromberg contracted with Selznick to give Selznick 10 percent of stock of his new company plus 10 percent of salary received for each production—to be paid to Selznick organization for negotiating the producing venture. Henigson charged that without his consent that agreement was purportedly cancelled by the two defendants on Nov. 6, 1942. Stromberg, the bill asserts, continues to produce motion pictures under the arrangement that Henigson alleges he helped negotiate and states that Stromberg will continue to receive profits from such production.

other affiliates operated by Arthur Rank hold top position with total of around 600 halls.

ABC has corporate setup of 8,000,000 shares of common stock, with Mrs. John Maxwell and Warners each holding 25%, and balance in hands of the public. Max Milder, WB general manager for Great Britain, shares managing direction of the circuit with E. Lightfoot.

Rank, who has enjoyed meteoric rise in British film circles, is chairman of Gaumont British and Odeon circuits. Latter have both Loew's and 20th-Fox heavily interested through the Metropolis and Bradford Trust, which controls GB.

Local film circles have been aware for several months that Warners was in the market to expand theatre holdings in the British Isles to compete with Rank's enterprises, and it is likely that Board of Trade approval was obtained before deal for the Mayfair circuit was consummated.

The ABC and GB circuits with various affiliates are by far the largest in this country. All others operating are groups of 75 or less halls, and most of these are confined to special districts and not spread out countrywise.

NEW DEAL TILTS WRITERS PAY

SWG committee insisted on $1,500 and $1,000 figure because few writers are employed on a week to week basis.

New contract is virtually the same as one Guild now has with the majors, with the exception of minor changes made to fit the peculiarities of the indie field. Members also will vote on proposed adoption of a revised Statement of Policy for the SWG. In announcing meeting, members are being told:

'The proposed minimum Basic Agreement is now in the hands of the printer, and you will receive a copy of the Agreement in ample time before the meeting to read and study its contents. The Agreement is identical in its substantative provisions with the Producer-Screen Writers Guild Minimum Basic Agreement of May 1942 which was adopted by the Guild and the major producers last year. Minor changes in the agreement with the independent producers were necessitated by differences in employment practices, but these do not alter the substantative provisions in any respect.'

Members entitled to vote but unable to attend meeting will be permitted to cast ballot by mail. Members of the committee which negotiated the new agreement are Sheridan Gibney, Mary C. McCall, Jr., Stanley Roberts, Morgan Cox and Carl Foreman.

Clause in contract with majors calling for adoption of a $125 per week minimum became effective May 1, but approval is awaiting an okay from the War Labor Board.

Redbook touches off the National Acclaim for Claudia

Claudia (Dorothy McGuire) and David (Robert Young), Redbook's famous characters, as they will appear in the film.

"Claudia" in

JUST as Alice in Wonderland grew fantastically when she ate a piece of the toadstool, so has Claudia grown by leaps and bounds — from a series of REDBOOK stories (twenty-seven so far) to three novels, a Broadway stage success, and now a movie.

It was back in 1938 that, at a now-historic luncheon, Rose Franken said she would write a story about a typical young married couple, a husband and wife who would remind everyone of someone they knew. Claudia and David are just that—young, terribly in love; Claudia naive, slightly haywire at times, but always delightful; David sympathetic, understanding, a bit more serious.

Our readers grew to know them and love them—suffered with them in their trials and tribulations, laughed at their less-serious predicaments, and enjoyed their triumphs. Letters came from all over the world telling us how much Claudia and David meant to our readers.

In due time the book world became interested, and the first novel of Claudia and David was so successful that Farrar and Rinehart have now published two more.

John Golden recognized the play possibilities, and in 1941 Claudia saw her name in bright lights on Broadway. She became an overnight success and the applause of New York theatergoers rang in her ears for month after month. Then she took to the road, so that the country at large, which had known her for years, could actually see and hear her. Folks came in such numbers that the road tour itself lasted a year.

As was inevitable (and we hope our readers politely refrain from shouting, "I told you so"), Hollywood has taken over Claudia—or maybe it is the other way around.

Twentieth Century-Fox will make the picture, with William Perlberg producing and Edmund Goulding directing it.

Arthur William Brown, who illustrated the stories for us, is now in Hollywood to do the posters for the movie advertising. We imagine he heaved a sigh of relief when he was offered the job, because it meant that he would be guaranteed a model. In the course of years with us, he's had a difficult time keeping girls who looked like Claudia on hand. Once they posed as Claudia, they started on careers that ended in marriage, Hollywood or South America. But that's all over now.

Dorothy McGuire is Claudia, and we mean just that. It's hard to visualize Claudia now without seeing Dorothy McGuire and vice versa. John Golden and Miss Franken had interviewed 209 girls for the part, and were almost ready to give up the play, when Dorothy McGuire walked into the office and got the rôle. She is young, refreshing, vivacious and charming, and thoroughly capable of playing comedy or tragedy. Robert Young will play David, the part assigned to Donald Cook in the Broadway production. Ina Claire is playing Claudia's mother, the rôle created by Frances Starr on the stage. Reginald Gardiner will be Jerry, the British playwright, and Olga Baclanova will play the opera star.

STATION BARS LABOR TALK; UNIONS PLAN TEST PROTEST

Washington, Aug. 19.—In what may become the first serious test of broadcasters rights to keep expressions, which do not jibe with their code, off the air since the Supreme Court decision, WHKC, Columbus, O., today eliminated several portions of an address by Richard Frankensteen, United Automobile Workers of America (CIO) vice prez. It was not clear here just what the station objected to but labor circles in Washington said the matter will be thoroughly investigated, with a strong protest to National Ass'n of Broadcasters in prospect.

'NAB talks about the FCC holding power over what goes on the air,' said one CIO source. 'Now, maybe, we can test that statement.'

John Moses, WHKC program director, made it plain that he acted in deference to the NAB code. UAW officers are still smarting from a notice sent last month by NAB advising members not to sell time for a series of transcriptions made for UAW. These were held controversial by NAB and suitable for presentatiton only on sustaining time. This, the labor people felt, is simply a slick way of trying to keep the programs off the air.

Petroff Gals Open Promisingly in 'Lido Revue'

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—'Club Lido Revue,' the second edition of the American Follies, opened last night, featuring the Boris Petroff Sweethearts of the USA, two ex-vaude acts, Petch and Deauville and Cortello's Hollywood Canine Mimics; Guy Cherney, singing emcee, and Roland Drayer's band of six pieces. The Petroff girls had just finished a 10-week engagement at the San Diego Coliseum. They are a welcome relief on the usually dull Lido floor.

Routines were well rehearsed and rendered in enticing costumes. The gowns worn in the picture parade were borrowed from the productions 'Coney Island,' 'China Girl,' 'Rio Rita,' 'The Lady of Burlesque,' 'Arabian Nights,' 'Hello Frisco,' 'Road To Morocco,' 'The Ziegfeld Girl' and 'Yankee Doodle Dandy.' Petch and Deauville, dance team of the old Orpheum circuit, gave a fine performance, but George Cortello and his Canine Mimics stole the bulk of the applause with imitations of Mae West, Ginger Rogers, Stepin Fetchit and Snow White.

Emcee Guy Cherney has grown two inches since his last local appearance due to elevated shoes. He moved the show along at a pleasant clip, giving now and then with a song.

Good lighting effects have been added and Roland Drayer's music has tuned down so that you can hear the tap routines now. Boris Petroff, producer of the show, is desirous of building up a circuit for presentation in theatres and night clubs throughout the country.

TRUCKSTER OFFS FRISCO 'DRUNKARD' ON NEW TACK

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—'The Drunkard,' burlesque, which has been playing at the Bush Street Music Hall here for the past six months, rings down its final curtain under the present management of Barry Breeden and Andy Wong, Sunday night.

A new version will bow Aug. 26, with many new members in the cast. Billie Baird, Johnny Singleton and Gay Lou, the leading lady, will be held over. In the olio, Dave Monohan and Garnet Morris, Xylophonists, will remain. The new production will be under theatrical producer George Leal, with Herb Ashton, Jr., who put on the New Orleans 'Drunkard,' acting as stage director.

The background of George Leal is interesting in the fact that he was formerly in the trucking business. Due to priorities and government subsidies, George found himself with plenty of money but in a very precarious situation as far as continued business was concerned. So, as the story goes, he sold out and plunged into show business. First, he acted as angel in a flier production, 'the Drunkard' in Reno. He dropped $3,500 in this venture. His next venture was 'The Rivals,' with Margaret Anglin, which opened in the Greek Theatre in Berkeley, and then went on a tour of ten one-night stands, winding up in San Diego, deficit four grand. Andy Wong has been called by the Army and had to move fast to get out of show business. George Leal took him up on a very attractive proposition.

Exhibs Are Warned Against Using Freone Subs

New York, Aug. 19.—Ed Kuykendall, president of MPTOA, in commenting on explosion of the cooling system in the Peabody theatre, Memphis, last week, issued a warning to exhibitors today against use of substitutes for freone. Latter chemical, frozen by the government, is used as fluid in majority of theatre cooling plants. Many exhibs and circuits are running out of freone and attempting to grab a substitute.

Kuykendall points out that unfavorable public reaction is likely unless extreme care is exercised in the use of the theatre cooling systems, and under no circumstances should makeshift chemicals be used in place of freone.

Blanket Deferments Asked by Studios On 48-Hr. Week

While studios are reported playing safe by asking for virtual blanket exemptions on 48-hour week for many departments, producer representatives said yesterday that representatives of union crafts will be consulted before any exemptions are put into effect. They said the exemption requests had to be filed with the War Manpower Commission before a certain deadline, but that details would be worked out with union heads after the requests are approved or rejected by the WMC.

Several organizations, including the Conference of Studio Unions, independent guild's Advisory Council and others have filed protests against granting of blanket exemptions. Unions and guilds feel they should be consulted, since memberships of some of them want to work 48 hours, while others favor five-day week if their services are not needed to aid the War effort.

Details of exemptions and other labor matters probably will be worked out at meeting of industry's Labor - Management Committee. General studio labor situation was discussed by major studio managers Wednesday at a conference with Pat Casey, Producer labor contact.

PRC GETS STUDIO OF OWN; BUYS PLASTER ON FINE ARTS

Mortgage of $250,000 on Fine Arts Studios held by WECO Corp., holding company subsidiary of Western Electric, has been purchased for cash by PRC, and latter company will move all production activities to the Fine Arts lot. Up to now, various PRC units have been using the Talisman and Chadwick studios, but after Columbia purchased Talisman during the past week, PRC figured to protect itself in buying the Fine Arts layout.

Mortgage held by WECO on the studio property resulted from loans, to Educational Films under former management of Western Electric subsidy, a number of years ago. It is reported that WECO recently took foreclosure steps against the property, and had a number of deals on to sell its mortgage interest to clear up the matter.

PRC is slated to start moving organization onto the lot immediately, with first picture slated to hit stages Sept. 20th being 'Jive Junction.'

TWO years ago a young singer went through the usual audition routine at CBS in New York and then was practically forgotten. With the summer coming on and the network compelled to fill many hiatus periods, her card was pulled from the files and she was called in for another test. Impressed, the network gave her a quarter-hour buildup spot. After a few weeks she began to get hot and the line began to form. She is now spotted on three commercials and as many more are beckoning. The singer is Eileen Farrell, now rated the best singing discovery in years, and the gal who reddened the faces of many CBS talent ferrets in New York.

VAL LEWTON, RKO's chiller producer, tried something new in selecting Shirley O'Hara for his forthcoming 'The Ghost Ship.' Lewton tested 30 girls before he cast Miss O'Hara in part, but gals were not tested in ordinary Hollywood sense of word. Instead of appearing before the camera, they were tested for their shadows and their voices, since a 'shadow girl' was wanted. Producer tested for most photogenic shadow and voice with greatest appeal. Miss O'Hara, while she will enact romantic lead opposite Russell Wade in film, currently is slated not to appear once before the camera, only her shadow being shown and her voice heard.

FUNNY situation has arisen in case of Metro's 'Ship Ahoy,' Red Skelton-Eleanor Powell dualer released some time ago. Current rage Frank Sinatra appeared in pic with Tommy Dorsey band, and when feature was in process of filming Sinatra begged studio to snap several production stills of him so he might send them to his family. Somebody put thumbs down on request. Metro now wants to take advantage of Sinatra's popularity by ballyhooing his appearance in film, but studio hasn't a single shot of crooner to plug picture.

NAB SAYS SUCCESS OF WAR LOAN BLITZ IS UP TO RADIO

Washington, Aug. 22.—Responsibility for the success or failure of the Third War Loan Drive Sept. 9-30, was placed squarely on the shoulders of radio Friday, with issuance of an 8-page illustrated bulletin by the National Association of Broadcasters. The bulletin will be distributed also through the Treasury War Finance Committee.

Radio faces 'the biggest and toughest job' it has ever faced, said Vincent F. Callahan, press and radio advertising chief for the Treasury War Bonds Division, and 'the success of the Third War Loan Drive depends to a great extent upon how well the radio industry realizes the immensity of this challenge.'

A statement by NAB president Neville Miller concluded by pointing out that the September drive calls for raising four times the amount raised in the last drive. 'We of radio shall set our sights accordingly and shall not let false optimism diminish our attack until the goal is achieved,' he said.

The bulletin included a partial lineup of network shows for the drive, including 21 Treasury star parades, one for each day of the drive, featuring Bing Crosby, Fannie Brice, the Bumsteads, Rochester, Fibber McGee and other headliners. Details of radio's all-out push through the OWI facilities were also outlined, with the promise of several special broadcasts yet to be announced.

'Participation by the local broadcaster is the key to success or failure,' asserted Callahan. 'However,' he emphasized, 'without wholehearted, 100% cooperation by local radio stations the Third War Loan Drive cannot be a success, no matter how much radio does on a network scale.'

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

In simple days of Uncle Tom's Cabeen
Before the actors flittered on a screen
A villain known as S. Legree
Was noted for his cruelty
And kept it up until the final scene.

Today you see a villain harsh and cold
Who changes as the drama is unrolled,
Beginning as a no-good guy,
Reforming as the scenes go by,
A rugged hero with a heart of gold.

The bloodhounds roared their deep and baneful bays
And never changed their harsh and brutal ways.
The Uncle Tommers, known of old,
Would be surprised if they were told
That hounds are playing heroes nowadays.

Holy Matrimony

(Comedy-Drama)

20th-Fox production. Stars Monty Woolley and Gracie Fields. Features Laird Cregar, Una O'Connor, Allan Mowbray, Melville Cooper, Franklin Pangborn, Ethel Griffies, Eric Blore, George Zucco, Fritz Feld. Balance of cast: William Austin, Montagu Love, Richard Fraser, Edwin Maxwell, Leyland Hodgson, Whitner Bissell, Goeffrey Steele, Lumsden Hare, Thomas Louden, Ian Wolfe, Milton Parsons, Alec Craig. Directed by John M. Stahl. Producer, Nunnally Johnson. Screenplay by Nunnally Johnson, from novel by Arnold Bennett. Photography, Lucien Ballard. Art direction, James Basevi and Russell Spencer. Set decorations, Thomas Little; associate, Paul S. Fox. Film editor, James B. Clark. Costumes, Rene Hubert. Special camera effects, Fred Sersen. Music, Cyril J. Mockridge. Music direction, Emil Newman. Tradeshown in Los Angeles, Aug. 21, 1943. Running time: 87 MINS.

Gracie Fields will perhaps amaze her legion of admirers, here and throughout the English speaking world, with a revelation of gifts never heretofore uncovered by the singing British comedienne. She doesn't chant a note in 'Holy Matrimony.' She doesn't indulge her usual clowning antics. Instead, she underscores a deep and richly human performance, calling for wide range of interpretation, in the role of the widow who wins and fights for the bored artist in Arnold Bennett's delightful fable of the man who erroneously was buried in Westminster Abby and of the other man who lived in precarious masquerade as his own former valet.

Matching Miss Fields' unique delivery is the infectious and characteristic enactment by Monty Woolley as the painter. Sustained with other fine contributions by Laird Cregar, Una O'Connor, Alan Mowbray, Melville Cooper, Eric Blore, among a dozen in top support, and given direction as telling as any John Stahl ever has turned in, the offering will regale all who relish humorous situation and engaging characters wittily depicted. For entertainment and quality of production, it should hold its own with the ranking pictures of the day, both in critical acclaim and potential grosses.

Nunnally Johnson, who wrote the screenplay as well as handling the production, invests it with smart showmanship on both counts, detracting nothing from the Bennett novel in making changes required for the screen. The amusing social satire is kept mellow. The characters are held to reality, not caricatured, as would be the temptation. And, as seldom the films have done, a painter is depicted with true semblance of an artist. Laughs reach high tide in the courtroom scene where Woolley, involved by his masquerade, refuses to show his identifying moles until uncovered by his wife, who has resented another woman's claim of prior wifehood. The painter has hidden his true identity for a time, if not his talents, in order to escape the responsibilities and boredoms of a 'great gentleman.' His valet has secretly made a proposed matrimonial tryst with the widow, in his employer's name, and when the valet dies, the artist happily goes through with the marriage while the servant is buried with great pomp in Westminster's hallowed halls.

Shrine Of Victory

(Documentary)

20th-Fox release of Casanave-Artlee Pictures production. Produced by Michael Balcon; assisted by Charles Crichton. Directed by Charles Hasse. Principal role played by Vrassidas Capernaros, assisted by officers and men of the Greek Navy. Tradeshown in Los Angeles, Aug. 21, 1943. Running time (four reels): 48 MINS.

The glories of ancient Greece and the valiance of its modern folk in defending the cradle of many liberties from the barbarous invaders until overwhelmed by sheer weight of numbers are depicted in this vivid, personalized narrative. In four reels, made in England, it is designed to provide an impressive image of the character and spirit of our war ally. In addition, it offers absorbing entertainment, alongside some of its grimmer and more tragic aspects, and will be a favorably received complement to any motion picture theatre bill.

Picture is personified through a petty officer of the Greek navy, member of a crew on a British-built destroyer, who tells about his homeland and his home folk on the Island of Crete. Mostly the recital deals with the common people of the nation, the vineyardists, the farmers, village folk, planting and harvesting in the lands around the immortal ruins of the Parthenon, of ancient amphitheatres, of rigorously virtuous Sparta, of the barren defiles of Marthon and a great and decisive day there. These mark the shrines of victories in the legends of a proud and influential people. Then is shown the refusal in this global war of the Greeks to surrender to the last and least of the neighboring Caesars and the Schikelgruber hordes from the north; the preparations for battle; concentration camps; doomed hostages; starving civilians; escape of the narrator and others of the young Greek warriors to England; their training there for combat service; the launching of their ship; their service in guarding the convoys.

Cameras also catch much of picturesque Greece. Film does a good and timely service in helping familiarize American audiences with the nature of the small but courageous ally which delayed the Germans at a time when it counted mightily for the coming Allied victory, in which the Hellenes will have a great share.

Hoosier Holiday

(Comedy-Dramá With Music)

Republic production. Cast: George Byron, Frank Kettering, Paul Trietsch, Charles Ward, Kenneth Trietsch, Dale Evans, Alice Ludes, Patt Hyatt, Jeanne Darrell, Denny Wilson, Emma Dunn, Lillian Randolph, George Hay, Thurston Hall, Isabel Randolph, Shug Fisher. Director, Frank McDonald. Associate producer, Armand Schaefer. Photography, Reggie Lanning. Editor, Ralph Dixon. Previewed in Hollywood, Aug. 21, 1943. Running time: 70 MINS.

'Hoosier Holiday' offers sound homely entertainment, with enough diversity to rank as a first-rate feature for Republic's market. Average picture-goer probably won't recognize many of the names unless he chances to be a radio fan as well. For this latter class, picture is especially opportune — there's Dale Evans, from Bergen-McCarthy air show, Hoosier Hotshots from National Barn Dance, Music Maids of Bing Crosby program, Isabel Randolph and Lillian Randolph who appear on the 'Gildersleeve' airer, and George Byron and George Hay, likewise from the airways. Cast is almost completely enlisted from radio, each contributing something distinctive.

Picture, in addition to providing music and comedy, is a tie-in with the land army program, now so essential a side of our public life. Great play is made to make audience land-army conscious, and accomplishes this goal in an interesting way, whole idea being made background of story.

Story thread is based around the five Baker boys, farmers all, being turned down by their draft board when they want to leave farm and enter the Air Corps. They're told by chairman of the board, Thurston Hall, an old suitor of their mother's, that they can't be drafted because they're needed to operate their farm.

Boys believe his decision is a personal one, predicated upon fact their mother turned him down to marry another, and straightway plot to make him change his mind by courting his five daughters, when they come home from finishing school. Their idea is to make themselves so objectionable to Hall that he will allow them to enter Air Corps to get rid of their unwelcome attentions toward his daughters.

This framework enables boys, four of them the Hoosier Hotshots, to contribute several musical numbers similar to type for which they're noted on the air. It's eccentric corn, and is put over in fine fashion. Music Maids, too—four being Hall's daughters — offer melodious war-

with Robert Arden

Recent developments at Quebec indicate that important political decisions will be revealed very shortly. The recall of Soviet Ambassadors, Maiski and Litvinoff, the arrival of the Chinese Foreign Minister at Quebec, and the obvious shift in military strategy to the Far East are good indications that politics are coming in for as much consideration as the military aspect. It may very well be that a continuation of air raids on Europe will go hand in hand with important actions against Japan. In the meantime political problems affecting America, Great Britain and The Soviet Union are being ironed out —especially who is to be in the driver's seat.

Radio Tube Users Wait New WPB Ruling This Wk.

Washington, Aug. 22. — The Office of Civilian Requirements last week blocked issuance of a WPB release to announce the granting of authority to tube manufacturers to turn out several types of scarce and vitally needed tubes.

Although the tube production program will not be affected, this marks the first occasion where OCR has actually asserted itself in the radio picture, carrying its disagreement with the radio and Radar Branch to WPB chief Donald M. Nelson and coming off with a minor victory.

OCR was not actually opposed to the program outlined by the radio and Radar Branch, but did object to announcement of the tube program piecemeal. A comprehensive announcement on tube prospects is looked for this week.

It appears now that OCR authority will not extend to the broadcasting industry, but will be confined to the manufacture of radio equipment, etc. The OCR amusements section, which was originally believed to include broadcasting in its sphere of activity, has learned rather definitely that it is not in the broadcasting picture, with the authority there remaining in the FCC and BWC.

As for its place in the civilian radio equipment production field, OCR functions mainly as a coordinating, or advisory agency. Actual scheduling remains with the radio and Radar Branch, which will, however, receive recommendations from OCR. OCR's actual weight in the matter has not been conclusively tested.

FILM RANGERS OUT TO BEAT 1942 BOND SALES

New York, Aug. 22.—The presidents of major companies, distribution heads and other execs, in a meeting over the week-end, planned to speed the sales of war bonds during the Third War Loan Campaign. Committee is designated as 'Rangers.'

George Schaefer, chairman of the Rangers committee, predicted that this drive would top last year's 'Commando' sale of $50,000,000 in bonds. W. Randolph Burgess, chairman of the New York State War Finance Committee, said, 'We rely on the industry to do a large chunk of the selling, but that is not the only advantage to be gained.

'The showmanship ability of the industry will undoubtedly be reflected in general sales, excluding those within the industry.'

Among those attending were, Adolph Zukor, Nick Schenck, Leonard Goldenson, Malcolm Kingsberg, Bob Mochrie, Ned Depinet, Joe Vogel, William Rodgers, Abe Lastfogel, Dan Michaelove, Tom Connors, Major Leslie Thompson, Barney Balaban, Walton Clement, Spyros Skouras, Arthur Mayer, Walter Vincent and John O'Connor.

FILM BIZ MAPS BOND SALES

atres of the country assisting Treasury Department in disposing of War Bonds. Exhibs and the film biz are to cooperate with other organizations to put over the mammoth war financing program, Griffth declared, and it's overall teamwork rather than various interests competing in selling the securities.

Arch Bowles, general manager of Fox West Coast Theatres, presided at the session for president Charles P. Skouras. Following luncheon, Ann Jamison, led singing of 'The Star Spangled Banner,' and brief talks were made by Robert Poole, Si Fabian, Griffith, R. H. Moulton, Ray Beall, and Francis Harmon.

SEEK 50 MILLION SALES

Griffith stressed necessity of close harmony with all other industries and participants, and pointed out that the film industry did not want to steal the show. He stated that the Treasury, in this campaign, is anxious to sell one bond or more to at least 50,000,000 persons. Moulton, Southern California chairman of War Finance Committee of the Treasury Department, stated that plans were under way to solicit every man, woman and child in the area for bond purchases during the campaign.

Skouras, when called on for comment, stated he—as president of National Theatres—will recommend to NT board of directors that the company purchase $5,000,000 in War Bonds during the drive, and promised that California exhibitors would go all-out for the campaign, as they had on every previous drive for the war effort.

Gus Metzger pledged purchase of $250,000 in bonds by theatre companies operated by himself, Lou Metzger and William Srere.

TEXAS BLACKOUT

Bob O'Donnell told the assemblage of plan for statewide blackout in Texas for half hour on night of Sept. 8, with the public requested to sit at home radios and listen to dramatization of importance of buying bonds by the Governor and others.

Harmon stated that distributors would make current feature releases available to all exhibitors who wanted to set up War Bond Preems, where purchase of bond would be necessary for admission. He also suggested that California exhibs could obtain war heroes from various battlefronts for personal appearances in theatres to hypo sales.

Industry state chairmen were present from western states, with group including: Frank Newman of Seattle; Bob White of Oregon; John Rugar of Salt Lake City; Bob Garland of Denver; O'Donnell of Texas; and George Tucker of New Mexico. Arizona exhibs in for the meeting were: Harry Nace, Ray Olmstead, Louis Long and George Diamos.

Disney Will Slow Pic Work to Get Mexican Honor

Walt Disney, arriving here today from Detroit after month's business trip east, planes to Mexico City tomorrow to receive from President Camacho the Order of Aguila Azteca for 'merit and friendship' in connection with his film productions.

Picture assignments, for the Skirball-Spitz outfit or on loan, will be subject to radio commitments as to time. Lad's screen bow will be made at Universal, on loanout, in the Donald O'Connor starrer, starting this week, after which he goes into story Skirball is preparing as his second vehicle.

Skirball disclosed yesterday that he has first refusal on any or all the other juves on the 'Quiz Kids' for pictures.

Producer in discussing plans also revealed that he and Spitz had dropped negotiations for filming 'Duffy's Tavern,' for which Paramount subsequently paid $150,000 for one picture, with four more annual options, because deal was too heavy to handle.

Louis Cowan, who owns the 'Quiz Kids' radio show, is not getting the reported 20% fee for releasing Joel Kupperman to films, but only 10% for which he also handles all expenses, according to Skirball. Latter referred to deal as 'sacrifice' on Cowan's part for benefit of the Quiz Kid baby's chance in pictures.

Unemployment Pay For Idle Scribes OK'd by State

plied to film extras and other industry workers, who are told to 'get War jobs' when they apply for unemployment benefits.

Frank Partos, SWG secretary, in a special bulletin to writers marked 'important,' is telling them:

'Department of Employment reverses former decision denying unemployment benefits for screen writers.

'In a test case before the California Department of Employment the Screen Writers Guild, as amicus curiae for a member, prevailed in establishing the rule that writers are not to be deprived of unemployment benefits by reason of:

'1. The writer's refusal to accept employment in a factory at work for which he has no training and which is not related to his usual profession;

'2. The writer's engaging in writing material between jobs for the purpose of sale to a prospective employer.

'The Department had previously refused to pay benefits to writers who would not take jobs in factories. They said this was a refusal to take 'suitable employment.' The Department also evolved the theory that writers who between employments write story outlines, treatments, etc., are 'self-employed,' and accordingly are not entitled to benefits.

'As a result of the intervention of the Guild, both of these policies are now reversed. Writers who are unemployed and who have refrained from asking for benefits because of previous refusals may now go to the Department of Employment and claim benefits to which they are lawfully entitled.'

Reversal of policy by the Department of Employment is expected to result in a new drive by film extras and other groups to collect unemployment benefits. Extra leaders take the position they pay for the insurance and that they should not be forced to accept jobs for which they have no training and for which many of them are not physically fitted.

TAX REVEALS NEW BO RECORD

U. S. TELLS 15 MILLION NICK IN MO.

Washington, Aug. 22.—June was the best month of the year at the box-office, according to figures released yesterday by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The amusement tax collections amounted to $15,750,518.85 and were topped only in November of last year, when the national total missed $16,000,000 by less than $80,000. About nine out of every ten of these dollars stem from motion picture admissions, it is estimated.

July collections, on June business, were better than $4,500,000 above those of the previous month, which totaled only $11,109,476.77, and were more than $1,000,000 above the year's previous high of $14,615,615 collected during May on April business.

A sharp rise was noted also in the collections from the Third New York (Broadway) area, with the total going to $2,403,247.94, of which theatre admissions raised $2,223,605.14. Broadway showed only $1,563,287 for the theatres in June (on May business) and only $1,678,230 ($1,563,278 for the theatres) in the July, 1942, collections.

bling, and they're headed by Dale Evans, whose singing charms as well as her personality is pleasing. Entire picture is interspersed with music to appeal favorably, and comedy is cut to popular pattern. Story was contrived as showcase for radio talent which appears to advantage throughout.

Dale Evans and George Byron top audience interest, and are ably seconded by Isabel Randolph, girls' zany aunt, Thurston Hall and Emma Dunn. Four Hoosier Hotshots, Music Maids and Shug Fisher make melody in nice fashion, and whole affair was directed with a facile hand by Frank McDonald. Armand Schaefer, as producer, endowed picture with appropriate values and Reggie Lanning's photography is entirely up to par.

WANTED! McCOY 'MAMIE'

There's a prize film and radio part kicking around for a gal who not only talks New Yorkese but must prove she came by the patois honestly. That is, she must have lived in Brooklyn or the vicinity of the 10th Ave. gashouse district of Manhattan. Seeker after such a character is Ed Gardner, the Archie of 'Duffy's Tavern.' Gardner, who went to school at Astoria (PS4) holds that imitators sound too phony and the one who is picked from the auditions as 'Miss Duffy' must be the real Miss McCoy. Young & Rubicam agency will conduct the trials, with Gardner in the control room, his sensitive ear cocked for the real thing. Replacer of Shirley Booth will be used in both the radio and picture versions of 'Duffy's Tavern.'

WPB PLAN TO EASE BRITISH FILM JAM

Washington, Aug. 22.—Lincoln V. Burroughs, Harold Hopper's assistant at WPB, plans a trip to England next month to try to break the jam in raw stock coating there.

England has been receiving all its film base from this country, and managing to coat enough there for its own civilian and military needs. Damage to some of the laboratories and manpower difficulties have threatened the continuation of this program.

Burroughs is hopeful that British laboratories can coat sufficient stock to take care of a substantial portion of its military needs for the European and African theatres.

He made it plain that his trip does not imply any threatened shortage in raw stock for our own civilian needs.

Screen Players Ask Union of Own In Petitions

Circulation of petitions asking a direct union charter grant for film extras was started on studio sets over weekend by the Screen Players Union. At the same time, SPU leaders criticized the asserted 'open door' policy of the Screen Actors Guild, and announced that if a charter is secured by the atmosphere players new members will be admitted only with rare exception. Statement of SPU follows:

'It is our inalienable right to vote and elect our own officers from the ranks of the B membership, and that demand is being expressed daily in the unanimous desire of 90% of the B actors contacted, in getting their names on a petition of the Screen Players Union. The silly chatter of some of the Screen Actors Guild tops, quoted as saying we could take in 20,000 members if we had our own union, only recalls to our mind their big mistake in doing that very thing in the inception of the present Guild.

'In answering that red herring, let us state clearly we are severely criticizing their present open door to new members; also that our intent is to take in no more new members with rare exceptions, so that the withdrawals will bring us into a healthy condition, and anticipating the day when the boys in the armed services return to join with us.

'We are fully aware of the present desires and complaints of the majority of bit, extra and atmosphere players and are confident that there are men and women among us who, when duly elected, can judicially present our problems to the producers and win their confidence and respect.'

It has been stated that when sufficient signatures are obtained, the SPU will apply directly to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America and the American Federation of Labor for a separate union charter. The SAG has called a meeting of the Class B membership for Sept. 19, at which time its plan for a separate setup for Class B members will be revealed.

THEATRES, RADIO BENEFIT PAY RAISE EDICT BY WMC

Washington, Aug. 23.—Most of the nation's film houses, fighting to keep their employes from better paying industries, will benefit by a new War Labor Board order issued tonight for small firms with 30 or fewer employes. This is a simplification of general order No. 31, issued last June 1, and covering wage increases.

Under the new amendment, the little businesses are permitted to pay merit increases without specific WLB approval, providing the total increase to any individual does not exceed 10 cents per straight time hour during any year, starting with July 1, 1943. In addition, all rates in the firm must not exceed an average of five cents per straight-time hour for all employes whose wages and salaries are subject to WLB jurisdiction.

The increases must not 'result in rates exceeding the highest rate paid by the employer between July 1, 1942, and June 30, 1943,' for similar jobs.

In addition to theatres, small radio stations, dance halls, and other branches of the amusement industry are covered by the amendment.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

When Troubadours went hiking in Provencal days of France
They paused beneath a balcony and crooned a sweet romance.
At times they got a giggle from a casement builded high
And now and then a crooner drew a rosebud or a sigh.
At times he played a wayside inn, at times a ducal hall
And warbled for a bowl of soup and bedding in a stall.
He had no emissary then to spread his vocal fame
Nor any flack to plaster all the roadways with his name.
But when he warms his tonsils now beneath a silver moon
A million casements open wide to hear his lovelorn tune.
The Troubadours of ancient days were dumb though handsome guys.
They never grasped the secret that it pays to advertise.

Don't squeal now, gals, but if you look back to the 12th century you can find a flock of Frankie Sinatras singing their various ways along the lanes and highways of Provence. They didn't thumb their various ways on account of there was nothing to thumb in those days except a horse, which was generally occupied by a knight armed with a battle axe and a suspicious glare. Now and then a knight toted a 12th century model guitar along with his cutlery and did a bit of troubadouring on the side but his songs were martial rather than marital, chiefly about the decision he won last Saturday in the weekly joust at Aix, or wherever they held their weekly jousts in those days. Troubadouring at that time was a serious pastime. If a gal squealed or swooned she was spanked and sent to bed before curfew.

Psychologists are viewing with alarm and wondering what to do about adolescent squealers when a swooner comes to town, but they won't do anything about it, as usual. Your grandma felt the same way about her favorite matinee idol but suppressed her emotions. A good squeal would have ruined her whalebone stays.

'The Unknown Guest' gives Monogram a feature that should fit handily into the melodrama market. Generally well-produced and directed, picture sustains the mood it sets out to achieve and winds up satisfactorily for all except the most bloodthirsty, who might wish that the hero had been the cold-blooded killer he was made to appear.

Script by Philip Yordan mixes together such ingredients as a lonely hunting lodge, a man apparently on the dodge from the law after a Chicago gang killing, a young girl, an old couple who disappear, and similar characters. There are some obvious tries at over-selling the audience on the horror of a supposed killing of the old couple and murderous instincts of the hero, but over-all results forgive these attempts.

Victor Jory, assumed to be a killer on the lam, takes refuge at the hunting lodge of his aunt and uncle just as they leave for a winter vacation. He retains the hired girl, Pamela Blake, to look after himself and customers. His occupancy and the suspicions of a small-town real estate operator arouse fear that he has done away with the old couple, but after circumstances build towards his guilt, the final few feet give him a clean slate and the love of the girl.

Jory gets convincing toughness into his character, making it almost hard to believe he isn't actually a killer, despite the finale. Miss Blake swings the femme lead excellently, as do Harry Hayden, the fussy realtor; Emory Parnell, the sheriff; Nora Cecil and Lee 'Lasses' White, the aunt and uncle. Others display good characterizations under direction of Kurt Neumann in this production by Maurice and Franklin King.

Jackson Rose did good photography and other technical credits measure up, to make this one better than average for the Monogram customers.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

The recapture of Kharkov brought into brightly outlined appearances the creation of 'spheres of influence' in Europe. As a direct consequence of political and military events these spheres of influence must receive additional attention and increased importance because it is becoming more and more apparent that events are likely to turn into a race for exploitation of military victories, extension of influence and ultimate application of political ideology. The Quebec conference resulting in 'military decisions of utmost importance' will unquestionably deal with these new and important aspects.

Three Russian War Pix Made in Action Zones In Preparation

Washington, Aug. 23. — Three new Soviet documentaries are in preparation, the Russian embassy announced here today. First is 'The People's Avengers,' dealing with the guerrilla warfare behind the Nazi front lines. Shots for it were made by 17 Soviet cameramen who crossed the enemy lines with their equipment to join the guerrilla bands and photograph their activities.

The second, 'Wings of the People,' will record the lives and exploits of heroic Soviet fliers. It is being made by Joseph Doselsky, producer of a number of Russian documentaries.

The third one, dealing with life in the German occupied Ukraine, has just been started. Here also, cameramen have gone behind the Nazi lines to make their camera recordings. Soviet Central Newsreel Studio now is issuing a 'Union Cinema Newsreel' six times monthly, with part of the material coming from America and Britain.

MENSER SAYS NBC PLANS BLENDING PIX, TELEVISH

Blending of radio and pictures in the post-war development of television is being closely studied by NBC, which has dispatched its program head, C. L. Menser, here to look in on technical operations in the production of films. He is passing a week visiting picture studios and conferring with producers and directors on talent which would fit into the television picture as an adjunct to their film activities.

Menser sees television as a certain future development but is more concerned with present production problems of radio. Paucity of writers for comedy shows is the biggest worry just now, what with a steady flow of that type of program to the nets this fall. Some are incubated on small stations but they are not being developed fast enough, he declared. NBC is revamping its Saturday morning schedules to showcase new shows and talent for sponsorship, but the crying need for writers is everywhere evident. Turning to colleges for comedy writers is not the fertile ground it used to be, said Menser, due to the draft and other exigencies of war.

Creation of a post-war television planning committee to formulate plans for NBC's expansion of radio was announced yesterday in New York, with Menser serving on the panel with John Royal, William Hedges, O. B. Hanson and John T. Williams. Menser finishes off the week here and then goes to Frisco for a few days before returning to New York.

IA DEMANDS PACT REOPENING

also have been clamoring for a meeting and probably will oppose any move by Producers to skip negotiations this year.

Requests that Producers be asked to open parleys with IA studio locals the first of October are being filed with Richard Walsh, IA International prexy, at union headquarters in New York. This probably means that negotiations will be conducted in the east, with Walsh sitting in to aid the local boys.

Current IATSE agreements expire Dec. 31 of this year, and locals are anxious to complete negotiations in advance of that date in order to avoid any necessity of waging a fight for retroactive agreements on any adjustments that may be granted. Because of the difficulty of getting percentage increases, unions will center their activities on working conditions.

WANT VACATION CLAUSES

Many of the crafts are especially anxious to have vacation clauses inserted in their contracts. It is certain some attention also will be paid to work guarantees, sick leaves, etc., labor tops taking the position that only through guaranteeing security can the industry hold its top men because of the opportunity to earn more in defense work.

Herbert Sorrell and other leaders in the Conference are expected to renew their bid for work guarantees. Deal leading to such guarantees had been tentatively set when the 48-hour program was broached, but move was defeated when some of the film crafts declined to go along.

PRODUCERS WOULD SKIP YR.

Film Technicians Local 683, Screen Office Employes Guild, Screen Cartoonists Guild and Screen Set Designers are certain to put in bids for vacation clauses. Local 683, through Secretary Norval Crutcher and Business Representative John Martin, have been leading the vacation fight for some time.

Producer representatives intimated some time ago that they would seek to skip negotiations this year and merely renew current agreements. Union leaders, however, believe the time is ripe to get improved working conditions and are certain to press their demands.

They will conduct separate campaigns to acquaint their fellow workers with the importance of the campaign.

These include Frank Carothers, secretary of the Motion Picture International Committee; Carl C. Cooper, international vice-prexy of the IATSE; Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions; David Butler, Screen Directors Guild; Ralph Byrd, Screen Actors Guild, and Jane Murfin, Screen Writers Guild.

30,000 MILES OF LAFFS—TALE OF SO. PACIFIC BY JOE LEWIS

New York, Aug. 23.—Back from a 30,000 mile tour of Yank bases in the South Pacific, including the Fiji Islands, New Caledona, Australia and New Guinea, Joe E. Lewis today unfolded an uproarious tale of 10 weeks' experiences that might well set a pattern for a new vaudeville monolog. Lewis sported a four-foot sabre which he 'wrested' from Jap officer he came across in the New Guinea jungle. The Jap was dead.

He also brought back 'for Toots Shor a menu of food available for fighting boys in the South Pacific which virtually spans the gamut of delectable meats, mutton chops, roast lamb, sirloin, etc. But New Guinea can keep its cocoanut milk,' says Lewis. 'To me it's Dutch Cleanser.'

Lewis told of doing a show before 40 men in the jungle, although usually he played before 2,500 to 3,000 at a time, stating he never worked harder than he did for those 40 kids. Gave them his entire repertoire, from 'Sam' to 'Poor Little February,' and ad libbed at a pace that would have clicked at a murder trial. But not a murmur from those 40. 'I knew there was life in the truck because I could hear them breathing. I finally gave up in disgust and asked the commanding officer what goes. That's how I learned the 40 guys had mumps.'

Everywhere he went, in the most remote jungle areas, he was greeted with the same cracks: 'How's the horses?' 'How's Chez Paree?' 'And Give Us Sam.' 'How was I to know those kids in the jungle, 10,000 miles away, knew my routine?'

Lewis got the biggest laugh while doing a jungle show in teeming rain. Suddenly a huge rat darted across the stage. Lewis piped up: 'Where you going, Bud?' And in what the comedian describes as the most beautiful timing he'd ever seen, the rat looked up quizzically at Lewis for half a minute, then ran off. 'If I could find a rat, I'd keep the gag in,' says Lewis.

Austin Mack also made the trip as accompanist, but there were few pianos and when there were, 'you had to play between keys to get notes' or else the accordion bogged down in muggy weather. Lewis says the boys are thirsty for entertainment, and that everybody with a few gags and a few songs should go over, that they'll never regret or forget the experience. The comedian was gone 10 weeks.

of 'This Is the Army' in three Warners houses; 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' in two Fox West Coast theatres, and 'Mr. Lucky' and 'Saludos Amigos' at the Pantages and Hillstreet. Respective estimates for these high-powered draws account for $179,500 of the over-all total. 'Army' will pile up tremendous $73,000 at the Downtown, Hollywood and Wiltern. 'Bell' doing four shows a day at the United Artists and two at the Carthay Circle, will get estimated $34,500 at the downtown house and $18,000 at the Wilshire showcase for a $52,500 total.

'Mr. Lucky' and 'Saludos' is giving the Pantages new record with likely $27,000 and will hit the same figure at the Hillstreet. Film garnered approximately $24,000 for Saturday-Sunday business at the two houses. Also way up in the money is Xavier Cugat on the stage at the Orpheum with $26,000 in sight for the week. 'Dixie' in a third week at the Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramounts is still in the big money with approximately $30,000 coming up on nine days.

'The Youngest Profession' and 'Assignment in Brittany' day-dating at Loew's State, Chinese and Ritz will garner $35,500, which, while good business, is not up to level of films recently playing the F-WC first-run houses.

LEGIT OPENING

THE ROSE MASQUE

San Francisco, Aug. 24.—Three thousand dollars worth of paid admission went applause-happy tonight at the opening of the comic opera version of Johann Strauss' 'Die Fledermaus' under the new burlesque title of 'The Rose Masque' at the Curran Theatre.

Its scene set in Vienna in 1890, background of Strauss gag-comedied and risqued from first curtain to finale. The show is entertaining to the point of distraction, from the entrance to the Einstein villa, in which lamps are dimmed by the blow of a lamplighter, to the scene in Rosalind's bedroom and to the close of the second act, after a serious ballerina number in the court's ballroom where a snappy Can-can is featured.

Third act finale brought capacity house to its feet with cheers and bravos for clever entertainment by an excellent cast and brilliant singing of the lead roles and exceptional routine of the ensemble.

Show is set for two weeks, with another two-week option, according to advance sales which run well over $15,000. It should do a nice six weeks.

Dialog is by Eric Aeiter, lyrics by Eric Weiler and Thomas Martin. Reinhold Schunzel produced, and music is under direction of Walter Herbert.

Cast comprises John Garois, Marita Farelt, Joseph Sultivan, Margaret Spencer, George Buonson, James Westerfield, Sue Bell Brown, John Wengraf, Robert Ainsley, Ruby Asquith, Frank Marasco and Charles Goodwin.

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Joe Public walks along the street with money in his jeans,
More wealth than he had ever known in old and bygone scenes.
One time he was particular about the coin he spent,
And shopped for films as on his cautious weekly way he went.
But now he sees the A's and B's and doesn't care a whoop,
Which may explain why swarms of B's are buzzing 'round the loop.

When summer rolled around in the old days and Joe Zilch disappeared from Broadway he went up to Oneida county and helped his uncle with the oats and corn and came back in September with a glowing tan and told the gang he developed his open-air complexion lolling on the beach at Cape Cod or Newport or some such fashionable lolling place. His complexion would take on an extra tinge of red if some traducer so much as hinted that he had spent the summer in vital labor on a farm. That would have made him a hick, which you couldn't call anybody on Broadway in those days unless you smiled when you said it and had a pair of brass knuckles handy. Now it is a noble name, a term of approbation. You can't get into the conversation in show business unless you out-cabbage your fellow conversationalist, who will go you one better with a dissertation on the cultivation of tomatoes and how much sunlight and irrigation it takes to produce a rutabaga. How long it will last depends on the length of the war. When the world returns to its peacetime status the actor will return to his regular job of acting and the farmer will return to his regular job of farming, and old Mother Earth will feel more contented. Nobody likes to be pestered with amateurs, even though their names are emblazoned on marquees.

MCA BIDS FOR SINATRA

SWOONER IS SUED BY 10 PERCENTER

Negotiations for the purchase by Music Corp. of the interests of Tommy Dorsey and his manager, Leonard Vannerson, in the contract of Frank Sinatra have been revived after previous deals had collapsed. Understood that Dorsey, who owns one-third of the swooner's contract, is not too eager to sell although dickering is said to be around a $50,000 sale figure. Vannerson's bit is 10% and Frank Cooper of General Amusement is also cut in for 10%. General Amusement holds a seven-year management contract with Sinatra, which would be unaffected regardless of the outcome of MCA negotiations with Dorsey and Vannerson.

Jules Stein, MCA prexy, admitted a deal was brewing again but said it was merely a revival of former negotiations. Stein is reported willing to service the singer without charge until the General Amusement contract expires if a deal for the takeover can be consummated. Henry Jaffe, attorney for Sinatra, arrived yesterday from the east to sit in on the negotiations to protect his client's interests.

Sinatra yesterday was named defendant in a suit for $17,000 filed in superior court here by Attorney Joseph Ross for Vannerson. Amount asked represents Vannerson's 10% interest in Sinatra's contract, which would place the singer's earnings at $170,000 since he left the Dorsey band. No action has been taken by Dorsey although it is reported that neither Vannerson nor the band leader has received any payment from Sinatra on the contract.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

The Quebec conference is over—and from all we know the political problems are still unsolved. As a matter of fact, the mystery of the conference has been heightened by the rumored resignation of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles. The announced decision on future military action, heartwarming as it is, did not fill the emptiness created by the lack of political information. The great unsolved question in everybody's mind still is, can the ultimate choice between compromise and conflict be averted by honest action now?

BIZ FIRMS TAKING PICTURES TO VENEZUELA BACKWOODS

Co-operation of private American and British business firms in Venezuela is making possible widespread showings of motion pictures in remote communities of that South American country, according to the Motion Picture Society for the Americas. Concerns, in many instances, are supplying transportation facilities, electric power and technicians, thus giving their own employes opportunity to see good entertainment while aiding the Society.

Product being filmed throughout the rich oil-bearing areas of coastal and eastern Venezuela includes 16 mm. shorts, newsreels and feature pictures, showings being made despite almost insurmountable transportation and power difficulties.

In some communities, such as the small oil town of San Joaquin, private automobile assures monthly transportation of portable Society equipment from Caracas for screenings. Private facilities also have been volunteered to transport cameras and personnel between Jusepin, Quiriquiri and Caripito, and between La Cruz and Punta de Mata.

During a recent showing at Quiriquiri, town's power plant broke down, but local theatre, serviced by an auxiliary power plant, turned over its facilities free. At Santa Ines, power plant was so small that three-quarters of the town was darkened to supply enough current to operate camera and sound equipment.

In a single month's swing of Society personnel through remote Venezuela spots, pictures were shown to more than 15,000 persons.

and would provide a cushion for workers at the end of the current emergency.

He also pointed out that it would make possible increases, where management and labor were in accord, but where tilts were disapproved by the War Labor Board for fear of disturbing wage stabilization. Only yesterday the Board disapproved an increase for Chicago projectionists, although the increase had been approved by the theatre management and the union. It is understood that the proposed plan has been discussed with certain WLB officials and other Government authorities and that a majority of them were inclined to look with favor on the proposal.

Other craft leaders in the Conference, including Prexy Herbert Sorrell, were pleased with the recommendation, and it is understood plan will be discussed with various rank and file memberships. If the latter indicate their approval, demands for War Bond tilts will be prepared for submission to major companies.

Conference leaders agreed yesterday that drive will be made when contracts are reopened for improved working conditions. These will include work guarantees, sick leave and vacations. Pomerance and other leaders warned that conditions should not be overlooked even if increases are granted on the proposal to be paid in non-negotiable securities.

Conference committee has been appointed to read contracts of various affiliates with the idea of where possible to make certain clauses universal. First move will be to see that all deals call for a 100% union shop, with union having the right to appeal layoffs, etc. Question of seniority, job security, vacations and sick leave will then be taken up. Another meeting of Conference will be called shortly to discuss various contract points, as well as proposed wage increases.

U. S. FILMS MISSING BOAT IN SO. AMERICA SAYS CHILEAN

New York, Aug. 24.—'U. S. film producers are missing unusual opportunity to foster better relations among people of South America because of superficial treatment of pictures depicting Latin America,' according to Jorge Delano, Chilean film producer, South America's top cartoonist, and editor and publisher of 'Topaze' Chilean magazine. He is in America at the invitation of the State Department and the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs to study film production methods.

While here, on behalf of pro-allied South American governments, he is trying to build up good will and greater understanding between the film peoples of the two countries and create a spirit of cooperation to replace present competition.

'With a potential market of 130,000,000 Latin American film goers, U. S. producers have thus far only succeeded in losing popularity in South American countries, particularly among lower class people, who resent treatment accorded subjects pertaining to their countries,' Delano said, adding, 'failure of U. S. film makers to do a real job has resulted in upsurge of Argentina.

'Twenty per cent of the Argentine market has been taken over by Argentine and Mexican films. U. S. pix are still far in front with 80 per cent but because of resentful attitude toward U. S. pix Argentine product is making greater inroads, which is resulting in infiltration of non-democratic ideologies. Argentine pictures may break down all the good Disney, almost alone among U. S. film makers, is doing.'

RUSS ACTOR TELLS HOW HE SHOWED PIX ON SOVIET FRONT

Dramatic account of how the Soviet Red Army uses its show folk, screen and stage actors, to divert soldiers right off the battle lines, as well as in other national morale channels, was told here yesterday by Prof. Solomon Michoels, Russian actor, and Lieut. Col. Itzik Feffer, Russian poet, during their visit at Warners studio in making rounds of Hollywood as observers of American production methods and to promote cultural ties.

Enlistment of actors, the Soviet visitors stressed, in the Red Army is no longer accepted, the Russian government feeling that they best serve their nation's war effort as contributors to soldier and public esprit.

Prof. Michoels was in charge of the theatre on the Russian front during the early days of the war. He told of playing to thousands of soldiers in improvised theatres in the woods around Leningrad, often with the Germans only a few miles away. He said the performances at the Moscow Jewish State Theatre, of which he is director, continued throughout the Nazi air blitz on the Russian capital.

The government assigned a special patrol plane to fly over the theatre and to give warning when German bombers approached the neighborhood. At such junctures the male players would take their assigned stations as air raid wardens on the theatre roof while actresses and audiences retired to bombproofs, where the show would continue. Largest audience in his experience, Prof. Michoel stated, was 40,000 persons gathered in the Moscow Park of Culture, while Liet. Col. Feffer told of the smallest audience—one man who had been accounted missing in action but showed up for a repeat performance after a first show had been put on for a tank corps near Kharkov.

Many stage and screen stars and picture projectionists have been awarded highest decorations of the Soviet Union, the visitors said.

The Soviet never will make a separate peace with Hitler, Prof. Michoels predicted.

Gotta Be Union

You gotta be union, and how, to work in the entertainment field. Phil Ohman, Jan Garber, Henry King and Parkyakarkus found that out yesterday when they showed up on Monogram's 'Sweethearts of the U.S.A.' set. Boys displayed 19 union cards, including Musicians, Screen Actors Guild, American Federation of Radio Artists, Actors Equity and American Guild of Variety Artists. Parky had an expired ticket in Carpenters local, but that was disqualified.

SDG's Brown To WB's Casting Department

Joseph Daniels Is Elected Prexy of Screen Designers

Joseph Daniels is the new president of the Screen Set Designers. He succeeds Joseph Sternad, who resigned following his appointment as assistant art director. A new vice-prexy to replace Daniels will be elected at next month's membership meeting.

Designers also adopted a rule that no member receiving a promotion will be given a withdrawal card unless he receives a salary 60 times the basic hourly rate weekly of a designer. This was aimed to block any move to promote designers to assistant art directors at less coin than they received in former classification.

Membership approved provisions dealing with reciprocal agreement with Art Directors, as worked out by Business Representative Ed Mussa. Union also authorized Mussa to take any step necessary to enforce Work Stabilization Plan of War Manpower Commission under the 48-hour week.

MOBILIZE STARS FOR BOND TOUR

HVC LINING UP TOPS OF FILMS

Mobilization of film talent in support of War Bond sales gets into full swing today, with the Hollywood Victory Committee canvassing every stellar possibility for a tour, by special train, of 15 major cities in which the stars will headline Third War Loan rallies. The junket is being organized on a scale planned to eclipse the 1942 Victory Caravan, according to Kenneth Thomson, chairman of the HVC, and Charles K. Feldman, chairman of the group's talent committee, who have been named co-managers of the tour.

With Kay Kyser and his band lined up and already starting rehearsals, a half dozen top stars have been set and several other important personalities are in prospect. No names will be released until such time as there is no possibility of any surprise development preventing their cooperation.

In a joint statement last night, the co-managers said:

'A considerable number of top stars have been named as possible participants in the coast-to-coast tour and we are hoping that a majority of them will become available. Studio heads are cooperating with us in clearing all those who are not currently in production. As soon as they can be relieved of studio and other commitments which may interfere, their availability will be confirmed by the committee and their names announced as definite additions to the talent list.'

Feldman, who is devoting full time to recruitment of talent, stressed that the prompt cooperation of players, their managers and studios is vital, since less than two weeks remain in which to complete the cast for the junket, prepare show material and rehearse the program.

The special train is scheduled to leave Los Angeles Sept. 4, reaching Washington in time for the national broadcast Sept. 8. The tour proper will open the following day in Philadelphia and close Sept. 24 in Los Angeles.

Currently in daily contact with the Victory Committee and other industry representatives locally is Edward L. Alperson, named as chairman of the tour by the War Activities Committee. Alperson was joined here yesterday by George Schaefer, WAC president, who will remain on the Coast two weeks or more, in connection with setting final campaign plans. Bond committees across the country, contacted by advance man Frank Seltzer, are taking steps to book the largest auditorium in each city for the stars' appearance.

At the same time, it was disclosed that 'One Day Sooner,' first of the briefer 'Film Bulletins' to be produced under the new War Activities Committee War Information film program, has been completed at Columbia. SONS OF TOIL BACK TO SOIL

Wallace Beery, Joseph Schenck, James Gleason, Ward Bond, Ray Griffith and Harry Brand have been raising a right smart crop of corn, string beans, spuds and other garden sass on a two acre victory garden at Rexford and Sunset in Beverly Hills. Thus far, the gardeners have been the victors over pests and the vicissitudes of hoeing and spraying. Produce serves 20 families. Beery, Ward and Gleason have been doing their share of the chores after six every evening, with the other boys with the 'green thumb' dividing the week-end hours. A hired gardener also gets in some licks. When told that Metro had proudly issued the story of their gardening prowess Harry Brand exuded with a 'Swell. They're my pals.'

Meeting of Class B Members of SAG Set Back Week

Meeting of Class B members of Screen Actors Guild scheduled for Sept. 19 has been shoved back until Sept. 26. Postponement was ordered because Prexy James Cagney will be participating in the Third War Loan Drive on the earlier date.

In announcing the postponement, the SAG stated:

'Scheduled for consideration at the meeting will be the Guild's proposed plan for an autonomous organization for the Class B membership. Opinion of the Guild's Board of Directors is that because the meeting is the most significant one which the organization has ever called on behalf of the Class B membership, it is important that Mr. Cagney preside. At the same time the Board was unwilling to ask him to forego his commitment to the Treasury Department to aid in the bond-selling drive. Under the circumstances, it decided to set the date for the membership meeting for Sept. 26.'

Meeting will be at the American Legion Stadium.

Scribbling

Howard Emmett Rogers, whom Winfield Sheehan borrowed from Metro for eight weeks to work on screenplay of his forthcoming 20th-Fox production, 'Rickenbacker: Story of an American,' has had his stay extended four weeks.

Lynn Starling has completed his polishing job on Universal's 'Passport to Dakar' and checked off the lot.

Allan Kenward and Lewis Jacobs have new term writing contracts at Metro. Kenward is writing 'Seattle,' to be produced by John Considine. Jacobs is scripting 'The First Fifty Years' for Producer Dore Schary.

DEAL for return of many film unions and guilds to ranks of Central Labor Council is reported to have been tentatively set by Paul Smith, American Federation of Labor representative, sent here by Prexy William Green to iron out differences which caused unions with around 100,000 membership to quit CLC. Smith had luncheon yesterday with several tops from film unions, including Glenn Pratt, of the White Collarites; William Pomerance, of the Cartoonists; Norval Crutcher, of the Laboratory Technicians, and others, and was to meet later in the day with representatives of the Screen Actors Guild. It is understood most of the crafts have indicated a willingness to reaffiliate when Smith reorganizes Council, but Musicians were reportedly still holding out. One of first acts of Smith was to oust Harry Sherman as prexy, but some leaders still are opposing retention of J. W. Buzzell as secretary-treasurer.

'REPORT From the Aleutians,' Technicolor feature made by the Army Signal Corps and being distributed by the War Activities Committee, will still be playing in the southern California territory next April if booking continues at the pace set when first released here some three weeks ago. Film already has dates set into January, and to make swing of theatres seeking bookings, could not complete screenings before next spring. A handicap in trying to reach a total of 400 engagements is fact that southern California WAC division was permitted only 10 prints. Small number of prints also is nixing many demands from the private projection room circuit for individual looksees at 'Report,' one of the best government war documents yet turned out. Report that 16mm. prints were available also has caused local WAC office embarrassment, since it was given only the 10 35mm. prints with which to service the territory.

DIALERS of daytime soap operas who resent the saturating commercials won't mind them at all if they'll but tune in some of the indies here, whose time buyers really pour it on. Worst offender in this direction is Movie-Wave sponsor on KFVD, which is a good five-minute earache on the selling side. Ad agency, which drew up the copy, must be laboring under the delusion that those who go for canned music will hang on to the bittter end through hair rinse or hog wash. Smart admen learned years ago that newspaper or magazine space, groaning under the weight of straight sales come-on, is thumbed over fast for something more engrossing, and it's just as easy to turn a dial.

NOVEL piece of cross-advertising is initiated by Universal in blurbing its Robert Paige-Louise Allbritton co-starrer, 'Fired Wife,' in pressbook and other promotional paper. Abbott and Costello and Olsen and Johnson, in a series of snappy comments in the advertisements, tout the performances and the presentation of 'Fired Wife' with characteristic effusions addressed to the exhibitors and the public. 'We wish it were ours . . . it's so funny,' is one of the Abbott and Costello bouquets, while Olsen and Johnson say 'It's so funny we forgot we weren't in it.' Studio intends to use similar cross-fire of its top personalities in connection with other advertising.

Good old midwestern title is 'Home In Indiana,' and the picture is concerned largely with a good old midwestern sport, officially called harness racing but known on the county fair circuit as trots. Indiana has plenty of trots and a town named Goshen, although the most widely advertised trotting race of the year is held in Goshen, N. Y., about 50 miles from 42nd and Broadway. Usually the race is attended by about 35,000 customers who cause much congestion in the town and the county jail, situated within convenient distance of the hoss track. City slickers follow the crowd into Goshen but derive little sustenance. Trotting bookies have a quaint system of bookmaking that makes a running hoss bookie look like a philanthropist. Harness racing is purely an American sport, dating back to premotor days when the young men about town, and often the old ones, bragged about their 2.40 trotters and were always willing to drive a heat for the drinks on the north turnpike of a Sunday afternoon. There were no speed laws in those days, and the constable generally had a pretty good stepper of his own on which he would risk an occasional five-spot. There were laws against gambling, but a trotting race was not listed in that category. It was a test of skill and stamina, designed to improve the breed of horseflesh. In addition to its rustic theme, 'Home In Indiana' will have a quaint Hollywood touch. It will be filmed in Ohio, probably with the Sacramento river tossed in to pinch-hit for the Wabash, which is not the Indiana type, even with candle lights gleaming through the svcamores.

Johnny Come Lately

(Comedy-Drama)

United Artists release of a William Cagney Production. Stars James Cagney. Introduces Grace George to the screen, and features also Marjorie Main, Marjorie Lord, Hattie McDaniel, Edward McNamara. Balance of cast: Bill Henry, Robert Barrat, George Cleveland, Margaret Hamilton, Norman Willis, Lucien Littlefield, Edwin Stanley, Irving Bacon, Tom Dugan, Charles Irwin, John Sheehan, Clarence Muse, John Miller, Arthur Hunnicutt, Victor Kilian, Wee Willie Davis. William Cagney, producer. Directed by William K. Howard. Screen play, John Van Druten. Based on novel, 'McLeod's Folly,' by Louis Bromfield. Photography Theodor Sparkuhl. Film editor, George Arthur. Musical director, Leigh Harline. Art director, Jack Okey. Set decorations, Julia Heron. Previewed at the Ritz Theatre, Aug. 25, 1943. Running time: 97 MINS.

A sentimental fable which builds compelling human interest of the kind to hold mass audiences and to maintain James Cagney amongst the screen peerage sends the William Cagney production off to an impressive start in this initial offering for United Artists. It spells high credit for both the Cagney brothers, happily associated as producer and as star. It provides the actor with one of his richest roles—the kind he does best—not the tough guy of the flesh, but the guy of tough spirits exerted for a sympathetic cause. He uses it here to stir warm emotion, as well as to provoke laughter and to cast any audience into a wistful mood, and the story proves equally potent for introduction to the screen of Grace George, magnificent trouper who graces her role in memorable performance.

'Johnny Come Lately' is a slurring reference by a small town political boss to a tramp reporter who drifts into the burg, is arrested as a vag, is impulsively given a job and soon made managing editor by an aging woman who runs a moribund newspaper but is a power for righting civic wrongs and a thorn in the boss's flesh. Cagney stays with Miss George to see this thing through, crusades valiantly for the gallant old lady, falls in love with her pretty niece, fights her suitor, the boss's son; heads a reform ticket to clean up the town, and having done all these things with more or less success, drifts on again. That is how John Van Druten tells the tale in his adaptation of the novel, 'McLeod's Folly,' by Louis Bromfield. The account is at times solidly realistic, at times idyllic and fabulous, but always fascinating in the characterization by Cagney and Miss George and their able support.

Only at one point does the action on the screen go somewhat out of kilter with the rest of the account, that is in the political rally sequence where Marjorie Main, as the town 'house' madam is permitted to caricature the role too strongly and the humor runs to broad farce. But for most audiences this section of comedy scene probably will find strong favor.

Under the thoughtful and careful production guidance of William Cagney, the fine performances, the capable direction of William K. Howard, the persuasive script, the drama stirs more deeply than the bare incident might suggest. Howard's direction aptly captures the sentimental charm in the relationship of the benevolent old lady, on the verge of ruin with her antiquated paper and her civic efforts at righteousness, and the brilliant, cocky

'The Strange Death of Adolf Hitler' is strictly an exploitation picture, with large potential drawing power as consequence of its title. Cast is practically unknown, Gale Sondergaard being only well-known name to appear, but idea behind story is sufficiently novel to direct attention to the picture. Based upon an original story by Fritz Kortner and Joe May, James Hogan directed with a sure hand to drain situations of their possibilities, and Ben Pivar endowed film with all the production values his limited budget allowed.

Film revolves around situation of an Austrian, Ludwig Donath, a newly-appointed Nazi official in Vienna with a love for impersonating famous characters, being arrested by the Gestapo for imitating Hitler. Taken to Berlin, real object of arrest is disclosed—he is to be used to double for Hitler, since his voice cannot be distinguished from Der Feuhrer's.

Accordingly, he is placed under hands of plastic surgeons, who transform him to look exactly like Hitler. Word is sent to Donath's wife, Gale Sondergaard, that he has been shot as a traitor. Her two young sons, Merrill Rodin and Charles Bates, imbued with the fervor of German youth for Hitler, receive the news placidly, as their father's just due, but the 'widow' takes it as a challenge to fight the Nazis.

Story thereafter leads up to point where Miss Sondergaard, in an effort to avenge her husband, accosts the man she believes to be Hitler, when he sends word for her to be brought to him, and kills him, immediately turning the gun upon herself. Her husband had planned to kill the real Hitler himself, but is removed before he can accomplish his purpose.

The plot unfolds logically, often dramatically, and Donath turns in a good job, playing roles not only of LAST three nights have literally been star nights at Hollywood Canteen. During this period such names to appear included Eddie Cantor and George Jessel, in act together; Andrews Sisters, Betty Hutton, Deanna Durbin, Peter and Renee Godfrey, Gus Schilling and Betty Rowland, Benny Fields and Blossom Seeley, Victor Borge, Anne Shirley and Rufe Davis.

Ella Raines and Captain Kenneth Trout of the Army Air Corps have been married secretly for a year.

MILTON HOLMES, who hit jackpot with his first screen story, 'Mr. Lucky,' is locking himself in his rooms these days cooking up a fresh yarn—and he does mean locked, because his interest in Caliente racetrack has a tendency to lure his mind away from plots and sequences. . . . George Glass, retiring west coast UA publicity, was feted by fellow UA publicity directors.

BEST DRESSED GAL OF THE WEEK—

Jane Wyman dining at Romanoff's in a soft black wool dinner suit. The slim skirt featured the new jodhpur closing at the front. The jacket combined a soft, rolled collar with tailored weskit cut, and was closed with a single jet button. Under the jacket was worn a bright fuchsia crepe blouse accented with multisize 'dots' of black jet. Topping the ensemble was a Russian-inspired pillbox — higher and thicker—of black felt trimmed with jet and black veiling. Black bag and shoes, and fuchsia gloves completed the smart two-toned costume.

THE musical end: The Andrews Sisters got a crack at six tunes in 'Moonlight and Cactus.' . . . Monogram is using three bands in their 'Sweethearts of the U.S.A.'—Henry King, Phil Ohman and Jan Garber. All they need is a night club license. . . . Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson have cleffed 65 tunes alone and as a team so far this season. Jimmy, incidentally, is giving the USO 500 copies of his booklet, 'Twenty Years of Song Hits,' which just came off the press, to send to the boys overseas.

Star and stand-in record goes to Jimmy Gleason and Joe Hinds. They have been together for 18 years.

VIRGINIA O'BRIEN leaves Sept. 10 for New York, where she will do series of p.a.'s. She will be gone about a month. . . . Lou Irwin, Hollywood agent, is off for New Orleans, where he will be one of the judges in the city's Beauty Contest. . . . Nancy Kelly is taking plenty of punishment in her role in 'Hitler's Women.' She is submerged in a mountain stream, runs barefooted over mountainous country, crawls through brush and bramble and then winds up taking cuffing from the Gestapo.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

The expected important events seemed to come tumbling over each other during the past 24 hours. President Roosevelt's address before the Canadian Parliament was one of his most forceful speeches to date, and his declaration of our political aims, 'to feed, aid and foster the creation of free political lives,' should go a long way toward the reconciliation of all misunderstandings between the United Nations. The appointment of Lord Louis Mountbatten as Allied High Commissioner in southeast Asia indicates that large-scale nutcracker moves against the Japanese are impending. It seems, in view of the terrific aerial battering of Berlin, that President Roosevelt's advice to the Axis, 'surrender would pay them better now than later,' was the best they have received yet.

Producers Limit Home Showing Of Pictures

Producers at a meeting yesterday reaffirmed resolution banning all home screenings of pictures until their local first runs have been completed. Reaffirmation of Association rule, adopted some time ago on the theory that home screenings of product constitute a practice definitely harmful to the industry, was designed to assure strict enforcement of the rule.

Meeting, under chairmanship of Y. Frank Freeman, received a report showing that slightly in excess of 6,000, or more than one-third of the industry's normal complement of male workers, now are in the armed forces. Figures were compiled from a recently completed survey of studio guilds and unions.

A letter was received from L. K. K'ung, secretary-general to Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, expressing her appreciation of a projection set and accompanying equipment, cost of which was born in part by Association members.

U. S. Enters Dispute Between Williams Lab and Techs

Edward H. Fitzgerald, U. S. labor conciliator, has called a meeting of Williams Laboratory management and Film Technicians Local 683 for 2 p.m. today in an effort to settle contract dispute between two groups. Union cancelled contract, claiming management had not respected its provisions.

Williams, who is suing local for alleged contract breach, claims company respected all provisions, but that union refused to furnish competent help as provided in agreement. He claims his company has been paying 70% overtime, while overtime in other laboratories has been only 1%. He insists this does not indicate a shortage of technicians and that union should give him same deal that other companies get.

Union tops said they had experienced difficulty in getting experienced men because of manpower shortage, and that those available preferred to work at other plants.

young vagrant who admires her spirit and is caught up by her plight.

Fascinating are the scenes in Gashouse Mary's (Marjorie Main) place—'she has always run a decent house'—when the tramp reporter comes to her to enlist aid in unseating the grafting politician. Very decorus are the girls waiting the summons to their appointed chores. Treatment of these scenes is at once candidly daring and inoffensive.

Marjorie Lord and Bill Henry carry on the young romance, with Cagney as the rival until he decides again to drift. Edward McNamara does a vivid, outstanding portrayal of the town boss; has an excellent voice; authority as an actor from the stage. Hattie McDaniel as Miss George's bossy servant turns in an exceptionally fine comedy role. Meritorious performances also come from Robert Barrat, George Cleveland, Margaret Hamilton, Lucien Littlefield, Irving Bacon, John Miller, Arthur Hunnicutt and Victor Kilian.

In supporting the fine production calibre, the camera work of Theodor Sparkul, the music decoration by Leigh Harline, the art direction and sets by Jack Okey and Julia Heron come in for excellent credits. Story is somewhat long but never falters in providing arresting and amusing entertainment, and 'Johnny Come Lately,' setting a fast pace for future Cagney productions, gives United Artists one of its leading grossers and a banner production for the season.

WLRB TIGHTENS ON PAY HIKES

CUT SENIORITY INCREASES; FROWNS ON TILT TO XTRAS

The War Labor Board in a film industry wage decision yesterday showed a general tightening up on increases, even to adjust inequalities, and turned down seniority raises for four and five-year employes. Board refused to approve a 10% tilt for Warners policemen, which had been negotiated by the Building Service Employes International Union and which had been agreed to by company representatives.

Simultaneously, it was learned WLB officials had frowned on any proposed increase for film extras when they were approached informally by representatives of the Screen Actors Guild. It is understood Guilders were told Board was opposed to any boosts that would tend to unstabilize wages in a particular industry or area.

In the Warners decision, WLB raised hourly rate of first-year men from 82.5 cents to 85 cents, that of second-year men from 90.75 cents to 92.5 cents, third year men from 94.88 cents to 95 cents, and held pay of four-year men to 99 cents, and that of five-year men to $1.03.

In the meantime, William Pomerance, business representative of Screen Cartoonists Guild, said a meeting of all industry unions and guilds probably would be called to consider the recommendation that workers ask for increases in non-negotiable bonds, payable after the war. Proposal already has been submitted to the Conference of Studio Unions.

GENIUS OF FILM INDUSTRY TOLD TO PUT BOND DRIVE OVER

chairman; Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commission chairman, and Palmer Hoyt, director of the Domestic Branch of the Office of War Information.

It was brought out at a round table discussion that film houses which put on special bond sales premieres will be able to obtain a picture for the show two weeks ahead of the scheduled time. In disclosing the major part played by theatres in disposing of bonds, Ted Gamble, West Coast exhibitor serving as special assistant to the Treasury secretary, called for the promotional genius of the industry 'to put over the coming $15,000,000,000 campaign.'

50,000,000 SALES EXPECTED

'In January of 1942,' he said, 'we sold 7,000,000, separate bonds, which meant preparing 7,000,000 separate pieces of paper. Today we are selling 30,000,000 pieces a month. In September, we estimate, we must sell 50,000,000 pieces. The paper work involved here is so tremendous that the Government could not do it alone. One of the difficult jobs the theatres have to perform is the actual issuance of these certificates themselves.'

Several speakers lauded the bond drives as vitally important in creating unity and team work in the picture industry on a national scale.

Nelson told the film house operators that they have done a remarkable job, particularly in the WPB salvage campaign; and that WPB may come to them again for help for both salvage collection and in upping morale of war workers who are not quite reaching the production goals the Government has set. He assured the theatre men that 'you have been through the worst of your supply and material problems,' but did not indicate how this would mean any loosening of restrictions for theatre equipment.

REALISTIC REELS PROMISED

Both Nelson and Hoyt promised assistance in getting some realistic newsreel material from the Army. Francis Harmon had asked for the real shots 'so we can wake our people up to what is really going on so that they will work harder.' He said both the reels and exhibitors were dissatisfied with what they are getting.

McNutt told the exhibitors there is no chance of theatre managers being put on the essential list, but reminded them it was his fight which resulted in technicians and certain specialists being given their essential ratings. He invited the industry to name a committee to work with the WMC for a clearer definition of jobs on both the essential and non-essential lists. It was stated the committee will be announced shortly.

Hoyt pointed out that with the problems faced by his short-changed domestic film bureau he must have continued help in large chunks.

Action was taken against Rubens' brothers, Jules, Harry, Maurice and Claude, his daughters, Charlotte and Irma, and Frank E. Shudnow, Chicago attorney, by Rubens widow, Rebecca, and a daughter, Lillian M.

Complaint charges Rubens, at the time of his death, was under the influence of his brothers and asked that the will be set aside and the estate be divided. WHAT'LL FILL A THEATRE?

Name Band, Legiter, or a Circus? Orpheum Record Shows Dead Heat

Just what does it take to fill a theatre these days? There are some who contend that only a name band can fill seats to bursting. Others plug roadshow pictures for packed houses. Still others claim the Sinatras, et al., are the only surefire box office busters.

Currently the Orpheum, downtown Los Angeles film-vaude house, is proving that, while each b.o. champion has a claim to fame, all you need is a bill that entertains to pull out the ticket buyers. Past few weeks theatre, operated by Sherrill Corwin, has brought in a variety of attractions, from musical revues, to name bands, to circuses, each of which grossed within a few dollars of the other.

Two weeks ago 'Born Happy,' musical revue headlined by Bill Robinson which had already played two legit theatre dates at advanced prices locally, racked up the neat round figure of $27,500 for a seven-day stay at the film-vaude theatre.

For a change of pace, Xavier Cugat, his orchestra and Latin-American entertainers, came in a week ago for tremendous business that clicked to the tune of another round $27,500.

Yesterday, for a complete switch on entertainment policy, the Polack Brothers Circus, complete with elephants, lions, liberty horses, bears, etc., took over the Orpheum stage, and on strength of opening day business will hit a similar $27,500 for the week's stay.

tions, and that unions would oppose any blanket exemptions or temporary grants pending an investigation.

Lusher said the only questions involved were whether production would be increased or workers released for other essential jobs. He added the Guild had made a survey of the situation and could quickly advise the L-M Committee where and what departments should be on the 48-hour schedule and where exemptions should be granted.

He insisted the L-M Committee was organized by the WMC to dispose of such questions and make recommendations., and that the entire question should be referred to it for recommendations. His position was supported by the Teamsters, who have some 500 clerical members involved.

Meeting was called by Bert Harnish, Southern area director for the WMC, to determine whether some pattern could be worked out for handling clerical exemptions. SOEG was invited to participate by Joe De Silva, of the Retail Clerks, a member of the Advisory Committee.

Conference of Studio Unions, representing approximately 8,000 film workers, already is on record as opposing any blanket exemptions under the 48-hour work week.

BRITISH MINISTER ASKS U. S. TO BUY ENGLISH PIX

New York, Aug. 26.—What came close to an official appeal for wider distribution of British-made films was made here today at a film industry luncheon at the Waldorf by Brendan Bracken, head of Great Britain's Ministry of Information. He pointed to the wide distribution of American-made pictures in Great Britain in voicing the request that more English pix be exhibited in the United States. Bracken's talk confirmed the reported strained relations between the two countries on the matter of pictures. From 80 to 90% of the films exhibited in Great Britain are made in Hollywood. It was reported recently that in retaliation for failure of American distribution companies to purchase a single British picture since the unfreezing of the coin held over there almost a year ago, Great Britain was planning on increasing the wartime quota of home-made pix to 25 or 30%.

CIO USES BLUE NET SALE IN TRY FOR MORE TIME ON AIR

Washington, Aug. 26.—The Congress of Industrial Organizations tonight sought to use the sale of the Blue Network as a springboard to obtain more time on the air for labor and to insure that some of the time is free. Lee Pressman, general counsel for CIO asked the Federal Communications Commission for the right to intervene at the public hearing Sept. 10 on sale of the Blue Net.

The petition was seen as an attack on the National Association of Broadcasters. In his plea Pressman charged that restrictions against labor broadcasts are based on the code of NAB.

20TH SUED BY BARD-ADAMS AS VIOLATOR OF TRUST ACT

Suit was filed yesterday in federal court against 20th-Fox by the Colorado Corporation. The action charges violation of the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws and asks a mandatory injunction enjoining the production company to license pictures to the plaintiff on a fair and equitable basis compared to other theatres (Fox-West Coast houses) in zones adjoining the Bard-Adams Theatre owned by the Colorado Corporation.

Twentieth is named defendant in the suit as owner of 42 per cent of the National Theatres Corporation, which owns all of F-WC.

The complaint recites how raw materials and completed product are shipped from state to state to establish alleged violations of the trust acts. After stating the zone system, survivor of the National Industrial Relations Act, the bill names numerous F-WC houses in adjoining and nearby zones to zone 15 in which the Bard Adams house is located. It is claimed that F-WC houses nearby are permitted to play pictures from one to two weeks ahead of Bard's. The complaint also says 'the plaintiff is informed and believes that defendant has discriminated in price between plaintiff's theatre and F-WC theatres.'

ARMY, NAVY QUOTA CUT SHARPLY

Washington, Aug. 26.—More Raw film is in sight for Hollywood producers, according to word which seeped from official sources today. There is a strong possibility that studios will get a considerably larger allotment for the final quarter of this year and an increase for the first quarter of 1944 is regarded as probable.

A small part of the improvement of the film situation is due to increased production through improved technique. But the bulk of the enhanced supply in sight is a result of the overhauling of military requirements which are being pared to bedrock. With the lessened pressure from the Army and Navy, plants will be able to devote a larger part of their time to manufacturing 35 mm film for Hollywood.

TO PRECLUDE hundreds of letters from fans calling attention to errors, due to film references to national rationing items, Paramount and other studios are now minded to eliminate all dialog having to do with the curtailed articles like meats, butter, cream and the vicissitudes of transportation, etc. These references heretofore have been designed to capture wry chuckles. Paramount has had to cope with the problem in 'Standing Room Only,' for instance, for which several scenes have to be retaken because the dialog dwelt on coffee rationing, since suspended from the list. If scenes were left in, studio figures it would get hundreds of letters from critical persons airing their painstaking monitorship on pictures. Half a dozen other scripts at Paramount are being scrutinized to obviate similar deletions after filming has started.

LOEW-LYONS BARS CONTRACT PLAYERS

David Loew and Arthur Lyons yesterday announced that their Producing Artists company will make no term contracts with any players and that no stock company will be maintained for the releases through United Artists. For past 30 years most producing organizations have attempted to keep one or more names or personalities or promising discoveries under pact, and with more or less control of salary to balance the assumed risks.

No star, the PA statement said, will be signed for more than one picture. The company, it was said, is interested only in picture profits. Personality profits are to be reserved for the creative artists themselves. If an unknown costing $100 rockets to a value of $100,000, it was stated, as a result of one of the company's pictures, 'we would be glad to pay the added cost for that person next time we use him or her.'

Fired Wife

Universal has a winner in 'Fired Wife.' Sparkling, sophisticated comedy of a type calculated to catch the popular taste, it is smartly enacted by a clever cast who get the most out of some of the best comedy lines of the season. A situation comedy - drama which smacks of box-office from the word Go, picture is a natural as escapist entertainment and all concerned in its making come in for high praise.

Picture starts off with the statement that a woman is not a wife until she learns the art of being married. With this premise to background the entire action, story takes off with Louise Allbritton and Robert Paige being married at a justice of the peace in Virginia, and about to start off on their honeymoon in Indiana, family home of the groom. Only, complications ensue to upset plans, and plunge the two stars into a maze of comic situations which pile one upon the other until the bride leaves for Reno, changes her mind to return to her groom, then finally goes through with her divorce. Action unfolds thereafter back in New York, with the bride and a predatory female in the person of Diana Barrymore both pursuing the ex-husband.

Whole trouble is occasioned by Louise Allbritton, the bride insisting in going back to her stage producer boss, Walter Abel, the day after she and Paige are wed, so that she can realize her ambition of five years and direct her boss' play. Abel has an aversion to married women, so bride makes groom promise he won't give her away. But she doesn't figure upon complications that arise when Diana Barrymore, who broadcasts an account Paige handles as advertising exec, goes on the make for Paige. It is this comic plot and counter-plot which gives the story punch and substance, and sets a swift pace which seldom slackens.

Introducing Louise Allbritton and Robert Paige as co-stars, 'Fired Wife' offers high promise for the future of the pair as a romantic team of funsters. Their work is smooth and effective, they complement each other perfectly and they are ideally matched in the roles of the misunderstanding wife and misunderstood husband. Their grasp of comedy fundamentals, too, is well illustrated by the facts that their respective portrayals are drawn with consummate skill and a tendency to milk each scene of its comic import.

Picture, besides being a triumph for the two stars, marks a definite achievement for Charles Lamont, who directed adroitly, Alex Gottlieb, producer, and Michael Fessier and Picture is marked with the usual Sherman outdoor quality and goes hefty on the action to assure best reception in the western market.

Script by Johnston McCulley and J. Benton Cheney, based on the Bar-20 characters created by Clarence E. Mulford, has Bill Boyd saving the wagon-train business operated by Minna Gombell and at the same time ending the wouldbe takeover of a border territory by a pair of ambitious bad men. Leslie Selander's direction milks the action in pitting Boyd and his cronies against the six guns and tricks of the gang headed by Morris Ankrum. Contributing to the action are any number of running gun fights, massed wagon trains, and for music there is a fiesta.

Boyd garners his expected laurels as the Bar-20 hero, Hopalong Cassidy. Russell Hayden rollicks through his assignment as Hoppy's lady-loving partner, while Andy Clyde clicks with his outdoor comedy. Minna Gombell capably wears her western regalia and adds to quality of the performances. Morris Ankrum is a good villain and Georgia Hawkins neatly fills the romantic femme assignment.

Russell Harlan's photography gives scope to the outdoor background and other technical credits contribute their share in holding the picture to the Sherman average.

Six-Gun Gospel

(Western)

Monogram release. Stars Johnny Mack Brown, with Raymond Hatton, Inna Gest, Kenneth R. MacDonald, Roy Barcroft, Edmund Cobb, Artie Ortego, L. W. Brent, Bud Osborne, Eddie Dew, Kernan Cripps, Jack Daley, Mary MacLaren, Milburn Moranti. Director, Lambert Hillyer. Producer, Scott R. Dunlap. Screen play, Jess Bowers, Ed Earl Repp. Photography, Harry Neumann. Film editor, Carl Pierson. Sound, Glen Glenn. Musical director, Edward Kay. Assistant director, William Strohbach. Production manager, C. J. Bigelow. Reviewed at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, Aug. 26, 1943. Running time: 56 MINS.

'Six-Gun Gospel' gives Johnny Mack Brown and Raymond Hatton a neat vehicle with which to further their Monogram western series. Again teamed as under-cover United States marshals, Brown and Hatton deliver capably to please their followers and Lambert Hillyer's direction gives expert guidance to the Scott R. Dunlap production.

Plot by Jess Bowers and Ed Earl Repp follows a formula pattern but is dressed up with the Brown and Hatton characterizations for good results. Goldville's respected citizen, Kenneth R. MacDonald, is secretly terrorizing the town with a gang of gunmen in hopes citizens will sell property to him so he can clean up when the railroad comes through. Hatton comes to town disguised as a parson while Brown essays his usual 'drifter' role. Pair soon dig the lay of the land and bring frontier justice to the outlaws.

Inna Gest carries the femme romantic lead opposite Eddie Dew. MacDonald does another of his good heavy spots and Roy Barcroft, as former's chief gunman, also shows up in the playing. Harry Neumann photographed.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

The limited recognition of the Free French Committee for National Liberty by the American and British governments is not only important as a diplomatic step to unify all fighting French forces, but also as a trial balloon to test the reaction of the Soviet Union, and with it the possibility for complete understanding and cooperation of postwar problems. In the meantime, the bombardment of Berlin has produced a very interesting bit of evidence to prove the mistaken idea of those who predicted Italy's surrender. The Nazi government is scrambling for a refuge safe from Allied bombers, and it is hard put to find one far enough from the British bases and the eastern front. A surrender of Italy would have made all of central and eastern Europe vulnerable by bringing it within easy flying range of our long-distance bombers.

Actors Guild Names Committee to Pick New Officer Slate

Screen Actors Guild has appointed a nominating committee to draw up a list of candidates for Guild officers, to be voted on at the annual election in October. Members of the committee are Walter Abel, Franchot Tone and Emma Dunn, from the SAG Board of Directors; with Charles Trowbridge as alternate, and Moroni Olsen, Sidney Blackmer, Dorothy Tree, Louise Beavers, Frank McHugh and William Davidson representing the membership, with Robert Armstrong, Thurston Hall and Joseph Crehan as alternates.

Nominations will be made for president, first, second and third vice-presidents, recording secretary and treasurer. Candidates also will be nominated to fill 11 vacancies on the Board of Directors.

Nominations also may be made by the membership at large. Nominations must be signed by 50 Class A members in good standing, and must be accompanied by a signed statement from the candidate, consenting to be placed on the ballot.

It is understood a majority of membership favors retaining James Cagney as head of the Guild. It is doubtful, however, that Cagney will consent to again make the race because of the time he is now devoting to War work in addition to assisting in getting his new company under way.

ADD HORRORS OF WAR A TRAIN IS ON TIME

A train that came in on time, a wartime novelty, spoiled a reception planned for John U. Reber, radio head of J. Walter Thompson agency, at Pasadena yesterday morning. Wheeled down to the Santa Fe station in Edgar Bergen's ancient Stanley Steamer, gang from the agency paraded the platform with a banner reading, 'Welcome John Reber, the Poor Man's Frank Sinatra,' held aloft by Bergen and Ed 'Archie' Gardner. After trudging the bricks for half an hour it dawned on Joe Bigelow to ask the station agent about the train's arrival. Down came the banner and back plowed the gang into Bergen's chariot when they were told the train had arrived on time, 15 minutes before their arrival. They had supposed it would be late and took their time about getting to the station, being slightly befuddled by the early hour for their shenanigans. Meanwhile, Reber had been taxied to the hotel, all the while wondering why some one from the agency hadn't come down to give him a lift to town.

BOB HOPE ENDS SICILIAN OFFENSIVE AND HEADS HOME

Bob Hope revealed yesterday on a short wave broadcast over NBC from Algiers that he was returning home after having been in all the hot spots of North Africa, Sicily and England entertaining the troops. It was the first intimation received here that he had been with the troops soon after the invasion of Sicily. Touring with Hope were Frances Langford, Jack Pepper and Tony Romano. Capt. Andre Baruch, well known announcer, handled Hope's Algiers broadcast and Hal Block flew in from England to write the script.

From somewhere in Egypt Jack Benny broadcasts Tuesday, to be carried in this country by NBC. Show will be taken off the line at 3 p.m. for broadcast via disc on KFI at 11:15 p.m. Hope's broadcast yesterday was done similarly.

SAG TIGHTENS ON B'S

A tightening up on acceptance of new Class B members by the Screen Actors Guild was indicated in a statement yesterday showing that only 11 players eligible to do extra work were given cards during the past month. There was a heavy influx of Class A Junior members, however, leading to belief many extras might be switching their classification in advance of the autonomy ballet scheduled for next month. There was a total of 147 new memberships granted, including 33 Class A, four Class B Special, and four Class B Minor. Withdrawals totaled 86, again falling far below the new admittances.

CAVALCADE STARS REHEARSING

prexy of the War Activities Committee, and Edward L. Alperson, WAC's chairman of the tour.

Fashioning the big entertainment for War Bond buyers, the Cavalcade's producers face a time limit of one week, the special train assigned the troupe being scheduled for departure Sept. 4. Rehearsals have been scheduled for every available hour up to train time, leaving travel time between Hollywood and Washington for finishing touches.

OUT FOR RECORDS

With the Bond Cavalcade's 15-city junket set up as the showcase of the industry's participation in the Third War Loan drive, wires received yesterday from the east by Schaefer and Alperson, together with reports of the Motion Picture War Finance Committee here, indicate that it will be backed up by an overall organization unprecedented in the industry's bond-selling activities. Schaefer declared that all phases of the business, production, distribution and exhibition, were out to shatter all previous records.

All except two of the headliners scheduled, as well as additional players not yet cleared of conflicting commitments, are expected to be available for rehearsals within the next several days. Sessions will be held in the rehearsal hall at Paramount Studio, which has been donated for that purpose. Now on the rehearsal call sheet are Fred Astaire, Lucille Ball, Olivia de Havilland, Judy Garland, Kathryn Grayson, Dick Powell, together with Kay Kyser's band. Walter Pidgeon and James Cagney are out of the city. Pidgeon will return in time for final rehearsals, while Cagney, now in the east, will join the Cavalcade for its opening date in Washington Sept. 8.

NICK CASTLE DIRECTS

Routining of the all-star variety show has been placed in the hands of Nick Castle, director of filmusical specialties, who was named stage director by Charles K. Feldman and Kenneth Thomson, co-managers of the tour. Services of Alfred Newman have been enlisted in preparation of special arrangements for the stars.

Plans are shaping up rapidly for a national broadcast Sept. 8, when the Cavalcade personalities will be received in Washington to participate in the official start of the new War Loan Drive. Also in work is a script for 'The Motion Picture Industry's Salute to the Third War Loan,' a 15-minute transcription which is being produced by E. G. Opie, head of the transcription division of the Treasury Department, for distribution to 900 radio stations. It will offer a variety program, featuring a top-flight player from each studio.

FLACKS ORGANIZE

Studio publicity directors at a special meeting yesterday perfected plans for their participation in the campaign. Arch Reeve, secretary of the committee, assisted by Lance Heath and Duke Wales, will handle all publicity on the Cavalcade. Tommy McLeod and Jerry Hoffman were named to aid this staff.

SAG Cautions Actors Against Seek Tilt Of Agreed Pay

Screen Actors Guild yesterday cautioned players against going out on studio interviews and then refusing to work unless a higher scale is paid, after having been advised in advance what rate of pay would be. SAG said:

'It is within the right of each Guild member to attempt to obtain as much for a job as he can, and it is certainly not the intention of the Guild to urge any member to work for less than he wants to accept. But it is not acting in good faith to be interviewed for a job, when you know in advance what pay is offered, and know that you do not intend to accept it.

'Such a practice wastes the time of the member and the casting official; furthermore it jeopardizes the employment of other Guild members for whom the pay might be acceptable. When you go on an interview, you are making an implied bargain to work if you qualify for the job; the Guild urges its members to keep that bargain.'

SINATRA'S LATEST SONG

Now I Belong To Myself

Today I belong to myself, Frank Sinatra can croon after his announcement that he had bought off all those who owned pieces of him. His statement says that 'more than $50,000 was involved,' but fails to say where that bundle of coin came from or how the instalments will run. Tommy Dorsey was reputed to hold a contract calling for 33% of his earnings, with Dorsey's manager, Leonard Vannerson, holding 10% and Frank Cooper of General Amusement an equal share, to say nothing of Uncle Sam's 20%. Music Corp. has been on a deal to buy Sinatra's contract for the payoff figure cited by Sinatra, $50,000, but whether MCA figured in the Sinatra settlement with his wealth-sharers is not known. Payoff tosses out of court Vannerson's suit to collect $17,000 or 10% of his reputed earnings of $170,000 since he left Dorsey's band to shift for himself.

Producers take with them three story properties considered for 20th-Fox production, 'The Grand Street Boys,' 'Carnegie Hall' and 'The Snow Is Red.'

Film Preview

Ernest Pagano, who wrote the script from Hagar Wilde's original story. Lines and situations throughout are distinguished with smartness and crackle and much of the film's success is due to the writing of Fessier and Pagano. Music by Frank Skinner and directed by Charles Previn adds to the atmospheric content, too; and art direction by John B. Goodman and Martin Obzina and set decorations by R. A. Gausman and A. J. Gilmore create an atmosphere of cheeriness entirely in keeping with the general mood of the picture.

Augmenting the co-stars, Walter Abel is responsible for many of the film's top laughs through his scheming to get Louise Albritton back in his employ. George Dolenz turns in a hilarious performance, too, as a foreigner with a knack of murdering the king's English, and Walter Catlett contributes to the hilarity as a justice of the peace. Rex Ingram offers a sincere interpretation of Paige's family servitor, and Alan Dinehart is in for a brief bit as a Broadway columnist. Diana Barrymore is only weak member of the cast, but manages to put over her characterization with certain savoir faire.

'Fired Wife' is a satisfactory lead-off picture on Universal's 1943-44 program, which should find heavy reflection at the boxoffice.

BIG FIVE PREXIES VISIT CLARK TO EASE DECREE

Washington, Aug. 29.—Presidents of the Big Five consent decree companies came here Wednesday to confer with Assistant Attorney General Tom C. Clark, and to discuss possible modifications in the decree. Belief is that the Big Five may be ready with some suggestions to improve the situation.

Clark, it is known, will not be in a position to make his own recommendations until after his field offices have gathered all the material they set out to get from independents, a month ago. Meanwhile, information is pouring steadily into Washington and is being digested by Clark and Robert Wright, his special deputy, who has been working on motion picture consent decree case since it first broke.

Case switches over tomorrow from the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice to the criminal division. This comes about because yesterday Attorney General Francis Biddle announced a streamlining of his organization which results in the Clark and Wendell Berge, assistant attorney general in charge of the certain criminal division jobs. The change takes place tomorrow.

While all film consent decree cases remain anti-trust, it was decided that Clark should continue to handle them, since he has been working on them for the past three

CECIL B. DeMILLE, making biggest color transparency ever attempted, is using a large double screen, each section measuring 24 by 18 feet, with six separate projection machines, in batteries of three, with identical images superimposed to look like one and forming a sweeping panorama in Technicolor under light intensity of 100,000 lumens, as background for a scene in Paramount's 'The Story of Dr. Wassell.' In order to achieve superimposition of three identical images, the triple projection units were utilizing a new optical system developed by the Paramount transparency department under Farciot Edouart and his staff. Chiefly the new arrangement overcomes the greatest handicap heretofore for color transparencies—difficulty of concentrating enough light to make them fully effective. Backgrounds used for 'Wassell' in this scene were taken in Mexico and Guatemala by DeMille's location director, Arthur H. Rosson.

BEST all-around job of properly presenting a radio team in a publicity release is that contrived by Hal Bock's NBC staff for the return of Amos 'n' Andy. Every phase of the blackface team's career, from their first meeting, is covered in the 18 pages of neatly typewritten copy. Sectioned off are a full length biography of Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll: 'Amos Looks At Andy,' by Gosden; 'Andy Looks At Amos,' by Correll; vital statistics and A & A's radio history. It's one publicity release that is certain to be filed away for future reference after its use as feature material.

BREAKDOWN of pictures currently in production at studios, totaling 62, discloses fact that 24 are war films, 38 dealing with other subjects. Of the 24 features dealing either directly or indirectly with war—but enough so to be classed as carrying war themes—one is story of post-war Europe, five are either comedies or comedy-dramas, remainder being straight drama. 20 of the 38 non-war films are comedies and 10 rate as musicals.

FCC MUM ON CIO BLUE SALES TILT

Washington, Aug. 29. — Federal Communications Commission failed to indicate over the week-end what action it will take on the request of the CIO to intervene in the Blue Network sale hearings, but NAB Prexy Neville Miller asserted that radio is cooperating plenty with labor at present.

'American labor,' said Miller, 'is entitled to and has the same access to the facilities of the American Broadcasting stations as any other individual or group.

'Labor should become better acquainted with its opportunities for the use of broadcasting facilities. A public hearing would not only reveal radio's cooperation with labor throughout the United States, but might also provide the education apparently most needed by the CIO.'

The City That Stopped Hitler

(Documentary)

Paramount release of film compiled by Central Newsreel Studios in the U.S.S.R. Narration written by John Wexley and spoken by Brian Donlevy. Edited by Leonid Varlamov for Artkino Pictures, and edited for American release by Richard Blumenthal of Paramount. Musical arrangement (original Russian) by V. Smirnov. 'Song of Stalingrad' by V. Lebedev-Kumach and V. Mokrousov. Also contains captured German newsreel film. Tradeshown in Los Angeles, Aug. 27, 1943. Running time: 58 MINS.

One of the epic battles of history, Stalingrad, the turning point in the German effort to overwhelm Russia, is here recorded in great detail and with majestic sweep from the official Soviet newsreel files for the rest of the fighting world to see and for posterity. The picture will leave its indelible mark for morale, for a marvel of soldierly and civilian endurance and fortitude, for comprehension of what all-out decisive combat may mean, upon every beholder. Although dealing frankly with death and the appaling casualties of battle, as the Russians do in their factual films, the total impression left is one of elation rather than depression in the triumph of Stalingrad's men and women, workers and fighters, over the elite of the Nazi armies and the surrender of their whipped legions.

Under the careful and effective job of editing by Richard Blumenthal for the American release, the material brought to this country in loose assembly was given coherence and elucidated wherever necessary by the excellent narration written by John Wexley and spoken by Brian Donlevy. The original Russian music is retained, and the sonorous rolling Soviet hymn, 'Song of Stalingrad,' appended to the thunder of the guns.

Six of the 24 Red Army cameramen who recorded the action in and around Stalingrad, soldiers of the lens, died at their work. The camera shots, mostly, are at close range to the deadly labors of the siege and battle, the charge and the march, in and around the Volga metropolis which corresponds to St. Louis on the Mississippi, now a stark and ghastly ruin of stone and casement but a shrine of the spirit for the folk who have now returned to build the city anew.

Two scenes loom heroically and with great emotional tug out of the welter of fierce action unreeled with staccato beat—Russian young soldiers of two pincer armies coming together in triumph on a vast field, running to one another and embracing ecstatically, kneeling in the snow and kissing their land; this, and the charge of the Cossacks, a great mass of horsemen sweeping into the enemy with a thunder of voices like a storm. Defense of the big Red October tank plant in Stalingrad, and the final close-in fighting in streets and buildings are other scenes of dreadful fascination.

The whole strategy of the battle also is depicted, with close shots of the Russian commanders, the generals whose average age was 39, and Von Paulus, the German general who surrendered his tattered remnants after the 162-day combat. New

with Robert Arden

The death of King Boris of Bulgaria and the reported trouble with the Danish fleet are storm signals which must be heeded. It was very obvious for quite some time that the continued successes of the Red armies, as well as the merciless aerial assaults by the Allied Air Forces coupled with land successes on Sicily, would force the Nazi regime into a highly precarious position. While it is too early to expect a general anti-Nazi revolt at this time, these indications point to the possibility of a revolt in the future—providing the air attacks and land advances continue. It will be highly interesting to watch the forthcoming Washington conference, during which President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill will supplement their Quebec meeting with far reaching political discussions and decisions, and which incidentally may be participated in by Soviet representatives.

Tibbett Ill, Payne Presides at AFRA Confab in Chi

Chicago, Aug. 29.—First session of the American Federation of Radio Artists got under way here yesterday, presided over by Virginia Payne, president of the Chicago local, in absence of President Lawrence Tibbett who had to remain in New York due to illness.

Gunnar Back, president of the Washington, D. C., local, was appointed convention secretary, and some 60 delegates answered his call.

Delegates represented approximately 159 proxies. National Secretary Emily Holt gave her annual report, a review of the past two years' activities, and George Heller, national treasurer, read his annual report, Heller would reveal no figres, except that AFRA has in the past five years reduced its loans from Screen Actors Guild and Equity from $43,000 to $13,000. Miss Holt reported an increase in membership from 13,600 to 15,080. A Resolutions Committee, composed of Helen Van T., Chicago, Donna Keath, New York, Zella Layne, San Francisco, Shields Dierkes, Detroit, George Fifield, Los Angeles, was elected.

Two proposals to amend the constitution were presented and unanimously approved, one providing for machinery for appeal from local discipline to national board, and another providing means for election of officers to National Board at large by the smaller locals. Action was taken in caucus on the transcription code.

Members want an increase, but were warned of being confronted with the Little Steel formula. Delegates felt that some adjustment should be made, however, on the multiple use of transcriptions. Eli Holt suggested that they examine and participate in securing extension of the federal copyright law to establish property interest in recorded performances.

State Draft Biggies Tighten Up On Deferments

quire long training, can expect to be given temporary stays from military service.

Officials also intend to look closely into charges of labor hoarding made against many industries, to determine where workers may be released for more important work. It is understood officials plainly indicated to Pat Casey, film industry representative, at conferences here that they did not consider motion picture publicists, hair stylists, makeup artists, actors and other classifications as 'critical jobs' or irreplaceable.

Casey is reported to have been advised that only key men holding 'critical jobs' would be given temporary deferments. With indications that pre-Pearl Harbor fathers may have to be drafted within a few weeks, officials said every deferment application would be closely investigated to determine if the worker could best serve his country by remaining in his present occupation or by being inducted into military service.

Draft boards have been instructed to re-examine all 4-F registrants to determine if any are now physically fit for service, and also to again examine all deferments to see if each applicant is still holding a 'critical' job.

Selective Service officials are inclined to look with favor on applications from skilled craftsmen whose replacement would be impossible without years of training. They feel, however, that with adoption of the 48-hour work week, the film industry as well as other concerns, should be in a position to release many workers for employment in aircraft and shipyard activities.

Casey is said to have gone to Sacramento when certain major studios complained some of their top men were being taken into the armed services. Instead of securing a promise of more leniency, however, Casey was told that the reins will be tightened.

NEW MINIMUM PAY RATE IN AMUSEMENT BIZ GIVES $2 TILT

State order from the Division of Industrial Welfare sets new minimum of $20 for a ,40- hour week, plus 50 cents an hour for all over 40 hours a week, or 55 cents an hour for part-time employment, and permits a 48-hour week.

Film theatres, always heavy users of minors for usher and usherette work, and legit houses are covered by state regulation, as well as any place of business furnishing entertainment or recreation to the public, including cafes, restaurants, night clubs, dance halls, bowling alleys, billiard parlors, skating rinks, race tracks, athletic associations and contests, etc.

Employes that come under order include dancers, actors, singers, musicians, radio broadcasters, professional skaters, professional athletes, and all other similar activities which 'involve the exercise of artistic talent or training or athletic proficiency or skill.' Order also includes bookmakers, umpires, ticket collectors, ushers, machine operators, announcers, etc., in its definitions of employes covered.

All employees on split-shifts (except in bowling alleys or skating rinks) will receive 50 cents additionally to minimum wages of 55 cents an hour for any day's work.

For work between 12 midnight and 6 a.m., minimum scale calls for 60 cents an hour. It also provides that an employe, if working two hours or less, or if called but not used, must be paid for a full two hours.

Order will affect only those amusement and recreation workers who are non-members of various unions, latter usually having wage agreements calling for considerably more than minimums set up by the Industrial Welfare Commission.

TOP NAMES PREP FOR BOND TOUR

Mickey Rooney and Betty Hutton have been added to the cast of the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade, the industry's all-star variety show which trains out Saturday on a cross-country tour of 15 major cities as a highlight of the Third War Loan Drive. With Judy Garland previously announced, news that Rooney will be available for the start of the trip, instead of joining the bond-stormers enroute as originally planned, assures appearance of the Rooney-Garland team at all of the massive bond rallies.

Joining eight stars and Kay Kyser's musical organization, previously announced for the Cavalcade by the Hollywood Victory Committee, Rooney and Miss Hutton will begin rehearsals today. Others on the list are Fred Astaire, Lucille Ball, Olivia de Havilland, Judy Garland, Kathryn Grayson, Walter Pidgeon, Dick Powell, with James Cagney being set for at least past of the tour.

Additional personalities now tentatively set will, when confirmed, bring the total of the Cavalcade's volunteer bond sellers to a dozen or more, according to Charles K. Feldman and Kenneth Thomson, co-managers of the tour.

Screen and radio writers set by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization met over the weekend with Kyser to work out details of the big show's script. Among writers contributing material are H. Allen Smith, Eddie Moran, Jerry Gollard, Wilkie Mahoney, Arthur Phillips, Carl Hunzinger and J. M. Josefsberg. RADIO KEY MEN GET BREAKS IN ARMY DRAFT

Sacramento, Aug. 30.—Committee representing radio in Hollywood has been assured by State Selective Service officials that keymen in the industry necessary to carry on radio's wartime role would be given every consideration by local draft boards. It was pointed out by Hollywood group that problem of giving temporary deferments to writers and producers is purely sectional and would affect less than 275 men. Selective Service officials told the committee they would work directly with radio employers for the purpose of interpreting the status of those affected so that an orderly withdrawal of personnel could be made without seriously dislocating the industry.

NITE CLUB STINTERS HEADED TOWARD ARMY—SEZ McNUTT

Washington, Aug. 30.—War Manpower Commission chairman, Paul V. McNutt ruled today that regular night club entertainers are 'non-deferable,' if that is their principal occupation. However, if they perform partly in night clubs and partly in theatres they escape the non-essential listing.

McNutt cleared up the point at a press conference, at which the name of Frank Sinatra was introduced, and it was indicated that Selective Service can't change its policy regarding the essentiality of entertainers and actors until and unless there is more public acceptance of the value of their work. McNutt was asked whether Sinatra was non-deferable. 'I don't know,' he said. 'I don't know that the question has ever been raised.'

JIMMIE FIDLER had 12 seconds of dead air tossed at him on his Sunday night broadcast when he insisted on using material which had been ordered out by Don Gilman, western division head of the Blue Network. Gabber had been warned he would be cut off if he used the disputed item, but he took it upon himself to override Gilman and resultantly blabbed into a dead mike. Gilman said Fidler insisted on making 'an unwarranted assumption of what might happen,' and inasmuch as it would place the studio concerned in an unfavorable light, he took summary action to suppress it. Fidler was told bluntly that the network would countenance no potshots at the picture industry and hereafter he would have to toe the mark. Gilman said the film industry would be protected against speculative gossip and that Fidler would have to respect the judgment of the chain's censors.

SWITCH of Tom Clark, assistant Attorney General, to the criminal division of the Department of Justice, and transfer of New York film consent decree matters to same division, is causing speculation among southern California exhibitors. Some feel transfer hints at possibility of the consent decree, now a civil, anti trust case, becoming a criminal case with sterner penalties after its fate is decided late this fall. Decree expires Nov. 20 and numerous moves are under way both for revisions and for complete new decree. The New York consent decree superseded a previous decree entered into in this territory. Local decree carried criminal designation.

NEW title is being sought by RKO for 'Revenge,' Casey Robinson's take-off production for studio, as consequence of exhibitor reaction to title. Exhibs unanimously approved the idea of introducing wholesale lot of new personalities to screen, and expressed willingness to give preferred playing time to picture, despite lack of established name in cast, if picture stacks up to expectations, but these same exhibitors recommend that another title be found with a feeling of greater uplift than one currently used. To play ball with theatre men who are willing to reciprocate, studio has dumped present title and is searching for more appropriate one.

SAG BACKS EXTRAS TILT

SEE DEMAND 50% RAISE FOR SOME

Screen Actors Guild will demand substantial wage tilts for extras, day players and free lance actors when arbitration sessions open, it was disclosed last night by extra leaders who have been conferring with Guild officials. Raises to be asked in some spots are said to approximate 50 per cent.

Foreground players said they had recommended that extras now receiving $10.50 per day and who formerly were paid $11, be pushed into the $16.50 bracket. The recommendations also asked that players whose scale formerly was $8.25 be paid $12.75. Those not included in these brackets and who are not classed with dress extras would be paid $13.75, exclusive of atmosphere extras who now receive $5.50.

Minority report of foreground players is said to have been that one scale be established for all extras, with $5.50 apparently being dropped from Guild or being held on reserve list for mob scenes. It is understood recommendation is opposed by both the Screen Players Union and Screen Players Protective Committee, who are asking that $5.50 rate be eliminated and one scale be established for all players who are classified as Class B members of the SAG. Special group named by SAG Board of Directors is now preparing demands for submission to arbitration board, but no announcement of rates will be made until sessions start.

FLY ACCUSED OF FRAUD IN DRAFT DEFERMENTS

Washington, Aug. 30. — Federal Communications chairman, James L. Fly was accused today of 'fraud and misrepresentation' in seeking draft deferments for employes, a charge he promptly attacked as 'unprincipled' and a 'bid for headlines.' Accusation came from Hugh Reilly, attorney for the Cox Committee at a public hearing.

Reilly said Fly had sought blanket deferments for 1069 engineering department employes and has violated the President's order that government agencies should not seek deferments except for a few irreplaceable technical experts. Hearing brought out that deferments were obtained for single men of 20 and 22 years of age, some who had no technical experience before joining the FCC and who had been with the agency as little as one day, in one case.

Aside from their amateur licenses, these people had such prior employment as motion picture projectionist, bee keeper, candy factory workers, barber and steamfitter.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

The latest Russian victory, the recapture of Taganrog, brought into brilliant relief the invisible yet strongly perceptible connection between military and political events. The rebellion in Denmark, for instance, though indicating Nazi strength as sufficient to cope with it; the stiffening of Sweden's attitude toward Berlin, and finally the reiterated decision of Finland 'to get out of the war,' are strongly connected with the increasing power shown by the Soviet armies. As a matter of fact, it will not be beyond my expectation to learn of an early 'evacuation' of Norway by the Nazi high command. In the Balkans the situation is very similar, with Bulgaria 'doubtful.' The Nazi high command can expect nothing from Rumania and Hungary except an attack, and this will come when the Soviets liberate Odessa.

NO MIDNIGHT 'BELL' FOR SWINGSHIFT WORKERS

Plans being talked for special Wednesday swingshift 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' shows at the Carthay Circle have been dropped by Fox West Coast due to manpower difficulties brought on by state law forbidding employment of minors under 18 years of age after 10 p.m.

House, operating on a reserve seat policy for roadshowing of 'Bell,' would require ushers to assure proper seating for proposed swingshifters, but new minimum hours, wage scales and working conditions set up by Industrial Welfare Commission, which became effective Aug. 27, kicked out chance to use regular house usher personnel for the after-midnight work.

Circuit is still talking possibility of shifting time for matinees in order to give war workers who must attend films in the afternoons an early show break. Break now comes around 5:30 p.m., too late for swingshift workers. Midnight show was at first thought to be the answer to aircrafters having only Sundays for show-going and as an aid towards spreading unusually heavy weekend reservations to another night.

MORE BOND PREEMS SOUGHT TO BOOST SEPTEMBER SALE

Motion picture exchange area chairmen in the Third War Loan campaign were notified yesterday by W. F. Rodgers, chairman of the War Activities Committee distributors division, that distributors will welcome additional bond premieres and will furnish a picture to any exhibitor who desires to participate.

Rodgers also advised area chairmen that distributors were willing to agree to a picture being played not further than two weeks in advance of the opening date of its regular engagement.

Since very few, if any, flat rental pictures will be used for bond premieres and since a bond premiere will be only for one performance, Rodgers announced that it would hardly justify consideration of reduced rental for such picture.

Bond purchases by employes throughout the industry during the Third War Loan will be confined to definite headquarters, through facilities now being set up by the Motion Picture War Finance Committee. In order that every purchase made by film workers will be credited to the picture industry, the committee has arranged for all studios, allied businesses and independent producing companies to take orders and handle the issuance of bonds. Employes will be requested to buy bonds through these representatives so that Hollywood, during the drive which starts on Sept. 9, will be able to establish a record total.

Banks which will credit purchase to the industry are Bank of America, Beverly Hills; Hollywood-Highland; South Hollywood, at Sunset-Clark, Melrose-Irving, Hollywood-Highland, Hollywood-Whitley; Security National Bank at Wilshire-La Brea; Hollywood State Bank at Santa Monica-Highland; and Citizens National Bank at Hollywood-McCadden.

AFRA MOVES FOR MERGE OF ALL ACTOR LABOR UNIONS

ceed with a plan for merger and invite Actors Equity Association to join in deliberation with a view to effecting a merger of all groups. If Equity sees fit not to participate AFRA will proceed with exploring possibilities of merger alone.

When Willie Bioff and his IATSE started a drive to take over the Screen Actors Guild, the latter appealed to the Executive Committee of the AF of L. After squabbling at Atlantic City, the AF of L went on record as directing the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent body of all actor unions, to merge all its affiliates into one local charter. This was understood to be the one point on which the AF of L prevented the IATSE from taking jurisdiction over the entire entertainment field.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

All national officers of AFRA were reelected on the last day of the convention, with exception of Ben Grauerv as a vice-prexy, who was replaced by Anne Seymour. These are Lawrence Tibbett, president; Mrs. Emily Holt, executive secretary; George Heller, treasurer; Alexa McKee, recording secretary, and Vice-Presidents Virginia Payne, Jean Hersholt, William P. Adams, Ken Carpenter and Miss Seymour. New national board members at large are Herbert Mann, Racine, Wis.; Robert Donley, Pittsburgh, and Edward L. Merritt, Boston.

Matter of declining commercial and sustaining programs was sent back to executives in Council as was the matter of establishing a standard form of individual contract for employment of AFRA members. In the matter of allocation of national revenue, with particular attention to Los Angeles, request to be reimbursed for service rendered members under national agreements, the convention decided to leave the revenue structure as is with the national board and locals sharing 50-50.

DUES SHARING PLAN

A comprehensive plan was worked out in regard to sharing dues in the transfer of members from one local to another and facilitating transfers. Matter of War activities programs came in for examination and discussion, convention decided to continue present policies on same.

In regard to members of the American Federation of Musicians coming within the purview of the AFRA shop clause in the AFRA collective bargaining agreements, a commission was set up consisting of the national board members, each from Los Angeles, Chicago and New York, and the national executives in the Counsel, with authority to consider the subject matter of debate and come to a solution.

The resolutions committee came up with a resolution putting AFRA on record that the United Mine Workers not be admitted to the AF of L as long as John L. Lewis was head of that union. A resolution was also passed providing means for the selection of temporary successors to national board members during their absence in the armed forces. Seven members of the board's 45 are in uniform.

These are Majors William Brandt, H. L. Berger, and Knox Manning, all of Los Angeles; Lieut. (s.g.) Norman Barry, Chicago, and Corp. Ray Dones, who was executive secretary of the Chicago local. Delegates all agreed that the convention here was one of the most successful held in years. The next convention will be held in Cleveland, if the war is still on, otherwise in Los Angeles.

BBC SAYS FIVE MILLION IN EUROPE LISTEN TO PROGRAMS

London, Aug. 30.—British Broadcasting Co. announced today number of persons on Continent who listen to its daily broadcasts in English amount to at least 5,000,000. Added to this, it is estimated another 5,000,000 are studying English so they will be able to understand these daily broadcasts.

These figures are a result of underground connections which made an exhaustive survey on number of people who dial in for English programs. Europeans, even though their knowledge of English is slight, are enabled to understand broadcasts due to fact only the simplest language is used.

Scripts are written by William Gerhardi, novelist, and read mainly by Lionel Gamlin and Elizabeth Cowell, who read at diction speed.

Odd feature of BBC is fact radio organization has quadrupled in size of its personnel since beginning of the war. In 1939, total number of employees of BBC was about 3000. Today, figure reaches 12,000 mark. And where broadcasts were made only in one language at outbreak of war, English is now augmented by 47 foreign languages.

Company figures present number on payroll will be more or less permanent, due to important part propaganda will play on all broadcasts after war ends. Modification of European and Far Eastern programs will, of course, be made, in regard to this propaganda, but broadcasts to all countries still will be continued as means of promulgating lasting friendship, and radio will continue to play a vital factor in England's leadership in Europe.

AGENCY producers of network shows, none of which rates an audience of less than 10,000,000, are highly perturbed at the lackadaisical attitude of film players who refuse to take their radio assignments seriously. Most troublesome are those who rate around $750 for a guest shot and on the verge of becoming stars. They have begun to feel their importance, say the producers, and radio to them is looked upon as doing the studio a favor, that of getting in a plug for their current or impending releases. Complain the producers, they're usually late for rehearsals, look at the script only when they have to and generally sluff off the whole proceedings. Their attitude, said one producer, is challenging, as if to say, 'I dare you to get a good performance out of me.' No trouble is encountered with top stars and those who have had stage experience. The come-latelys are the headaches and unless they mend their ways they're going to find themselves outside the pale of major agencies and left severely alone.

NO LONGER does Republic refer to its Rog Rogers flickers as Westerns. Films now are known either as 'Roy Rogers Specials' or 'Roy Rogers Premieres,' reason being studio has more than doubled their budgets and pictures now are being booked into metropolitan first-run houses which never before showed a western film. Among first-run theatres where Rogers' pictures are being shown where a western star never before galloped across the screen are Oriental, Chicago; Warfield, San Francisco; Mayfair, New York; Palomar, Seattle; Kirby, Houston, Tex., and Rialto, Dallas. Rogers' films, too, have been taken out of executive producer hands of Howard Sheehan and turned over to M. J. Siegel, studio head, to produce personally, with Harry Grey acting as associate producer.

His first attempt at direction was in 1921, when he turned out 'Der Mude Tod' ('The Weary Death'), shown in this country under title of 'Destiny.' Later he directed 'M,' 'Siegfried' and 'Metropolis,' among others. He came to the United States in 1935.

There was plenty of speaking around the hot stove in the grocery store or in front of the bar in the corner saloon, but there was a limit to the freedom of speech. There was a general idea in those days that freedom and responsibility went hand in hand. At times an irresponsible lug spoke out of turn, but not for long. If he spoke out of turn too long he found himself out in the street nursing the memory of a swift kick while the debaters grabbed a handful of prunes from the barrel or a snack from the free-lunch counter and resumed their debate about the relative merits of Bill McKinley and Bill Bryan. They enjoyed tossing arguments at each other, but resented the idea of tossing foreign-made bricks through American windows. That was in the simple days before radio was invented and the commentators started tossing bricks around the world.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill's speech was unusually weak. Yet it revealed the great desire to come to a solution of the many problems now standing between Great Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union. Of paramount significance was Mr. Churchill's statement that 'American and British lives would not be squandered for political considerations,' and that an Allied invasion of western Europe would not be launched until 'good prospects for continued successes exist.' I wonder if that is not a solution for the puzzling situation in the Pacific. Maybe that is the way Stalin feels about opening a second front against Japan.

WRITERS GUILD OKAYS PACTS WITH 32 INDIE PRODUCERS

as contained in the Guild agreements with the majors.

At the same time, it was disclosed SWG is negotiating similar contracts with the 12 individual producers affiliated with the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers. These include William Cagney, Charles Chaplin, Walt Disney, Alexander Korda, Sol Lesser, Mary Pickford, David O. Selznick, Hunt Stromberg, Walter Wanger, Orson Welles and Lloyd Wright. Samuel Goldwyn is a member of Society, but already has a pact with the Guilders.

PRODUCERS INK PACT

Producers inking new agreement with the SWG, which was approved last night, includes Angelus Pictures Corp., Atlantis Pictures Corp., Banner Productions, Beaumont Pictures Corp., Jed Buell Pictures Corp., Capitol Productions, Inc., Chadwick Studio, Colmes Productions, Inc., Continental Productions, Inc., Edward Finney Productions, Great Western Productions, Inc., Hollywood Pictures, Inc., K-B Pictures Corp., Krasne-Burkett Productions, Max King Pictures Corp., Landres Pictures Corp., Lindsey-Parsons Productions, George Merrick Productions, Monogram Productions, Inc., Motion Picture Associates, Sigmund Neufeld Productions, Inc., North American Productions, Inc., Producers Releasing Corp., Range Busters, Inc., Ted Richmond Productions, Ripley-Monter Productions, S & N Productions, Jack Schwartz Productions, Inc., Alexander Stern Productions, Inc., Supreme Pictures Corp., Robert Tansey Productions and Sydney Williams Productions.

Deal is considered one of best for writers since original contract with majors was put over by SWG. Agreement will give hundreds of indie writers substantial wage tilts, many of them having formerly turned out westerns for from $250 to $500 and features for the latter figure. They now are guaranteed from $1,000 to $1,500, plus improved working conditions and the same protection on layoffs, etc., as afford scriveners employed in the major field.

NEW POLICY OUTLINED

New Statement of Policy, which supersedes original one adopted in 1938, and which program is felt to have been achieved, calls for:

'The wartime policy of the Guild is to mobilize its organization and its members for effective participation in war activity.

'The Guild seeks to protect and advance the economic interests of screen writers.

'It is a specific aim of the Guild to do all in its power to improve the professional status of screen writing, to secure a wider public recognition of the work of motion picture writers.

'The Guild pledges its cooperation with all employer and employe groups in contributing to the general welfare of the industry.

'The Guild will cooperate with writers in other fields and give active support to the further organization of writers on a national scale.

'The Guild will act on such political and legislative matters as affects the professional and economic interests of our members.

'The Guild is open to all writers in the motion picture field, and will permit no discrimination because of political opinion, religious belief, race, nationality, or color.'

SEEK WIDER CREDITS

The new Statement of Policy pledges full support in solving the manpower problems, war activities, etc. It also states that it will be the policy of the Guild to broaden the scope of its credit machinery to include all motion picture writing, and to insure adequate credits in publicity and advertising, as well as on the screen.

It also was stated the Guild proposes to license agents so as to guarantee equitable and uniform business relationships between writers and agents. A special committee is now working on this plan. Plans also are under way for a uniform international copyright to protect writers after the current emergency.

New contract with indies is for six years, starting May 1, 1943. It calls for an 80% Guild shop three months after signing and continuing for three months. For a period of two and one half years, commencing six months after date of signing, Guild shop quota shall be 85%, and for the last three years a 90% Guild shop will be effective. New deals give the SWG virtually complete writer jurisdiction in the film industry.

FILM COSTUMERS SEEK PAY HOIST UNDER FDR RULING

Motion Picture Costumers Local 705 will seek readjustments of wage scales for several classifications, including studio tailors, dressmakers, etc., under inequalities provisions of President's 'Hold the Line' order when the IATSE opens negotiations with the major companies. This was disclosed at meetings of various classifications with Business Representative Ted Ellsworth to discuss wages, conditions, etc.

It was pointed out that minimum for studio dressmakers is now 70 cents per hour and $1.15 for tailors, which is far below the prevailing scale for those employed outside. Although the War Labor Board has frowned on percentage increases, it has approved tilts for groups receiving less than the prevailing scale for their classification.

A meeting of all permit workers in Local 705 was held Friday night to explain delay in getting membership cards for femme workers. Books are closed for male workers, but regular memberships are being issued to qualified femme workers in certain classifications. Business Representative Ellsworth explained applications must be approved by membership here and must then be forwarded to International headquarters in New York before cards are actually issued.

A total of 950 California theatres have pledged their support of the 'Bed for a Buddy' campaign to provide overnight housing for soldier visitors, it was announced yesterday by Charles P. Skouras, chairman of the campaign. In addition, all newspaper publishers, radio station owners and commentators are supporting the $350,000 drive.

While it is hoped to raise $200,000 in Southern California and $150,000 in the north, leaders predicted figure might reach $500,000. This sum, when allocated to various communities, will be matched by the State of California, according to Willard W. Keith, civilian defense director of the State War Council.

Lyman's Recent Tour Cost Him Granville And $18,500

New York, Aug. 31.—Abe Lyman has advised Music Corporation of America that he wants $18,500 from the agency to cover losses incurred on recent theatre tour, for which he claims MCA is responsible.

First Lyman is demanding $10,000 for the exit of Bonita Granville from the troupe, asserting she was booked by him for a minimum of six weeks and left after four to make a picture. He also wants $8,500 for being forced to lay off the week of June 13, which agency admits telling him was booked at the Orpheum, Minneapolis. Lyman claims he paid musicians and acts for the week.

Lyman has failed to pay MCA its commissions for the tour and agency has retaliated by withholding checks for several broadcasts he made last spring.

U. S. PLANS DEC SUB

DRAFT PLAN TO VOTE ON BUZZELL

Plans were reported being started last night to order an election of officers of the Central Labor Council, with the idea of requiring J. W. Buzzell to go before the membership in order to retain his post as secretary-treasurer. It is understood deal would call for unions which have withdrawn from the Council to reaffiliate prior to the balloting.

Group which pulled out of the Council includes the Screen Actors Guild, Moving Picture Painters Local 644, Teamsters, Musicians and other film industry crafts. Unions expressed dissatisfaction with operation of Council, claiming Buzzell used 'paper setup' of membership to control policies.

FCC OPPOSES CIO STAND IN BLUE SALE

Washington, Sept. 1. — Counsel for Federal Communications Commission at a special hearing today argued that CIO is not an aggrieved party in connection with sale of the Blue Network to Edward J. Noble, and therefore there was no reason for FCC to be allowed to intervene in the hearings on the matter. Commission will take action at its regular meeting Tuesday. Counsel for Radio Corporation argued along the same lines and CIO counsel contended that the labor organization was interested only as a prospective buyer of time from the network.

WMC RECOMMENDS 44-HR. WK. FOR COLLARITES

Recommendation that studio White Collarites be placed on a 44-hour week under the War Manpower Commission's Work Stabilization Plan was made to the Screen Office Employes Guild yesterday by WMC representatives. It was explained deduction of four hours under 48-hour week program would give femme workers time to look after household duties on weekend etc. Business Representative Glenn Pratt of the SOEG submitted details of suggestion to Guild executive board last night. It is understood majority of Collarites favor shorter week in order to get Saturday afternoons off. Producers were represented by Fred Pelton, who gave favorable nod to recommendation.

BOB HOPE, JACK BENNY WILL BE LATE FOR FALL TAKEOFFS

Bob Hope and Jack Benny, now overseas entertaining the troops, will both be late for the takeoff of their airshows on the new season. Hope's return to NBC is now timed for Oct. 5, two weeks later than the original starting date. Guest stars will be used with the Pepsodent personnel during his absence. Johnny Mercer's Music Shop completes the 13-week summer cycle Sept. 14.

Benny will be one week late, teeing up Oct. 10, with the first two broadcasts originating in New York. Hiatus entry, 'Those We Love,' takes the extra week and then moves to its own time for the same sponsors as for Benny, Grapenuts.

SEE THEATRE AID IN EASED GAS RULES

Washington, Sept. 1. — Parking space in front of small town suburban movies in eastern states should go to a premium again following the removal yesterday of the ban on pleasure driving. Penalties for pleasure driving were removed effective today and motorists were placed on an honor system.

OPA officials who remember the use of the honor system when Administrator Brown first succeeded Henderson said frankly that they expect a big pick-up in pleasure driving and that the movies should be major beneficiaries. Amount of gas given motorists is not increased, so that theatre visits must be done on A and B card budgets.

NY LEGIT OPENING

THE SNARK WAS A BOOJUM

New York, Sept. 1.—'The Snark Was a Boojum,' a farce adapted by Owen Davis from Richard Shattuck's novel of the same name, fizzled at its opening tonight at the 48th Street Theatre. Presented by Alex Yokel, in association with Jay Faggen, psuedo whodunit is one of the unfunniest mishaps in recent seasons, being continuously preposterous and practically never humorous. Almost its only interest is as an embarrassing example of how far-fetched theatrical concoctions can become. It is a dismal failure, even in the present box office boom.

Alexander Kirkland directed ineptly. Frederick Fox designed the handsome and workmanlike settings. Catherine Willard, in private life Mrs. Ralph Bellamy, whose husband is currently appearing in the hit 'Tomorrow The World,' gets by without disgrace in a stupid part. MOST major studios, and many of the larger indies, are abandoning the daily wage scale for technicians and converting their trained men to weekly pay basis. Because of the manpower shortage studios are afraid to turn technicians loose when a shooting schedule is completed, and are carrying them over until next picture is ready. Sound technicians, grips, electricians and others who formerly were on daily call now are hired on a weekly basis, receiving full pay whether or not they work. This also applies to laborers, with Studio Utility Employes Local 724 having standing orders to hire any man who can walk.

Two will be Roy Rogers', 'Cowboy and the Senorita' and 'Yellow Rose of Texas' each hitting $300,000 mark, Don 'Red' Barry draws another two for his production schedule, remaining two being untitled John Paul Revere saddler and 'Outlaw Buster.'

Preparing to start 'Billy Mitchell' after completing his current production of 'Jack London' for United Artists, Samuel Bronston yesterday consulted with Ruth Mitchell, Col. NEW LIFE

Baltimore, Sept. 1.—'New Life,' which opened at the Maryland Theatre, follows the current trend of obvious pregnancy in the legitimate theatre but this time with a wide dash of typical rich social significance. Written in light vein, the story of a rich boy's parents seeking to take possession of his poor wife and newly-born son's future dips into rather hackneyed conflict of economic systems but manages to whack out some swell theatre in between.

Fine job is turned in by Betty Field and George Lambert as the young couple involved, and Walter N. Greaza and Merle Maddern as the parents. Ann Thomas as showdame scores, too. Production is ultra smooth and possibilities excellent with brushing up of second half of script.

Sherlock Holmes Faces Death

(Mystery)

Universal production. Co-stars Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. Supporting cast: Dennis Hoey, Arthur Margetson, Hillary Brooke, Halliwell Hobbes, Minna Phillips, Milburn Stone, Gavin Muir, Gerald Hamer, Vernon Downing, Olaf Hytten, Frederic Worlock, Mary Gordon. Producer-director, Roy William Neill. Screenplay, Bertram Millhauser. Based on story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Art direction, John B. Goodman, Harold MacArthur. Sets, R. A. Gausman, E. R. Robinson. Photography, Charles Van Enger. Musical director, H. J. Salter. Editor, Fred Feitchans. Gowns, Vera West. Previewed at studio, Sept. 1, 1943. Running time: 68 MINS.

'Sherlock Holmes Faces Death,' latest in Universal's series of the master detective, lives up in content to its box-office title, picture rating as swell entertainment for lower bracket on double bills. Story is well-contrived and logically-motivated, with a convincing cast to sustain the action, and is a fitting follow-up to others which have preceded it in series. Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce carry on as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, respectively, parts they always enact, and turn in their customary portrayals.

There's enough suspense in picture to satisfy Sherlock Holmes fans and others, too, who haven't previously caught any of series. Bertram Millhauser managed to catch the spirit of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's characters and unfoldment of the plot is typically Sherlock Holmes in action, down to the 'Elementary, my dear Watson.' That some of the characterizations are a bit dated does not detract from the interest feature and patrons will find sufficient mystery fare.

Plot takes spectator to the musty castle in northern England belonging to the family of Musgrave, lords of the manor for centuries. Family has turned castle over to the British government as a rest home for convalescing officers, and placed Dr. Watson, friend of Sherlock Holmes, in charge. It is here that an attempt upon the life of Watson's assistant, Dr. Sexton, is made, followed by the murder next night of Goeffrey Musgrave, head of the family. His body is found by Watson and Holmes, whom Watson has summoned to ferret out the attacker of his assistant.

There follows, then, a well-plotted solution of a mystery which involves Dr. Sexton as the murderer of three men, with Holmes solving the case with his usual flair for the sensational. Entire pattern has been pieced together with a sure hand by Roy William Neill, who served as producer and director.

With Rathbone and Bruce playing up-to-standard performances, pair are well-supported by Dennis Hoey, as Lestrade, Scotland Yard inspector, Arthur Margetson as Dr. Sexton, Hillary Brooke in role of the sole surviving Musgrave, Halliwell Hobbes as the butler, and Frederic Worlock and Gavin Muir enacting the two Musgrave brothers who are murdered. Other parts are well-filled.

Charles Van Enger does an atmospheric job photographing sets designed by John B. Goodman and Harold MacArthur and H. J. Salter's musical direction contributes to the general tone of the production. Other departments stack up.

Kosciuszko

(Historical Drama)

Marek Libkov production for independent release. Made in Poland seven years ago. Directed by Josef Lejtes. In charge of production, Miceczyslaw Znamierowski. Players: Tadensz Bialoszczynski, Elizabeth Barszczenska, Witold Zacharewicz, Jerzy Pichelski and Jan Kurnakowich. Previewed at Filmarte, Sept. 1, 1943. Running time: 93 MINS.

This is the dramatized historical account of their people's hero made by, with and largely for the Poles all over the world, in grandiose production—the story of Kosciuszko, who fought with George Washington and carried back to his native land the infection of freedom which gave the peasantry of Poland the right to own land and to bear arms in defense of their country in the successful revolution against the aristocracy then leagued with the Russian ruler.

The picture was made seven years ago by Marek Libkov, one of Poland's foremost film producers; made in the peaceful time and freedoms of the land before the Germans overran and ravished it to reduce its population by at least 8,000,000 dead and enslaved. It is elaborately produced, with thousands of atmosphere players and troopers of the old Polish army in support of the excellent principals of a large cast. It is in the Polish language, with superimposed English titles, so profuse that nothing of the romantic love story and the tumultous events culminating in the fierce battles for independence is obscure.

Brusque comedy rides along with the more grim elements of the narrative. The love story is moving, the players handsome. The battles seem unnecessarily long, with much charging and running for the comparatively limited amount of close-in decisive action. But this is largely due to the outmoded manner of fighting compared to the savage mauling of present warfare. Infantry, horse lancers, peasants armed with scythes to charge cannon, mill and clash in veritable hordes during the final reels.

Under the inspired production of Libkov and spirited direction of Josef Lejtes, together with the appeal of its heroic figure and theme, the drama whips up strong emotional reaction to elucidate a chapter in Polish history which bears repeating in these times of challenged freedoms and changing orders.

Picture was previewed at the Filmarte last night as an item in the fourth anniversary of the German invasion of Poland, under auspices of the local Polish societies.

Secret Poll Rates Warners Stars And Pictures

Allied naval forces entered unexpected, yet telling, action yesterday when American warships attacked Japanese Marcus Island and British craft shelled the coast of southern Italy. The effect of these actions has not been disclosed, but there is every reason to assume they were great. The Soviet victory at Taganrog turned out to be far greater than initial reports indicated, and it may lead to far-reaching reversals along the entire southern Nazi front. In the background of these military successes however, still lie the ominous shadows of the many unsolved political problems.

THEY got all excited at Metro yesterday because May kissed December and it took two whole minutes of osculation to record it for the camera. Top Price Seats First To Sell in Seattle Legit Boom

Seattle, Sept. 1.—Playgoers here with money in their jeans scorn the lower price tickets for legit attractions, according to Hugh M. Becket, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, which has a heavy schedule of roadshow attractions booked for the coming months. Formerly upper balcony and gallery seats were the first to go; but now they are taken only after more expensive seats are all sold.

Also there's no season for legit shows, as they pull as well in the summer as they do in the fall or winter, with return engagements seeming to suffer little if any from previous runs. Second run of 'Claudia,' which closed this week, garnered $17,500; first run last October hitting $19,000.

'Nancy's Private Affair' comes in Sept. 24 for a run of eight days, and 'Doughgirls' scheduled to open October 4, is the first of a number of attractions to play during the winter months.

U. S. PLANS SUB FOR DECREE

would probably be able to announce, within the next two or three weeks, just what the government intends to ask as a decree substitute.

Consent decree companies agreed today to get together and present a large amount of factual material that will give their side of the case to the government. Independent exhibitors are already well along in the preparation of their squawks against the decree, with material now being forwarded to Washington for compilation.

Tom C. Clark, assistant attorney general, sat down today with the 'first team' of the producer-exhibitor companies—N. Peter Rathvon, Nicholas M. Schenck, Barney Balaban, Spyros Skouras and Joseph Hazen—marking the first time that spokesmen for all the defendant companies have gotten together with Clark, although it is understood that he had spoken to some individually before.

Session was purely preliminary, with each side feeling the other out and no genuine offers being suggested to substitute for the present decree, which expires in November. Clark, still hunting for all available information, asked for certain material which the companies agreed to produce. Session lasted more than two hours, with Clark being aided by Special Deputy Attorney General Robert Wright, who has been working on the decree case for the past three years.

WARNERS EXPANDING FOR BIG POST WAR FOREIGN BIZ

New York, Sept. 1.—Warners, with an eye on expanded post-war world market for American films, is laying groundwork for its share in the business to come by the acquisition of theatre properties and the opening of new offices in foreign territories. Most recent steps in this direction are the purchase of a large piece of property in Alexandria, Egypt, for development after the war, and the opening of offices in Bogota and Cali, Colombia.

Ramon Fernandez, former assistant manager in Mexico, has been appointed manager of the Colombian territory by Robert Schless, head of Warners foreign department. Fernandez will operate from branch headquarters in Bogota under supervision of Armando Trucios, recently appointed supervisor of the northern territory of South America.

GARSON, HARPO MARX IN CAVALCADE

TROUPE IS RAISED TO 13 STARS

Greer Garson and Harpo Marx were added to the cast of the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade last night, bringing to 13 the number of top flight players who will make a nationwide tour of 15 major cities in behalf of the Third War Loan. Previously announced for the all-star variety show were Fred Astaire, Lucille Ball, James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Judy Garland, Kathryn Grayson, Betty Hutton, Kay Kyser and his band, Dick Powell, Walter Pidgeon and Mickey Rooney.

The War Activities Committee in New York yesterday announced that exhibitors who need Army equipment for their bond-selling campaigns during the Drive will be able to secure such cooperation through the local War Finance Committee. A directive from War Secretary Henry L. Stimson to all commanding officers set forth that all possible cooperation is to be given, within the limits of military security, and that the cooperation also extends to personnel.

The WAC has asked the secretary of the Navy for similar collaboration, and approval is expected shortly. A bulletin directed to WAC state bond chairmen urged them to convey this information to theatres under their jurisdiction, so that the widest possible use of service forces may be made in an effort to swell the War bond sales.

When the Bond Cavalcade special train pulls out of the Union Station Saturday evening there will be 97 personalities, musicians, tour executives and assistants aboard, according to tour managers Kenneth Thomson and Charles K. Feldman. All headliners of the Cavalcade have been given a rehearsal call for tonight.

Louis J. Allemann, advance man for the War Heroes Armada covering Zone One out of Los Angeles, planed out yesterday for Sacramento, first stop on the 10-city itinerary of the air tour. Five heroes, from as many branches of the armed forces, and a screen personality yet to be named will be assembled in Hollywood Wednesday to start the tour in an Army transport plane.

STUDIO GUILDS PREXIES ENLIST IN BOND DRIVE

Presidents of studio guilds have enlisted in the Third War Loan Drive and will aid the regular bond committee chairmen of their groups in circularizing all memberships before the campaign is opened Sept. 9 by the Motion Picture War Finance Committee.

Group will include James Cagney, Screen Actors Guild, for which Ralph Byrd is regular chairman; Mark Sandrich, Screen Directors Guild, who will work with Chairman David Butler, and Mary C. McCall, Jr., Screen Writers Guild, where the permanent chairman is Jane Murfin.

This plan is being extended to other industry branches. In the field of agents, business managers and independent publicists, John McCormick will have Bert Allenberg as special committeeman to work among agents, Rex Cole to serve with regular chairman Myrt Blum with the business managers group, and Vic Shapiro to aid Chairman Alan Gordon among publicists.

Pic Peddlers Will Sell Bonds With Films Side Line

Plan whereby film salesmen in the Southern California exchange area will aid and service theatre accounts on all charity collections, bond drives and similar campaigns, goes into operation today when film peddlers start contacting the 300 independent theatres in the area on the Third War Loan drive.

Salesmen will supply instruction folder giving best methods for cooperation between exchanges and theatres in the drive, how to sell the largest number of bonds to the public and employes, how to hold bond premieres, and how to use and arrange for personal appearances of wounded veterans to stimulate sales in case of theatres where local situation is too small.

Thirty-three Southern California film salesmen, representing all companies, met yesterday at the Paramount exchange at meeting arranged by Wayne Ball, local War Activities Committee distribution chairman, to talk over contact and servicing plan, and to prepare for actual start of operations today.

WASH. THINKS BIG FIVE MAY LOSE SOME HOUSES

Washington, Sept. 2.—Following yesterday's session between Justice Department officials and heads of the big five consent decree companies, there is some speculation here that the anti-trust case may move off on an entirely new tangent. Compromise might whittle down the number of theatres, and even the class of theatres, that a producer-exhibitor can operate.

The original idea of complete divorcement would, if carried through, result in a handful of very large independent exhibitors—which would mean more headaches ahead—in the opinion of some Justice Department biggies. Small indies, it was explained, would be no better off than

She also had given same alibis in behalf of others. But Victory Committee records told the whole story. And now femme player is on defensive both with the gabber and soldier entertainment organizations.

CONFUSION is at its height in differentiating between companies, with recent announcement of formation of Producing Artists, Inc., and Producers Corporation of America. With United Artists and Producers Releasing Corporation already established, trade now has its choice of UA, PA, PCA and PRC, all impersonal titles which do not lend themselves to particular distinction.

CAMERAMAN Rudy Mate has devised new technique for photographing double images for the Gene Kelly 'Split-Personality Dance' in Columbia's 'Cover Girl' so that Kelly, dancing both as himself and as his image in a store show window, will be able to cross in front and behind, each with the other, in novel routine. Technicolor associates worked with Mate in figuring it out.

COLLARITES WANT MORE HOURS WORK

Screen Office Employes Guild Executive Board has nixed recommendation of War Manpower Commission for a 44-hour week for studio White Collarites. Guilders will demand that all Collarites who work in pools, stenographic, messenger, etc., be placed on a 48-hour week, with exemptions being granted only in departments where workers can not double up.

Business Representative Glenn Pratt pointed out that adoption of 44-hour week would not speed up production and would not release any workers for employment in other essential industries.

Despite action of SOEG Board, WMC yesterday announced that an exemption had been given industry to work its Collarite on a 44-hour schedule. Announcement by Ralph Elliott, assistant to the director for the WMC Southern California area, also said exemptions from 48-hour week were being granted for a small number of professional employes.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

When Autumn came to ancient Greece and wine was in the air,
The boys and gals wore wreaths of grapes entwined amid their hair.
The same old hair-do comes again after a flock of years;
The gals who strut in Vine street now wear grapes behind their ears.

They look like grapes from a distance, but the new hair-do is phoney vegetation, like the Victory Garden hats they were wearing last year. With all the natural blooms sprouting along the curbstones, Hollywood is the world's greatest producer of artificial flowers.

One reason for artificial flowers in the film industry is the short life of natural blooms. Joe Zilch and Ermintrude Twitch pull a love scene in an embowered balcony surrounded by roses, and come back two weeks later for a retake. If the flowers were natural they wouldn't look the same, particularly after listening to Joe and Ermintrude in the first take. So the flowers are made of wax, capable of standing up under all temperatures, including Charles Boyer or Frank Sinatra.

Bill Boyd gallops into strange precincts in his next Hopalong picture, 'Timber,' which has the scent of tall pines rather than rolling prairies. It is hard to imagine a buckaroo galloping through the pine woods with a 10-gallon skimmer. The popular weapon in the timberlands is an axe, which is not a romantic implement to slay the villain, even though he deserves it after the way he treated the blonde and her honest lumberjack father in the first reel. Sort of messy-like. But you can depend on Hopalong to whittle his heroic way with his trusty six-gun, even in the midst of the forest primeval.

A tunester wrote a lilting song for the boys in the cabaret
And never dreamed that his passing tune would live in a future day.
And now it comes up in Hollywood as the theme of a picture play.

Comedians and Leading Men are returning to baseball this year in their annual clash for charity. They tried football last autumn, and discovered that the gridiron is not a suitable background for comics, so they are going back to Wrigley Field to resume the old mystery series. Larceny With Music

(Comedy-Drama With Music)

Universal production. Co-stars Allan Jones, Kitty Carlisle, Leo Carrillo. Supporting cast: William Frawley, Lee Patrick, Gus Schilling, Samuel S. Hinds, Sig Arno, and Alvino Rey and his orchestra, and the King Sisters. Director, Edward Lilley. Producer, Howard Benedict. Original screen play, Robert Harari. Photography, Paul Ivano. Art Direction, John B. Goodman, Richard Riedel. Sets, R. A. Gausman, A. J. Gilmore. Editor, Paul Landres. Gowns, Vera West. Musical director, Charles Previn. Music supervisor, Ted Cain. Orchestrations, Frank de Vol. Original songs, Don Raye and Gene de Paul, Jule Styne and Eddie Cherkose. Previewed at Fairfax Theatre, Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 2, 1943. Running time: 64 MINS.

Musical Comedy idea revolving around an ex-racketeer falling for a dying relative, who leaves a fortune to his only nephew 'plant', thus inveigling the nephew to sign a contract with him to sing at his hotel, formed the basis for this music-laden Universal film which permits both Allan Jones and Kitty Carlisle to warble a number of songs in engaging fashion. Picture as a whole should do for the dual, offering a goodly bit of comedy combined with a musical melange. It marks Kitty Carlisle's return to the screen, after an absence of several years, and presents Alvino Rey and his orchestra with the Four King Sisters present to entertain with lively song numbers.

Picture follows in line with recent Universal musicals, trio of original songs enabling two principals to show-case them effectively. Total of eight song numbers in all are presented, originals being, 'Please, Louise,' co-authored by Don Raye and Gene de Paul, pair who also turned out 'Do You Hear Music,' latter sung by Miss Carlisle and Jones, Jones singing first number as solo. Other original composition is 'For The Want of You,' by Jule Styne and Eddie Cherkose, and rendered by Jones, Miss Carlisle, King Sisters and Alvino Rey's orch.

Leo Carrillo plays erstwhile bootlegger who now is running a hotel with a dining room deeply in debt. When he falls for the gag planted by William Frawley, manager of Jones and the band, in the belief that Jones' uncle in the Argentine has died willing him a fortune, he thinks he'll recoup his fortune by cutting himself in for half the inheritance. Thus, the forthcoming contract and the gang eats again.

Plot is simple and never allowed to interfere too seriously with the picture's tuneful unfoldment. Kitty Carlisle enters as a singer who got the gate when Jones moved in, and a romance of sorts develops between the two. Film principally is a frame in which to hang the singing of the various chanters, and meets the requirements laid out for it.

Howard Benedict as the producer gave 'Larceny' a run for his budget, and Edward Lilley's direction keeps original screen play of Robert Harari moving, singing being insinuated into plot with reason. Paul Ivano's photography is entirely up to his customary standard and art direction by John B. Goodman and Richard Riedel interesting. Cast uniformly is acceptable.

Beyond the Last Frontier

(Western)

Republic release. Features Eddie Dew, Smiley Burnette, Lorraine Miller, Bob Mitchum, Harry Woods, Ernie Adams, Richard Clarke, Charles Miller, Kermit Maynard. Director, Howard Bretherton. Associate poducer, Louis Gray. Original screen play, John K. Butler, Morton Grant. Photography, Bud Thackery. Film editor, Charles Craft. Sound, Ed Borschell. Art director, Russell Kimball. Set decorations, Charles Thompson. Musical score, Mort Glickman. Reviewed at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, Sept. 2, 1943. Running time: 55 MINS.

'Beyond the Last Frontier' gives Republic's new John Paul Revere western series a good sendoff. Eddie Dew, as Revere, makes an excellent appearance as a smart Texas Ranger, is well-mounted and seems to know his way around in the action requirements. Assignment of Smiley Burnette to head up the comedy also assures a cinch reception from followers of westerns.

Dew appears as an undercover Ranger, working as member of a gun-running gang in the Texas Panhandle so that the outnumbered law officers can have a chance to whittle the outlaws down to more equal terms. Harry Woods, robber chieftain, gets suspicious of the too-frequent tipoffs to his plans and takes advantage of circumstances to plant his own spy in Ranger headquarters. This results in general action designed for pleasure of western fans, with finale having the law win out to satisfaction of all.

Bob Mitchum shows up well in the supporting cast as an adventurous young gunman who finally swings the balance to the Rangers after working with Woods. Ernie Adams, Lorraine Miller, Richard Clarke, Charles Miller, and Kermit Maynard round out the good cast. Howard Bretherton's direction fits the action ably to the market in this Louis Gray production and Bud Thackery's camera takes advantage of the rugged outdoor scenery. John K. Butler and Morton Grant did the first-rate western script.

with Robert Arden

In 99 days from today the current fighting will have equaled the length of the first World War. There are many and striking similarities to the situation. The recent Nazi offensive which turned into the worst defeat ever suffered by the Hitlerite armies is strongly reminiscent of the last German offensive on the western front in 1918. Politically also the picture is strangely parallel, with underground resistance to the conquering Nazi hordes breeding future revolts in economic and political fields, with no definite program for settlement in sight; that is, at this moment. The currently continuing Washington conferences between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill may yet produce the vitally needed solution to the pending political problems, especially if the Soviet government decides to be represented.

before because the very large chains would still be in the best bargaining positions with the producers.

This would inevitably result in a brand new set of monopoly complaints by the little independents against the big independents.

On the other hand, to whittle down the number and class of houses that the big five could own and operate would mean smaller chains to compete with the owners of one or two theatres. It would also mean putting on the market single houses and small regional chains which would assure competition.

There is nothing definite along these lines yet, but it is definitely part of Washington thinking on the subject.

FILMS INCLUDED IN WMC DIRECTIVE

Washington, Sept. 6.—War Manpower Commission officials said today they 'assumed' that motion picture production will probably be included, under Saturday night's directive on the West Coast manpower situation. This means that the studios would be allowed to maintain their present levels of employment, but not to expand.

MORROS, EAGLE GET 150G STORIES GIFT FROM 20TH

Gift of properties worth better than $150,000, in cost of purchase and treatment writing they represent, from 20th-Fox to Boris Morros and S. P. Eagle, represented part of the washup of producership deal when Morros and Eagle left few weeks ago to go on their independent and separate ways. 20th-Fox bought the story properties or developed them from ideas and titles. For 'The Russian People,' play given subsequent title of 'The Snow Is Red,' studio is reported to have paid $30,000. On 'Grand Street Boys' story preparations are understood to have been close to $100,000, and for 'Carnegie Hall,' a bare title and other chargeoffs, the remainder of a total of $150,000 is calculated. Morros, who will produce independently for United Artists on General Service lot, will probably make 'Grand Street Boys' as his first. Eagle's plans have not been announced.

THEATRE MEN EYE CAPITAL AS NEW TAX BITE LOOMS

Washington, Sept. 6. — Theatre and nitery operators throughout the country will be watching with concern when the House Ways and Means Committee starts work on the Federal tax bill. Scheduled to shoulder a good share of the heavier levies are the excises—admission taxes, liquor, cigarettes, etc.

Higher admission taxes would put the damper on plans of many exhibitors to up admission prices, aside from taxes to meet mounting costs. In many cases exhibs will have to mark time until they find out what Congress does about it. Present theatre schedules are a flat ten per cent take on tickets with state and city taxes on top of that.

In some instances excise taxes on cigarettes and liquor were increased last year with admissions taxes unchanged at that time. Feeling in government circles is that theatres and niteries will be blitzed this trip.

Ways and Means Chairman is Robert L. Doughton, North Carolina Democrat, he is hardly expected to stand by and let his cigarette producing state get another crack if theatres come through unscathed.

F-WC UPS ADMISH, OTHERS TO FOLLOW

General five-cent price raise is expected to go into effect in all Los Angeles first run theatres with next changes of bill, following upping by Fox West Coast at its local de luxers. Admission raise in F-WC houses was decided upon as move to offset increased operating costs, particularly for personnel, and in some measure to make up for property destruction by vandals.

With first runs jumping ticket price, second runs and subsequents are also expected to put raises into effect.

WARNERS has mailed letters from its legal department to all studios, producers, agents and publications stating its position with respect to the contract it holds with Olivia de Havilland, as a result of the action she has brought in Superior Court for declaratory relief asserting that the pact is now unenforceable under the California law. Letter states that she entered into an exclusive contract with studio, as a minor on April 14, 1936, for a seven year term. Contract was approved by the court on May 5, 1936, and became effective then. Studio states that all options on the deal were exercised and that it contained provisions for extension in case she should fail, neglect or refuse to perform services required by the studio. Letter says that such situations arose in five instances, and in addition on Aug. 13, 1943, she further failed and refused to report for duty, and is consequently under suspension. Warners says its position is that Miss de Havilland's pact with them will not expire until 25½ weeks after she again resumes the rendition of services for them, under the contract and until she has performed her obligations, which means that others in the industry be aware of that fact.

WARNERS entire advertising, publicity and exploitation policy may be revamped to counteract ad space curtailment by daily papers around the country. Plan for complete change is now being mulled by Charles Einfeld, Warners advertising-publicity director, which would include heavier use of radio and billboard space, plus street ballyhoo and similar forms of earlier showmanship stunts to compensate. Company plans for big ad splash in newspapers for 'Watch on the Rhine' running into trouble because of curtailment, Cleveland Plain Dealer slicing full-page ad on picture's opening at the Hippodrome by 50%. Sheet indicated all future ad lineage will get similar cut.

SET of fortunate circumstances, with advantage taken of breaks, enabled Warners to show 'This Is the Army' to the Allies conference at Quebec. American delegation wanted to do something special to reciprocate for many courtesies and thoughtful hosting by the Canadians. Showing of 'Army' was suggested and hopped on. Wolfe Cohen, Warners Dominion manager at Toronto immediately contacted home office but found no print available. Studio in Burbank was requisitioned. Sole print was on way east on express plane, was intercepted at Washington, transferred to U. S. Army bomber and arrived at Quebec 20 minutes before time scheduled for showing.

NY LEGIT OPENING

BLOSSOM TIME

New York, Sept. 6. — Messrs. Shubert Saturday night revived 'Blossom Time,' at Ambassador, same house where operetta was launched on American career back in 1921. In view of the current Broadway vogue for operetta revivals, 'Blossom Time' will likely find its box office niche, but given more spectacular production and keyed closer to 1943 tempo, it might have attained the popularity of original production. As revived, it stands chiefly on its music alone, with Romberg's original compositions and adaptation of Shubert's score still very listenable.

Credit Shuberts with good lead selections, with Alexander Gray as Franz Schubert, Barbara Scully, transferred from 'Student Prince' as the Mitzi and Roy Cropper as Baron Schober, investing ably sung roles with believable characterizations. Unfortunately, production is sadly lacking in necessary costuming and scenery that are requisites of any successful musical show, particularly period pieces such as 'Blossom Time' as mounted by the Shuberts in a skimpy production, with the trappings lending neither color nor brilliance. Stage business of supporting players poor, hence performances lacked smoothness.

Others in cast included Douglas Leavitt, Robert Chisholm, Harry K. Morton, Zella Russell, Helene Arthur and Monna Montes.

WAR SEEN ON PAID PREVIEW

INDIE PROTEST LIKELY ON 20TH'S 'WINTERTIME'

Exhibitor trade showing of 'Wintertime' tonight at the Wilshire theatre by 20th-Fox is likely to precipitate a battle with Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners if latter organization continues its stand against what it terms 'commercialized previews.'

When studio held trade screenings of 'Heaven Can Wait' early last month before paying audiences, PCCITO dispatched letter to Tom Connors, 20th-Fox general manager, protesting action and charging such showings violated the consent decree. Indies take the stand that 'commercialized previews' cause inroads to potential boxoffice receipts of a picture and establish an unfair trade practice.

It is believed exhibitor organizations throughout the country will swing into line against the practice if continued in face of indie protests, with possibility of concerted action, even as drastic as declaring such screenings the first run of a picture and refusing to accept it on other than second run terms.

20th-Fox dispatched special invitations to exhibitors for tonight's trade showing of the Sonja Henie film over the weekend. Distribution end of the company is understood to feel that reaction to a picture is better when screened for exhibitors before a regular audience and that theatre men turn out in larger numbers for a regular theatre showing than they do for small projection room run-offs.

Play Review

THAT OLD DEVIL

Heart-warming to the old guard of legit is the return of J. C. Nugent as playwright-actor. To a later generation of playgoers—the cinema set—a further note of nostalgia is added by dimpled, starry-eyed Sally O'Neil, making her first professional appearance in many years. Scene of this mellowing chapter in home front theatricals is the Left Bank theatre on the Sunset Strip, where once William S. Hart lolled in comfort when not two-gunning baddies. Truly a night of memories Sunday when Chelle Janis premiered her new footlight emporium.

It was an auspicious opening, the 100-seat house being crammed with the nobility of stage and screen. They were there to pay humble tribute to that grand old trouper, J. C., to view his new play and to encourage Miss O'Neil to a fresh start in pictures. The tariff was $5.50 but they didn't seem to mind. After the show patrons and cast of the play mingled on the grounds at a buffet.

Nugent's 'Old Devil' is a comedy about a retired business man well past middle age who glories in the whispered accusation that he's the father of an illegitimate offspring to be born to a refugee Irish girl he and his wife had befriended. He struts proudly while his frau burns and the gossipy neighbors eye him enviously as 'wotta man.' It is patently evident that he's not the gal's betrayer but he keeps up the deception for his hour of triumph, long coming. Virtue must have its inning, too, so in the third-act unraveling the impending birth is legitimatized by the gal's previous secret marriage to the town's ne'er-do-well. But the old devil is not such a fossil after all for fatherhood becomes him, too, and he's still strutting when the curtain falls.

Nugent motivates the farce all the way and spreads the laughs evenly. Dialog is pungent and despite the racy premise the play never gets out of line. With a bit of doctoring it may get serious attention from both films and play producers on the big time. Sally O'Neil as the refugee girl gives a nicely restrained performance and is to be congratulated for not making the mistake common to other cinema comebackers, that of overplaying and mugging. Some indie could do a lot worse than taking this play and casting the young lady in the lead. Nugent and Miss O'Neil get good support from Marjorie Wood, Douglas Wood, Wayne Douglass, Fred Howard, Lou (Mrs. William Anthony) McGuire, Richard French, Elaine Lockridge, Katherine Grey and Gay Parkes.

'Devil' gets two weeks run followed by Patsy Ruth Miller's 'Windy Hill.'

LEGIT OPENING

BRIGHT LIGHTS

Detroit, Sept. 6.—After demonstrating for most of a first act why vaudeville died, 'Bright Lights,' which premiered here at the Cass Theatre Friday, woke up in the second half and flashed a little Broadway quality. The still-rough musical, produced by Alexander H. Cohen and Martin H. Poll, looked like a couple of different shows had been linked, but wound up leaving a good taste in audience mouth when it abandoned pretensions of being a musical comedy and settled down to a straight revue.

Greatest trouble with the sorry first portion is that it was cluttered up with some vague stuff about producers trying to shape up a show at Sardi's, with Smith and Dale flattening it out with 1890 dialog. This idea was lost completely by the second act and in the revue portion, as in the meritorious portions of the first act, the talents of James Barton, Jayne Manners, Frances Williams, John Kirby's orchestra and particularly the team of Jere Mahon and Billy Worth shone through.

Several tunes were on the catchy side, with 'Dont' Forget the Girl from Punxsutawn' given plenty of verve by Jayne Manners, 'A Lick, a Riff and a Slow Bounce,' which was class in the teaming of Miss Manners, Frances Williams and Billie Worth, 'Haven't We Met Before' and 'Your Face Is Your Fortune,' both of which were delivered by Mahon and Worth, all having hit potentiality.

Mahon and Worth scored tops with their delightful hoofing and poise.

However, there wasn't much new to the show, which at times looked like the old Orpheum circuit, with Barton, the theatre's funniest drunk, up to his old antics. For something new, he did a travesty on his Jeeter Lester of 'Tobacco Road,' and the old 'I Can't Give You Anything But Love.'

Biggest click of all was Mis Williams' warbling of 'Frankie and Johnny' to Kirby's music, with Miss Manners and James Barton pantomiming the tale and a scorching strip tease inserted by Miss Lynne. Miss Williams, with one exception, got no tunes measuring up to her abilities. Kirby's band scored every time out, and Smith and Dale came through in their old vaude turn in the doctor's office.

Show seems to need a whole new first act and considerable tightening, to have a chance.

Narrative and comedy material was written by Norman Anthony, Charles Sherman, Norman Zeno and Charles Schofield. Songs are by Jerry Livingston, Mack David, Dick Liebert and George Blake. Anthony Brown staged, and scenery is by Perry Watkins.

B'dway Holiday Trade Short of Terrific; Under Last 4th

New York, Sept. 6.—There was no generally big Labor Day weekend business registered here, Broadway being under expectations. Grosses were not as big as on Fourth of July but ran about the same as Labor Day of last year. Friday night's take bettered the prior Friday but not by as large a margin as looked for. Saturday business was up but still short of terrific while Sunday was very big, especially on the matinee. Today started out excellently, but again not sensational.

Travel in and out of the city fell far below that of July Fourth but believe this may have been partly due, so far as railroads were concerned, to last week's lifting of pleasure driving ban and threatening weather. Request for people to avoid non-essential traveling may have also figured. Soldier trade over the weekend was not far above normal for any big weekend.

As usual over the holidays, stage show houses received the biggest play, although 'This Is the Army' at the Hollywood and 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' at the Rivoli, under straight film policies, did strongly. Other leaders were the holdover 'Watch On the Rhine' and Axe Lyman at the Strand; 'Heaven Can Wait,' with Ilona Massey at the Roxy. Others were 'Mr. Lucky' at the Music Hall, 'Du Barry Was a Lady' and Horace Heidt at the Capitol, and 'Let's Face It' and Benny Goodman at the Paramount.

Churchill Bond Speech Released In Newsreels

Washington, Sept. 6.—Bond sale speech made here last week by Winston Churchill and recorded by the newsreel companies goes out as a special bulletin clipped to the reels in Friday's edition. This is the second film bulletin made through the industry's cooperation with OWI. First was 'One Day Sooner,' also plugging the Bond Drive and made by Columbia, it features Rosalind Russell and is in release now. Third of the series, made by Movietone, aids recruiting for the U. S. Cadet Nurses Corps and will be released Sept. 16. The bulletins are under 250 feet.

Title Changes

'Monster and the Lady' is new tag for 'Donovan's Brain,' which George Sherman will produce and direct for Republic.

'Hitler's Women,' Monogram, to 'Women in Bondage.'

'Camp Show,' 20th-Fox, is now back to original title, 'Four Jills in a Jeep.'

'She's for Me' is new title for Universal's 'The Professor Goes Wild,' and 'Arizona Trail' replaces same studio's 'Sundown Trail.'

JEFFERS THROWS HIS SUPPORT TO EXTRAS DRIVE FOR CHARTER

First definite step to merge all of industry's 4,200 extras behind drive of Screen Players Union for a direct charter from the Associated Actors and Artistes of America was taken last night when Mike Jeffers quit Screen Players Protective Committee to support the SPU campaign. In announcing he had signed SPU petition and would aid drive for autonomy and a direct, separate charter, Jeffers said:

'In an all out effort to promote unity among the extra players who have but a single objective in mind, I wish to announce that I have sacrificed my position as a member of the Screen Players Protective Committee and I am now endorsing the policy of a large group comprised of a cross-section of the membership.

'The objective we are seeking, of course, is autonomy and principally democracy within our own organization, a situation which even the Screen Actors Guild has admitted does not now exist. In making this move, I hope to set a precedent whereby each and every member of the organization will realize the drastic necessity of forgetting such trivialities as personalities involved and get behind this movement for a separate charter for extras from the AAAA with 100% solidarity.'

Jeffers is the second group leader to join SPU move, Harry Mayo having previously endorsed the drive, and is now aiding in circulation of SPU petitions on studio sets. Hal Craig, SPU leader who signed Jeffers to a petition said:

'In securing the signature of Mike Jeffers a great thrill was afforded SPU as we felt his signing meant the success of our movement was enhanced a thousand fold, knowing as we do the warm affection and deep respect extra players hold for Mike, as a staunch fighter for their rights and for the betterment of their working conditions.

'At a meeting Sunday evening, the SPU committee voted unanimously to accept Mike Jeffers as one of the committee and also paid tribute to the work of the Screen Players Protective Committee in the past.

'Now that it has been made clear by the heads of the SAG that all negotiations for wage increases with the Producers have been definitely postponed subsequent to an election for our own autonomous union and that no 'deals' will be made with any individual group, it is anticipated that those of the Essential Players who have not been signed heretofore will now come over in a body and endorse the SPU petition, making it a 100% movement.

SPU displayed a letter from Executive Secretary Kenneth Thomson to Harry Mayo in which he said no deals would be made with any group.

ment-hungry attitude of film-going public. Weekend business registered strong for Saturday, even higher for Sunday and held the pace yesterday.

Still drawing top money among 17 deluxe houses is 'This Is the Army,' in its third week. Warners added its Beverly theatre to the Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern Sunday to relieve pressure on latter three houses and addition, playing three shows nightly with no matinees, is expected to hit approximately $12,000 on the week. Other three theatres will divide $64,500, to bring total to great $76,500.

'For Whom the Bell Tolls' in two houses on reserved policy, is racking up hefty $48,000. United Artists, downtown, with four shows a day, will garner estimated $32,000 while the Carthay Circle will reach an easy $16,000 with two shows daily. Picture starts its fourth week today. 'Claudia,' heading the bill at the Chinese, Loew's State and Ritz, displayed plenty of drawing power and is climbing to solid $52,500, very big. 'So Proudly We Hail' at the Los Angeles and Paramount, will catch sweet $48,000, with the downtown house pulling $31,000 while Hollywood goes up to a very big $17,000. Third week of 'Mr. Lucky' and 'Saludos Amigos' at the Pantages and Hillstreet is still proving a money-maker with a sock $35,500 total in sight. Pan will hit approximately $17,500 while the Hillstreet gets husky $18,000.

Hawaii, Hollywood boulevard first run, opened its new horror bill, 'I Walked with a Zombie' and 'Leopard Man' to a new record, beating previous top money picture 'Citizen Kane' and will do a boffo $11,000 on the week.

Mellett's Successor Choice Narrows To Two Names

Washington, Sept. 6.—Palmer Hoyt, chief of the OWI Domestic Branch, said today he has narrowed the field down to two or three film industry men from whom he hopes to obtain a successor to Lowell Mellett as head of the OWI Motion Pictures Bureau. He added that he expected to be ready with an announcement in about a week.

In the meantime the expectation of the War Labor Board Office of Civilian Requirements that it would obtain H. J. Griffith, head of the Oklahoma Theatre chain, as its expert on theatre equipment, has been blown up. Griffith has turned down the job. George McMurphy, chief of the OCR Amusement Section, said he has been in contact with WAC to obtain and industry man for the post, but did not seem too optimistic about the outcome. He said he has a number of lines out for a man but there are no prospects at present. He is hoping to hear from Arthur Mayer of WAC, on the subject in the near future.

Should the industry fail to put forward a candidate, McMurphy may try to do what Palmer Hoyt is doing, draft one for the job.

Wages Up 31% Over Year Ago Helps Boom Show Biz

Washington, Sept. 6.—Underlying reason for the terrific entertainment biz this year is contained in figures announced over the weekend by Secretary of Commerce, Jesse Jones. Individual payments to persons for the first seven months this year—wages, salaries, dividends, interest, royalties, etc., amounted to $78,913,000,000, the wage and salary portion alone was 31 per cent greater than the same period last year.

As for the record smashing summer biz, individual payments for July were 22 per cent over July of 1942. It is interesting that wage and salary earners did almost twice as well in the first seven months of 1943 than in comparable months of the boom year of 1929.

Fidler Drools Apology To Tierney, 20th, Blue Net Palsy Again

Jimmie Fidler publicly apologized to Gene Tierney and all's well again between 20th-Fox and the Blue network. Forced to back down from his scoop of last November under pressure by chain officials, gossiper on his broadcast Sunday abjectly bowed and scraped before Miss Tierney and in the manner of Tojo's slant-eyes dripped a treacly 'so sorry.' In fact he doubled himself apologetically and said he was doubly sorry that he ever broadcast that Miss Tierney puffed on a cheroot.

Fidler's backdown came after Don Gilman, western division chief of the Blue Web, had conferred with Darryl Zanuck, 20th-Fox studio boss. Gilman was told that matters would be squared if Fidler would take it all back and made a public apology on his next broadcast. In the event that Fidler balked, the network was prepared to apologize for him. Gabber thought better of it and drooled the following apology as an 'intimate note from my little black book': 'I understand that a story I told some time ago—about you and your husband and cigar smoking—caused you personal distress. Seemingly some of my listeners misunderstood me. They thought I implied—that you smoke cigars—whereas I only said—that the odor of your husband's cigars made you ill—and you thought trying one—might help you to become accustomed to the smell. . . . Frankly, I thought the story complimented you. I thought you were pretty darn swell—to think of such an extreme measure. Many wives would simply have told their husbands — not to smoke in the house. . . . But, since I did cause you discomfort—please believe me when I say I'm sorry. In fact, I'm doubly sorry—now that you're about to become a mother. . . . You know, Gene, a strange change takes place in a woman's life—when she enters show business. Take yourself, for example . . . when you were just a lovely but non-professional girl—columnists and reporters weren't interested in your affairs . . . But suddenly you became a movie actress. Then, newspapers and magazines were filled with stories about you. Perhaps some of the stories made you unhappy—but you soon learned that they're part of the price of fame — and you took them in stride. You've been a good sport—and a good trouper. So please accept my apologies, Gene.'

HOPE ASKS FOR MORE H'WOOD NAMES TO ENTERTAIN ABROAD

New York, Sept. 6.—Bob Hope, just back from an 11-week tour of the British Isles, North Africa and Sicily, where he, Frances Langford, Tony Romano, and Sgt. Jack Pepper entertained Yank troops on the fighting fronts for USO Camp Shows, stepped out of character at a press interview at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel here today, going serious in a big way.

Hope made a pitch on behalf of the Yank boys under fire, asserting that if he had his way every Hollywood 'name' that could possibly be corraled would be channeled into the USO overseas route.

'I never realized how badly they need us,' said Hope, 'until I got into North Africa and into Sicily. It does something to you when a bunch of boys step out of a bomber, which they had just brought back safely from a successful raid. You've never seen happier faces. And what are they thinking about? The show that we're ready to put on for them. And the fact that they're getting Bob Hope's and Frances Langford's autographs. What a job they're doing.'

And the boys are plenty hep too, says Hope. 'That goes for the British boys as well as the Yanks. They want the latest gags and only the latest. And make sure they're funny because they're the one audience in the world that counts today.'

The Hope troupe returned to New York Friday after covering 20,000 miles, during which they did 121 regular performances and 47 hospital shows. In North Africa they did more than 75 shows in 21 days and in Sicily they performed seven times in three days. The quartet, incidentally, comprised the first Camp Shows unit to play Sicily, flying into the conquered territory three days after it was captured. Italian civilians in Sicily recognized them (although Hope says he was mistaken at some places in North Africa for Joe Cook) and gave them a wild welcome.

It was not unusual for the troupe to play under shell fire, on several occasions jumping into ditches and once narrowly escaping with their lives. That was the time they decided to tour all the wards of a hospital near Bizerte. Had they not made the last minute decision they would have returned to the hotel, formerly a Fascist Youth Movement center, where they were put up just as it was being bombed. 'We were plenty scared,' says Hope, 'watching the buildings rock. Pulling the pillows over our heads was a nightly sleeping arrangement.'

At Palermo they did a show in a big gully—before an audience of 19,000 soldiers with fighter escorts as protection. On the fringe of the audience were Italian prisoners—but Hope couldn't get a rise out of them.

'This'll make Crosby burn,' added Hope as he brought out one of many souvenirs — a Mussolini mother's medal with eight sliver notches signifying the unlamented Il Duce recognition of a woman who gave birth to eight babies during his stepped-up motherhood campaign.

The boys in Sicily, said Hope, kept yelling they want Dorothy Lamour to come over. 'But there isn't a chance, there aren't enough MP's available to protect her from the mob.'

On their way over Hope discovered that the plane's navigator formerly sang in a choir with Crosby. 'We went through 10 hours of harmony numbers in the middle of the ocean.' The troupe also did three shows for the Yank boys stationed in Iceland.

Hope left this afternoon for the Coast to check in at the Paramount lot. 'We'll do another "Road" picture soon and resume the radio program on Sept. 21.' Miss Langford, to whom Hope paid high tribute for her courage in the face of the many intrepid adventures, left New York for the Coast last Friday.

WLB APPROVES $2 TO $7 HIKE FOR SIX EXCHANGE COLLARS

Washington, Sept. 6.—The War Labor Board has approved wage increases ranging from $2 to $7 weekly for office workers of six major film distribution companies in exchanges in about fifty cities. In the case of five companies, Paramount, Loew's, Columbia, United Artists and Vitagraph (Warners), requests were made jointly by the firms and the IATSE to extend union contract wage scales to all exchanges where the union has been chartered since Sept. 1942. RKO made its request without the union. About 100 people benefit by the RKO raises ranging from $3 to $5.50 weekly.

For the other companies, the increases range from $3 for those earning $30 or less to $7 for those making $60.01 to $70 weekly. Covered are 436 Paramount people in ten cities; 102 United Artists employes in 24 cities; 48 Columbia staffers in eight cities; 60 Vitagraph people in four cities and 249 for Loew's in 17 cities.

'On Sept. 9, 1942,' explained WLB, 'the union entered into separate agreements with all the companies except United Artists, providing for a scale of salary increases in the film exchanges. United Artists entered into a similar agreement in December 1942, the wage adjustments were to be applied only in exchanges where a local of the union had been chartered. Effective in those cities where the union was chartered in Sept. 1942 and did not therefore require board approval. The Board's approval of the joint requests extends the contract terms to all the United Artists exchanges and the newly chartered union exchanges of the other companies.'

Davis Relaxes Army Hold on Newsreel War Front Shots

Washington, Sept. 6.—Log jam, holding up public release of some of the best war action shots appears to have been broken over the past week, with newsreels bound to get better and gorier stuff than ever before.

Following conferences here last week between President Roosevelt, Elmer Davis and top War and Navy department officials, Army has lifted certain of its previous bans, such as the showing of American dead in battle. Operation of the Bazooka, sensational light anti-tank weapon, etc. Result is that some footage, heretofore held up, will now be released. In addition starting Sept. 1, Army censored footage of stuff shot by cameramen for the newsreel pools, began carrying data to the reel companies, on the exact number of feet eliminated, as well as type and locales of the deleted subjects, to give reel editors an accurate idea of what was cut.

Sinatra Going Elite; Waldorf NY Next

Frank Sinatra finishes his first picture assignment in 'Higher and Higher' at RKO next week and leaves for New York to rejoin Luckies Hit Parade there and open four-week stand at the Waldorf-Astoria's Wedgwood Room. For the nitery engagement he draws a percentage of the covers against a guarantee. Swooner returns before end of the year for his second RKO picture.

Saville Goes East To Talk 3 Col Films

Victor Saville went east over weekend to confer with Columbia executives on plans for production of three pictures for the company. First will be 'Heart of a City,' with Rita Hayworth and Janet Blair, and other two will be identified upon Saville's return next week.

'Chan' Starts Again

Phil Krasne and Sam Burkett put the first of their Chan series, 'Charlie Chan in the Secret Service' before the cameras at Monogram today with Sidney Toler in starring role. Phil Rosen handles directorial reins on pic which also features Benson Fong and Iris Wong.

LOEWS PASSES MILLION MARK FOR YEAR WHILE PAR LEAPS TO $999,000

First run theatre business in Los Angeles profited by swollen purses of war workers and other entertainment seekers to the tune of $8,971,578, during the 1942-43 season, just finished. Figure is a new, all-time high in Los Angeles film theatre history, being $3,191,064 above previous topper of $5,780,514, set during the 1941-42 season.

With only one exception, each of the 16 first run and moveover houses increased their business well beyond the previous year's mark. Loew's State cracked the $1,000,000 mark for the year to lead the town. Total of $1,002,900, was $195,977 above previous 12 months' high of $806,923. Holding second place among the de luxers was the Los Angeles Paramount with $999,800 in round figures, well above last season's $678,091. House would have scored even higher except for numerous long runs on films that, while profitable, prevented more first-week scoring.

EDNA BEST LEARNING RADIO PROD BIZ

Edna Best, for quarter of a century one of the foremost English stage actresses, has joined Young & Rubicam radio production staff to handle talent and stories and learn the ropes of producing radio shows. Her acquisition is in line with the theory of Hubbell Robinson, assistant radio director of Y & R, that those with theatrical background have something to give to radio and if Miss Best works out others from the stage may be added to the department.

It was the double credit that peeved Miss Brice, who declaimed

CHORUS girls rehearsing big military musical number for 20th-Fox's 'Pin Up Girl' are reporting at 10:00 a. m. every morning and working until 7:00 p. m., instead of customary 9:00-6:00 working schedule. Reason for this is that director may finish with principals at 6:00 p. m., then take his technical crew over to stage where girls are rehearsing to watch them for an hour and figure out how number may best be photographed. Considerable time and expense are saved this way, as well as a more effective and efficient plan being worked out for later filming of number. 64 girls will be in number with Betty Grable.

U. S. Moves to End Pooling and Limit Theatre Chains

St. Paul, Pittsburgh and Cleveland, and noted there were others too numerous to mention.

Move to end pooling, if made effective, would indirectly reduce the size of chains, which is said to be a Department of Justice objective.

Still under consideration by the Department is an interim agreement with consent companies. Will Hays, in Washington last week allegedly in connection with the negotiations, reported that among the proposals studied by the Department are that there is to be no limit on the number of pictures offered for sale at any time; that flat or percentage terms are to be definitely designated for each film at the time of sale, instead of after a picture goes into release; and that there should be no change in price or terms except by mutual agreement between the exhibitor and distributor.

It is considered certain that the consent decree will not be continued in its present form following the expiration of the three-year period Nov. 20. Likely course to be followed by the Department of Justice, with the okay of distribs, will be a drastic modification together with an expansion of arbitration machinery.

that he didn't rate such importance.

Rapp explained to her that it was offered to him and it was only natural to accept such recognition after he had written solo the entire Maxwell show in addition to directing it for four years and having written with Sam Moore the previous Maxwell 'Good News' show. She countered with the proposal if he received double credit she would insist on being called star of the show. When Metro got wind of that they threatened to pull Frank Morgan off the program. She later cooled on this phase of the controversy but insisted that if Rapp got two credits on the show she would quit.

The cooling process again set in and despite entreaties by the agency and General Foods, Rapp refused to continue on the show saying that such circumstances would militate against the former pleasant relations between him and Miss Brice and he could never be happy again on the show.

Rapp will rest for a few months and may write a stage play. He has an writing offer from Metro, a stage bid and overtures from several radio agencies but he prefers to take it easy for a while. Al Kaye, Coast radio head for Benton & Bowles, directs the Maxwell show after this week and is on the hunt for scripters to write the 'Baby Snooks' and Morgan spots.

One time the gals aspired to be
'Miss Utah' or 'Miss Tennessee.'
They came from every neighborhood
And hoped to land in Hollywood.

And now they toil the hours away
In airplane plants by night and day
And many a gal aspires to be

When your scribe was a cub reporter he worked nights and wended his weary way homeward in the dewy dawn. The neighbors, setting out on their daily toil, would look at him funny-like and shake their heads as if to say 'He must be a night watchman or a burglar.' Those were the only tradesmen who worked at night in those days. Now you are awakened at sunup by the twittering sparrows and cooing doves and the versatile mocking birds, and as you walk to work you meet carloads of boys and gals coming home from the plane plants, and they look at you funny-like and shake their heads as if to say: 'Old fashioned guy. He works days.'

AIR DRAFT STAYS FAVORED

LEITCH GIVES OK, BUT BOARDS HAVE LAST WORD

Occupational deferment for agency writers and producers of network programs will be recommended to local draft boards, it was announced yesterday by Col. Kenneth H. Leitch, state director of selective service, in a letter to Fox Case, one of a committee of three representing the Hollywood radio industry, which recently laid before Col. Leitch the essential status of agency men.

Others on the committee were Arch Oboler and Richard Gibson. Bulletin will be issued from state draft headquarters to local boards suggesting that serious consideration be given writers and producers for occupational deferment.

Col. Leitch added that deferment of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers in these categories was assured. His letter to Case follows:

'This supplements the statements made at the conference last week between this headquarters and representatives of the radio broadcasting systems, and others.

'This headquarters is agreeable to issuing a bulletin to the local boards in Los Angeles County explaining briefly your problem and suggesting that your particular problems are writers and producers, and that serious consideration may be given to them for occupational deferment.

'As stated in our conversation, we de not believe you need to be concerned at this time with the deferment of pre-Pearl-Harbor fathers engaged in those occupations for the reason that we believe boards generally will defer them. We repeat, however, the suggestion made during the course of the conference that Forms 42A ought to be filed immediately for each of them.

'In the bulletin we propose to issue, we will point out that a great many of the programs broadcast over the entire United States originate in Hollywood; that the station time is contracted by different agencies; that the agency works up the program, including engaging the persons who are to be heard on the program and preparing the entire program including the script and the music; that these agencies employ writers and producers who develop the idea for the program and then produce it; that your particular problem at the moment is the retention of writers and producers; that both of these are skilled by reason of talent or experience or both; that it is difficult to find persons whose abilities can be developed to the point where they are capable writers and producers, and that local boards will be justified in giving serious consideration to occupational deferment for writers and producers employed by agencies producing radio programs.

'If the foregoing conforms with your ideas, please advise us and we will prepare and issue the bulletin.'

While the military picture is continuing to show an increased favorable trend for the Allies, the political situation is slowly being consolidated too. This plan may become agreeable to the Soviet Union too. Cordell Hull told Argentina off in no uncertain terms yesterday. He warned her that she had built an enduring fence between herself and the rest of the hemisphere by failing to observe her inter-American commitments and that as a consequence a hot bed of espionage against the Allies still exists. Argentina's request for arms and planes received a thumbs down signal.

INDIES BLEAT AGAIN OVER 20TH'S PAID PREVIEW

Another blast against 20th-Fox's exhibitor trade-screenings before paying audiences was taken yesterday by Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners on eve of showing of 'Wintertime' at the Fox Wilshire theatre. Letter dispatched to Tom J. Connors, 20th-Fox general manager, in New York hinted at concerted action to declare such screenings the first run of a film, automatically clearing a picture to the subsequent runs.

It is understood check of exhibitors attending last night's screening of the Sonja Henie picture was made for future reference, same as was done when 20th-Fox held exhib showing of 'Heaven Can Wait' before regular paying theatre audiences early last month.

Letter to Connors, signed by R. H. Poole, PCCITO executive secretary, charges distribution chief, in effect, with breach of faith, and quotes paragraph from message received from Connors in answer to 'Heaven' squawk, which assertedly said company had not set such a practice as a future policy and that this particular picture lent itself to that type of showing.

Letter also points out that exhibitors attending meetings on the trade practice code some time ago presented clause that declared any 'commercialized previews' would constitute a first run and all such pictures would automatically be cleared to subsequent run accounts. Poole asks for Connors' assurance be given that 20th-Fox will stop practice, declaring that otherwise any action necessary will be taken to halt it.

tremendous $939,150, total take being shoved up by extremely heavy-grossing bills since the first of the year. RKO Hillstreet, despite long holdovers, went up to $850,165, well away from previous year's $595,989, to occupy fourth place among first runs.

Warners Downtown jumped from $549,640 to $720,835, with the Pantages next in line with increase from $549,187 to $707,495. Chinese caught $619,400 for the season, against previous $578,176. Warners Hollywood moved up from $469,300 to $572,824. Hollywood Paramount registered $293,250 for 23 weeks of operation during 1941-42 and on full 52 weeks during 1942-43 hit $449,430.

United Artists and Warners Wiltern ran almost neck-and-neck with $411,050 and $410,715, respectively. Only house to drop in receipts was the Fox Wilshire, which sagged from $315,470 rung up during 1941-42 to $288,775 for the season just closed. Falling receipts are accounted for by establishment of first run policies at the Carthay Circle and the Ritz. Latter house copped excellent $297,800 in 39 weeks as a first-runner, while Carthay Circle stacked up $287,100, as compared to $206,800 during 1941-42.

Hawaii theatre registered a big upswing, garnering husky $242,569 as compared to $99,664 for 48 weeks of operation during 1941-42.

Exhibitors believe saturation point has just about been reached for top grosses, houses needing to play to continual capacity to go far beyond boom records set in the season just completed.

BOND STORMERS AIR TO MILLIONS

CAVALCADE REHEARSES ON TRAIN

Aboard Hollywood Bond Cavalcade Special Train enroute Washington, Sept. 7.—Transformation of the Bond Cavalcade's special train into a theatrical workshop has been startling. Stripped of furniture and rugs and with a piano installed, the observation car now is a rehearsal hall for dancers and singers. The baggage car is serving as a rehearsal room for Kay Kyser's band as the Special nears the Capital for opening of the Third War Loan Drive tomorrow.

Through unceasing rehearsal, the Cavalcade's big variety show, to be presented at War Bond rallies in 15 major cities, is acquiring a fine polish. Tomorrow's high light for the 'bond stormers' will be their appearance, with President Roosevelt and Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau on the four network broadcast that will officially launch the bond campaign.

1400 BOND PREEMS SET, MANY MORE SKEDDED

With 30% of territories still to be heard from, more than 1,400 bond premieres have been set up for the Third War Loan Drive, according to word received yesterday from William F. Rodgers, WAC bond premiere chairman. A quota of only 1,200 premieres had been fixed.

In addition to bond premieres, Leo Brecher, New York state bond chairman, reported that virtually all greater New York theatres will have a free movie day for bond purchasers. The date tentatively set is Sept. 27.

It is expected by L. C. Griffith, campaign general chairman, that an unprecedented number of theatres will participate in the drive. Blanket orders for trailers in many territories will undoubtedly make it necessary to increase the original print order for 12,000.

Third War Loan Rangers headed by George J. Schaefer, have been contacting all industry figures to raise sales within the film industry itself.

At present 1,800 reels have been sent to other American republics. These films portray the training methods in all branches of the U. S. Army, starting with the basic training program and going into specialized training. Films are presented to the Board by the U. S. Army.

Born in Jackson, Ohio, Crumit attended Ohio State University and turned to the stage. His chatty singing act made him one of the best-known vaudeville stars. In 1922, he met Julia Sanderson, musical comedy star, and they were wed six years later. He was a former shepherd of the Lambs Club.

FILMS TO EDUCATE PUBLIC CHIEF OUTPUT BY CHINA

Washington, Sept. 7.—China's three film studios are devoting their work mainly to educational films of various types, the U. S. Department of Commerce reports. Each firm specializes, Central Film Studio works principally on newsreels and educationals for the public. China Film Studio does films for the Army: Educational Film Studio, established in 1940 is turning out shorts for school distribution.

Some new general features are also being made, among them are, 'Border' for which the cast spent a year and, 'Devil's Paradise,' a drama of the Chinese underground in the war against Japan.

The Commerce Department's report stated, 'In all Free China there are not more than 3,000, possibly 2,000 projectors, including 35 and 16 mm. equipment of every type in the possession of theatres, schools, private organizations, individuals and the government. Millions of people have never attended a movie. The mobile units are constantly broadening their fields of operation however and refugees moving inland from coastal cities such as Hong Kong and Shanghai are carrying with them stories of Western forms of entertainment and are helping to create a demand for theatres.

'Interest in motion pictures thus appears to be growing steadily in China and the signposts are pointing toward a worthwhile post war market for both projection equipment and films.'

LEGIT OPENING

BRIGHT LIGHTS

Philadelphia, Sept. 7.—There is not much use in figuring Hollywood chances on Walter Kerr's new comedy which had its premiere at the Locust Street Theatre tonight under the managerial aegis of Michael Myerberg. 'Star Dust' must be set down as one of the most ghastly early season plays ever exhibited here. It has no chance for Broadway and equally little for Hollywood.

The characters are all completely unreal and save for a few moments in the last act, when the efforts of a jealous and angry cast to put the star in the shade by standing in front of her, muffling her voice and various other well known devices, the audience last night hardly cracked a smile.

Best known of the cast are, Rose King, (York and King) and Emile Boreo. Neither shined. Gloria Hallward has the role of the temperamental actress who gives up her screen contract to play in an art theatre production. It was the role Myersberg was angling for Joan Crawford to play. Miss Hallward is noteworthy from any angle.

It was also charged the broadcasting industry was using government agencies to crush AFM and using the press to smear the union and himself.

GOULDING WALKS OUT ON PLAY AFTER TIFF WITH LONSDALE

New York, Sept. 7.—Tiff between Edmund Goulding and Frederick Lonsdale, dating back several weeks when Goulding was brought in by Bankroller Joseph P. Kennedy to direct the Lonsdale play, 'Another Love Story,' which Louis A. Lotito produces, resulted in Goulding walking out on the play.

Blowoff came Monday night when play, practically set, was being given a run-through. Lonsdale, according to Goulding, suddenly rose and addressing the director, shouted, 'What the—are you doing to my play?' Heated words ensued with Goulding telling Lonsdale to take over and announcing his withdrawal as director, a job he was doing cuffo because of his long friendship with Kennedy for whom he did the film, 'The Trespasser,' 12 years ago.

Goulding is returning to the Coast in December to direct and produce the new Joan Crawford picture for Warners. He's also collabing on the script with Faith Baldwin.

WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Hollywood learned the Congressional definition of propaganda, this year. It has learned it by the trial and error method as exemplified in two films, Warner's 'Mission to Moscow,' and Disney's 'Victory Through Air Power.'

The definition is simply this: Propaganda is something which I think may hurt my election or the election of my friends, or which MAY help the political fortunes of the other party.

Congressmen and Senators raised the roof over 'Moscow.' They called it nasty names on the floor of both houses. They inserted poisonous statements and newspaper editorials in the appendix of the Congressional Record. They even spoke about it in various parts of the country. Those were the Congressmen who thought it could hurt them and help those of opposite political beliefs.

'Air Power,' on the other hand, has come through scot-free. There hasn't been so much as an irate whisper from a stateman. And yet the film is loaded with dynamite. It openly and frankly urges a unified air force and the removal of air direction from land and sea soldiers. This, of course, is highly controversial, particularly in the midst of a war, especially so when the nation's top military leadership—for better or worse—disagrees.

And, yet, no peep from a Congresman that this is propaganda. The reason: up to this point, at least, there appears no chance that it will affect anybody's election or re-election.

TREASURY UNHAPPY

AT the recent regional meeting of Eastern theatre operators here in connection with the new war bond drive, somebody made a speech which must have made Treasury officials in attendance very unhappy.

He suggested that theatre operators were one of the many groups which had a selfish interest in the success of the campaign. He pointed out that if people bought bonds now, they would have money after the war—even if there should be a depression—to spend for theatre tickets, when houses might otherwise suffer; for the purchase of new washing machines, automobiles, etc.

It is all very hush-hush in Treasury circles, but the experts originally figured out that the best campaign for the sale of bonds would be to plug these very things. It would give the public a good, selfish motive for saving now.

Then, suddenly and quietly, the idea was buried five fathoms deep. The Treasury decided this could conceivably develop into post-war inflation, with everybody cashing in their bonds at once and not waiting for the maturity dates. Treasury hasn't decided yet what its post war policy on this will be.

ITALIAN FILMS FREEDOM

ITALIAN film producing companies are being reorganized by the Badoglio government, with the industry heads given a freer hand in selecting subjects than under Mussolini. . . . Theatres now showing a new documentary short, 'Ali d'Argento' (Silver Wings). Pic glorifies the air force. Is propaganda to plug new enlistments. . . . Nazis claim their studios now have 259 scientific subjects scheduled. Say their production is at an all-time high, with the industry adapting itself 'to the events elastically in order to be always topical, variable and covering a wide field,' according to Demandowsky, head of Tobis. . . . New Nazi propaganda wrinkle shortwaved to this country is to claim that neutrals and pro-allied nonbelligerent countries are protesting to the U. S. about the 'defamatory films of political character' exported to them by Hollywood.

ARMY Signal Corps is combing the country for used 16 and 35 mm. motion picture cameras, and all types of lenses and other accessories such as tripods and exposure meters. . . . The thousands of Axis war prisoners in this country have now settled down to the extent that they are developing and showing their own home-made vaude shows in the prison camps. . . . Kathryn Grayson gets credit for putting on the first midnight show at an Army camp during her recent visit to Camp Crowder, Mo. She was guest star at a soldier-talent affair. . . . When 'Follies Girl' was run for the Engineers at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., Corp. Ray Melback was in the audience watching himself perform. He dances in the pic as one of the 'Three Heat Waves,' having worked on the film just before induction. . . . Gertrude Lawrence was guest star of the soldier revue put on at Camp Edwards, Mass., last week. . . . And Capt. Clark Gable has been voted pin-up boy by the WACS at Camp Breckinridge, Ky. Second choice was Ronald Reagan, with John Payne third. . . . Revival of old Hollywood silents is doing a land office biz in the 'Old Bowery Music Hall' at Fort Monmouth, N. J. Sounds like a good idea for other camps.

GARDNER MAY SUB FORD

THEY think here that Neville Gardner, Hollywood motion picture rep of the British Information Services is a likely successor to Richard R. Ford who recently left the equivalent job in Washington.... 'TITA,' still doing a simultaneous run in two D. C. houses, remains in its third week biggest thing in a b.o. way ever to have hit the burg. . . . They say that trip around the country Bill Lewis will make for CBS has a lot to do with wire hookups to key stations for television, a subject Hollywood has plenty interest in.

NO BONUS FOR EXTRAS CARRYING STRETCHERS

Approximately 40 extras who demanded and received an adjustment to $16.50 when called upon to carry stretchers on a recent Metro set at Third and Broadway found adjustment had been cancelled when they received checks. Studio took position adjustments had been given under duress when extras threatened to delay shooting, and that original call was for $10.50. Extras appealed to the Screen Actors Guild, but latter held studio was right since original call specified $10.50 for 'English Soldiers will carry or be carried on stretchers.' Anticipating certain extras might demand adjustment, SAG had a representative at Central Casting Corp. when calls were handed out. SAG has always taken position players can negotiate for pay higher than minimum, but that once player has taken job he cannot demand more coin.

ARMY, NAVY STRIKE BACK AT HARMON ON WAR PIX

Washington, Sept. 7.—Army pictorial and public relations officers say that WAC Coordinator Francis Harmon unfairly put them on the spot on charges of withholding good newsreel material. They see red every time Harmon's name is mentioned, asserting that he has been 'constantly griping to Government heads' that they were holding back a roomful of good newsreel stuff shot by cameramen for the newsreel pool.

The 'roomful of censored films,' said one spokesman, is actually contained on one small shelf in the Pentagon Bldg., being held back for security reasons. 'The Army has nothing to hide,' the spokesman continued. 'It is only accidental that the full report of how much the Army had to cut out from the complete footage was not reported to the newsreel editors in the past.

'From now on, every editor will know just how much is being withheld. No industry spokesman will be able to go to the Government heads to complain.'

What particularly got under the skins of some officers was that, at the recent meeting of eastern theatre operators in connection with the War Bond Drive, Harmon publicly asked WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson to help get more realistic pix released. OWI has just won a fight to get better pictures released by both the Army and Navy.

SERVICES HANDLE HOSPITAL SHOWS

San Francisco, Sept. 7. — Armed Forces Entertainment Committee of Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps has taken over all entertainment designed for benefit of service men in local hospitals.

Working committee of 14 women has been appointed by Lt. Comdr. Orin, in charge of recreation, recruits drawn from San Francisco and Oakland Red Cross, A. W. V. S. and U. S. O. AFE has been promised full cooperation of all unions connected with theatrical world.

Move came about when two groups of women who have been acting unofficially clashed, and more specifically when Frank Fay was literally hi-jacked when he was picked up at his hotel half an hour ahead of schedule by one of groups and taken to a different hospital than the one for which he originally had been slated.

CALIFORNIA WANTS PIECE OF ROYALTIES FROM ESTATES

New York, Sept. 7.—Demand of California State Inheritance Tax Department for a cut in the future incomes of the estates of Gus Kahn, Ralph Rainger and Victor Schertzinger from Ascap has caused concern among top writers in the Society. Members' lawyers have already made the suggestion to Ascap that they get together to thresh out the legal questions raised by the California move. Precedent already has been established by the federal government on the issue. Estate of George Gershwin recently worked out a settlement with collector of internal revenue whereby government would share in the estate's royalties from Ascap over a period of five years.

As a result of the Gershwin settlement estates of Ascap writers are faced with inheritance applications not only from the federal government but from states with similar tax requirements. Ascap has taken the position that when a writer-member dies his contract with the Society ends and that it is up to the Society to elect to membership one or more heirs. Transition membership is not subject to taxation, Ascap maintains.

Martin Gang, Hollywood attorney, is now in New York to huddle with Ascap counsel on the California law. He represents estates of Rainger and Kahn.

BACK THE ATTACK

THAT'S the task of show business starting today. Yesterday the good news, a swell jumping off angle for the sale of $15,000,000,000 in Treasury Bonds, was given out. 'Italy Had Surrendered.' It should be the greatest incentive the people of this Nation could have in 'Backing the Attack.'

Those in show business are exerting every bit of effort, energy and vitality to induce the public to surrender $15,000,000,000 this month to the Treasury Department. A great bunch of strategians are on the job. They're smart and resourceful. Of course, they haven't military authority nor ammunition with which to perform their task. But they have plenty to go on to show that the Allied Nations are going in the right direction and must be supported by the people of this Nation through the avenue that will support the Military by buying the ammunition as well as other prerequisites to carry the war to complete victory.

Hollywood has sent out a Caravan of top box office names to help in the effort. The Exhibitors of the Nation are dedicating themselves to the 'Attack'—100%. Those of us who are not directly contributing to the campaign in an effort and operation have an easy task. Buy Bonds and put Attack Month over the top 100% plus.

So let's start buying today and keep on buying as long as we have the wherewithal to do so. That's Backing the Attack which will lead to Victory and World Peace.

• HOLLYWOOD • INSIDE •

THE boys in service at the farthest outposts of American forces want current film product, which does not seem to be seeping through as much as the men would like. But, according to a letter received here a few days ago from a former Hollywoodian now with the AAF in China, food is more important than pictures. In pointing up this salient fact he writes: 'We could use some more current screen stuff here, most of the pictures we get are pretty old. Everything is 16mm. prints. We don't mind that because the quality is pretty good, but we would sure like to see something new for a change. We had canned milk for our coffee tonight for the first time in a month. Yes, food is more important than pictures at that.' Comparison of wants for the boys on the China front arises from fact that all supplies and equipment must be flown over the hump from India. Space on the planes is limited to absolute requirements, and film gets transported on the few occasions when there's room.

SURRENDER of Italy to the Allies yesterday points to Warners being able to cash in on another boxoffice break—not only one, but two. Studio currently has two pictures with southern France backgrounds before cameras, 'Uncertain Glory,' Errol Flynn starrer, and 'Passage To Marseille,' starring Humphrey Bogart. Studio yesterday gave orders to push through both these pictures as speedily as possible in order to take advantage of exploitation value of war move, and possibly anticipate Allied forces' possible move of invading southern France. Prospective break is in line with Warners luck in past. 'Casablanca' was finished and released coincident with Allied invasion of North Africa. Studio got still another break with release of 'Action In the North Atlantic.' This picture was released when Nazi sub menace was at its height—exact theme of film. With release of 'Edge of Darkness,' too, Norway was in headlines at the time.

THE 'birdcage' is a new device in auxiliary camera equipment now being used for first time in C. B. DeMille's Paramount production, 'The Story of Dr. Wassell.' Developed by Paramount's engineering department, under A. C. Zoulis, the 'birdcage' is a movable steel frame wherein the camera may be swung beneath the neck of the camera boom, manipulated by two sets of mitre gears. Device makes it possible to lower lenses within 14 inches of the floor and to be panned in either direction, whether boom is stationary or in motion, a feat hitherto impossible. The gears operate by hand. DeMille, incidentally, used the boom itself for first time in pictures while remaking 'The Squaw Man' in 1931, when he wanted camera to glide up to second-story window.

War is too mechanical and its mechanics are too miraculous for the youthful mind to grasp. Young Joe Public, and often his old man, still are attuned to the hoofbeats of a bygone day. The horse may have lost its potency as a military arm, but its romantic appeal still gallops on. A western is still a western even though the high-falutin' producers advertise them as Outdoor Specials.

Upton has a son, 24, in the Army, and another, one year old in diapers. The infant son's name is Julius Caesar Quintus Ultimus Hall. The Julius is derived from the mother's name, Julia. The Caesar is from a caesarian operation. The Quintus is number five in the family, and the Ultimus means the last, an old Latin custom. Wintertime

(Filmusical Comedy)

Twentieth Century-Fox production. Stars Sonja Henie, Jack Oakie, Cesar Romero and Carole Landis. Features S. Z. Sakall, Cornel Wilde and Woody Herman and his orchestra. Supporting cast: Helene Reynolds, Don Douglas, Geary Steffen, Georges Renavent, Jean Del Val, Arthur Loft, Jean De Briac, Charles Irwin and Dick Elliott. Produced by William Le Baron. Directed by John Brahm. Screenplay by E. Edwin Moran, and Jack Jevne and Lynn Starling. Story by Arthur Kober. Lyrics and music by Leo Robin and Nacio Herb Brown. Photography by Joe MacDonald; special photographic effects by Fred Sersen. Film editor, Louis Loeffler. Art direction by James Basevi and Maurice Ransford. Musical direction by Alfred Newman and Charles Henderson. Tradeshown Sept. 8, 1943. Running time: 90 MINS.

In addition to again displaying the expert skating specialties of Sonja Henie, this one includes music by the popular Woody Herman and band, a routine tale, and broad comedy by Jack Oakie and Cesar Romero. Although lightly constructed, it still carries sufficient 'escapist' entertainment elements to provide nominal profit at the box office.

Miss Henie's skating exhibitions still catch attention, and are expensively mounted. Oakie and Romero carry the bulk of the smart-cracking comedy lines—with Romero also called on for several broadly slapsticked routines. Herman and his orchestra expertly handle the musical side of the tunes prepared by Leo Robin and Nacio Herb Brown. But all these factors are knit in loose fashion, with story itself hitting the ups and downs of pace and development.

Tale is along strictly formula lines. Oakie has a ramshackle hotel on the outskirts of Quebec with group of entertainers—but short on patrons and long on debts. Norwegian millionaire S. Z. Sakall and skater-champ niece, Miss Henie, arrive figuring layout is the swank Chateau Frontenac, but stay on while Oakie promotes the old man to buy a half interest and refurnish the place. Girl falls in love with Cornell Wilde, until latter spreads his time on Helene Reynolds, winter sports mag writer, to generate publicity for the spot. Romero pitches for Miss Henie, while he in turn is pursued by jealous dancing partner, Carole Landis. Invasion of Norway freezes Sakall's fortune to complicate operations, but the ice show is staged for expected hit. Miss Henie decides to marry Romero in order to obtain entry into the United States to star in New York ice spectacle, but Cornell steps in to carry her off as expected.

Picture interweaves the song numbers and blade appearances of Miss Henie at frequent intervals, but in between the pace sags in numerous spots. Romero is central figure in a chase around the hotel where he is clad in long underwear for memories of the old Mack Sennett technique.

Songs provided by Leo Robin and Nacio Herb Brown in their initial teaming hit a high standard. 'Later Tonight,' 'Dancing in the Dawn' and 'Wintertime' are especially good tunes that have a chance for pop attention. 'I Like It Here,' a novelty song presented by Miss Landis and Romero, also can catch on for the juke boxes.

Oakie displays his usual fast pat-

Jimmie Fidler sent Daily Variety a magnanimous check for advertising yesterday. However, our records do not show that the Gossiper had any advertising in the paper. We do not know Fidler to be an advertiser. We did print a news story about Fidler on Tuesday. It was a rather amusing one. Maybe Fidler liked it as advertising. But as our news policy is not a subsidized or remunerable one, Fidler's magnanimous fee cannot be accepted. So we are holding the check until we hear from Fidler as to what charity his altruistic gesture might be turned over to. The check was for one cent.

ITALY'S FOLDO SPURS ACTION ON DRAFT FATHERS BILLS

Washington, Sept. 8.—Italian surrender is seen here as likely to give great impetus to bills which will be introduced to Congress next week to halt the father draft. Show business, already hard hit by the draft, and fearing worse to come after Oct. 1, will watch the Congressional action with deepest interest.

One bill would call a general halt to drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, including employes of theatres, amusement arcades, production of theatrical costumes, advance and booking agents, theatrical and film managing agents, etc. Representative Andrew May, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, said today he will introduce his bill to prevent father draft next Tuesday when Congress convenes. He added he would call an almost immediate hearing of his committee to consider the measure. May predicted the bill would easily roll through Congress. He did not speculate on whether the President would sign it.

Meanwhile the bill of Senator Burton K. Wheeler to defer fathers until Jan. 1, 1944, already has been approved by the Senate Military Affairs committee and is on the calendar for immediate action. Backing up this legislation is today's statement by T. Reynolds, chairman of the Military Affairs committee, who called for the armed forces to review their need of manpower in view of the latest developments.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

The unconditional surrender of Italy (as forecast here on Sept. 7) is going to have far-reaching psychological effects which may lead to a complete collapse of the European Axis structure. The whole situation looks like an apple tree—known to be rotten to the core, but no one can tell exactly when it will fall. It is doubtless that the hammer blows of the Allied air forces and the Red Armies are going to speed up that collapse. Far-reaching actions of the American Seventh Army are under way, and in view of the unparalleled Soviet offensive it is not beyond possibility that a pincer movement by way of southern France and the Balkans will be made simultaneously.

King Escapes in Wreck to Join AFM Hearing

New York, Sept. 8.—Gerald King, head of Standard Radio of Hollywood, who was on the 20th Century Limited wrecked Tuesday at Canastota, N. Y., arrived in New York uninjured and in time for the second day's War Labor Board hearing of the American Federation of Musicians transcription dispute. King disclosed that late this week his company will cut 20 discs of top vocalists in new pop tunes with vocal backgrounds added. If the hearings continue much longer he said his partner, Milton Blink, will join him here.

Today's hearing was partly devoted to a reply to James C. Petrillo's charge yesterday against the transcription companies' broadcasting industry and government agencies. It was pointed out that the action was instituted against AFM and not the transcription or broadcasting industry. Process of mediation, it was said, was invoked to bring about the WLB hearing. Petrillo's charge was characterized as an aspersion on government agencies. Elmer Davis also was defended against charge by AFM leaders that he was tool of CBS in asking AFM to end the 'strike.'

Joseph Padway, counsel for AFM, took the edge off the Petrillo charge by stating that Davis acted unwittingly, nevertheless AFM resented the peremptory OWI-FCC demand that the union end the ban without consulting the union as to the rights or wrongs of the case. Padway said the transcription companies had been consulted. He also charged the companies with being a tool of National Ass'n of Broadcasters, which was denied. It was brought out by Arthur Meyer of the three-man panel hearing the case that according to FCC figures 512 stations do not employ musicians. Others panel members are Gilbert Fuller, representing the transcription industry, and Max Zaritsky for labor.

FIRST RUN HOUSES WILL FOLLOW F-WC PRICE TILT

Tilt in night prices of 10 cents and a daytime upping of five cents become effective at the RKO Hillstreet and Pantages theatres Tuesday at 6 p.m. with start of 'Behind the Rising Sun.' Day-daters will wind up profitable four-week run of 'Mr. Lucky' and 'Saludos Amigos' with day screenings up to 6 p.m., when new picture takes over. Increase tilts night prices from 65 to 75 cents, following similar upping made effective last Thursday by Fox West Coast in its local first run and continued run theatres.

Similar increases start at the Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramounts, it is understood, when current bill of 'So Proudly We Hail' washes up its run. Warners Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern will also install new prices when 'This Is the Army' completes lengthy engagement and 'Watch on the Rhine' is brought in.

Increase brings price level up to same scale as has been in effect in San Francisco for some time. Upping resulted in no lessening of box office in the Bay City and local jump will in some measure offset stiffened operating costs.

A number of independent and circuit houses in the territory around Los Angeles have already jumped prices and others both in and out of the city are expected to follow general price raise within the next few weeks.

U. S. FILMS TEACH BRITAINS

Washington, Sept. 8.—Britain has been making extensive use of motion pictures in factories to 'clarify production jobs,' Fred Barton, war correspondent, reports in the new issue of 'Factory Management and Maintenance' magazine. Reason is that majority of Britain's factory workers are now women, many of them housewives, with no former industrial or business training.

Article emphasizes that use of films to train and inspire war workers is also applicable to peacetime production. Hint here is that the film industry can make itself a new market for specialized subjects after the war.

FCC Denies Creditor Right to Intervene In Blue Net Sale

Washington, Sept. 8.—Federal Communications Commission has denied without prejudice the petition of a group of Blue network creditors to intervene in Friday's hearing on the transfer of the web from Radio Corp. to Charles Noble's American Broadcasting System. Creditors claim to represent $2,000,000 worth of debts of the Blue net.

Denial by FCC was on technical grounds and it appears likely that the creditors will be permitted to present testimony before the hearing is conducted. Action follows an earlier turndown by FCC of a request by the CIO to intervene. Request for intervention also has come from the American Network, Inc., a frequency modulation organization which fears confusion of its name with American Broadcasting System.

STUDIOS HURRY TO DROP WAR PIX

ITALYS FALL WILL JUNK STORIES

Sudden capitulation of taly, although indicated and anticipated since the Allied forces successfully landed on Sicily, smacked studio tops and producers yesterday, and projected quick confabs on status of completed and preparing features with war themes.

Surrender of Italy carries widespread implications to films—especially those carrying dramatic content of the past or current European background. Studio execs, in sitting back in elation at yesterday morning's electric news, calmed down to check carefully over their coming programs with thought of ditching all war themes that look like they would be antiquated by fast-moving events on the battlefronts.

SPEED RELEASE DATES

Producers also checked over war-themed pictures completed or in various stages of editing, and advised distribution heads in the east to move release dates forward on this type of product so grosses would not be diminished through too long shelving to have Allied victories take the edge off audience factors.

General industry attitude seems to be that—with Allied offensives rolling fast on all fronts—that anything can happen, especially in the European area. Although general opinion is that Germany is unlikely to surrender in the same manner as Italy, it is admitted that such a fact is entirely possible. If latter should occur, studio chiefs are reluctant to have too much investment in uncompleted pictures on which losses would be inevitable.

There is not so much concern in studio circles over films based on fictional or factual events in the Pacific area. In contrast to the European situation, attitude is that the battle against the Japs still has a long time to go, and films with Nip-hating themes will be safe to continue through production.

YARNS FOR ASH CAN

As a result of executive perusals in various major plants yesterday and today, it is expected that a number of war yarns that are based too close to the objectives of the Allied armies, will be tossed into the discard permanently. Stories that are likely to be iced are those dealing with spies in Europe and intimate dramas of Hitler and the Nazis.

In view of sudden disappearance of Mussolini, general opinion is that repeat treatment might be accorded Hitler and the Nazis by the German army tops—and with too much suddenness for comfort for those studios with films in production or waiting release.

40 U. S. FILMS GO INTO ITALY THIS WEEK-END

the pictures to the Civilian populace on a percentage basis.

There were situations there where equipment was not up to par that were quickly remedied by the engineers of RCA and Western Electric who had parts to supply them for the machines, and also portable equipment where stationary equipment was either not available or had been damaged beyond repair.

Reports received by foreign company heads in New York are that the business in North Africa is extraordinarily good, and that a considerable sum of money has been already collected to be held for the American film companies on the rentals.

Same group of films with Italian superimposed titles was readied for Italy and Sicily. In the past Italians have had dubbed versions of American films, but the foreign heads of the companies feel that, for the time being, or until Europe and the Axis areas have reached a normal gait, the superimposed titles will be used instead of dubbed to the native tongue of the countries in which the films will be shown.

EQUIPMENT IN GOOD SHAPE

Lawrence arrived in Sicily few days after the Allied Invaders had cleaned up the Island, with group of RCA and Western Electric engineers. They inspected all of the equipment in cinemas that was in usable shape, fixed up a lot of it, alloted portable equipment where stationary was not usable or available and, it is expected, by end of this week that the American films will be shown in all of the important communities on the island.

Lawrence will go through the same procedure next week when he gets into Italy, contacting the commercial operators of cinemas, have their equipment checked, and then arrange the percentage terms for the showing of the films. In Southern end of Italy, there is not much cinema business, however, outside of Rome. Lawrence will be able to line up dates and bookings for the pictures so that they can be shown within next couple of weeks in all areas where there are no hostilities.

KASTNER READY

In London, DeLacey Kastner, formerly with Columbia and now with OWI, it awaiting an opportunity to enter other Axis controlled countries and start operations, with the same 40 pictures, when Allied troops have taken over. These pictures have been superimposed in the various languages spoken in these countries and have been in England ready for shipment almost a month.

The subject matter of the films is propaganda and entertainment. There are no controversial subjects in the allotment. Some of the films that will be shown depict the strength and might of the United States, but all are of the entertainment variety, with the propaganda, not too obvious, but understandable.

In the group are all top calibre pictures, with no Crime, Horror or western films included.

OWI HOLDING FORTH

The OWI men will continue to operate on behalf of the American film companies until the latter have had an opportunity to reorganize their distribution setups in the capitulating nations. When this is done, a representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association of America, will function as a general European contact for the industry, take over the coin collected for rentals by the OWI and redistribute the money to the companies to which it is credited. It is figured that major companies will be able to re-establish their distribution activities in Italy within the next three months.

Soviet Rep Tells of Russ Interest in American Pix

Mikhail Kalatozov, representative of the Soviet motion picture industry in the Western Hemisphere, speaking yesterday at a luncheon in his honor at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel, emphasized the interest taken by people of the Soviet Union in American pictures. After expressing his appreciation of the opportunity to be lunching with Hollywood production heads 'on a day when the United forces of the three great powers, America, Great Britain and the Soviet Union, are dealing decisive blows at the center of evil,' Kalatozov said that his present visit here is a direct result of his countrymen's interest in American film offerings. He said:

'I am here not alone because of the interest of the Soviet people in American pictures, but really because of the interest of the Soviet people in American people, and because the motion picture is the best medium through which one people may learn about another. It is no exaggeration to say that America is the colossus of nations to the Soviet people, because of its great efficiency and its moral characteristics.'

Y. Frank Freeman, prexy of the Producers Association, presided at the luncheon. Others present included Maurice Benjamin, Joseph I. 80% VOTE FOR IBEW IN ELECTRICAL REFERENDUM

First returns from a ballot among 1,700 electricians to determine whether they desire to designate the International Brotherhood of Electricians or the IATSE as their bargaining agent in the film industry showed that 80% were voting in favor of the IB, it was disclosed last night by George H. Davis, business manager of Studio Technicians Unit B-11 of the IBEW. Davis and Gene Gaillac, international representative, ordered the ballot when it was learned that the IATSE was trying to force juicers to resign their IB affiliation.

Many of the juicers voting in the election made it plain they would not turn in their IB cards because IATSE cards permitted them to work only in studios. They said IBEW cards in B-11 allowed them to work in other industries when work was slack in pictures.

MESSAGE TO WORKERS

In a notice going to the 1,700 electricians, virtually all of whom now carry IB cards, Davis and Gaillac said:

'Local Union B-11 is well and adequately prepared to carry through any and all necessary representation to give you real wages and conditions. We have an organization which has the staff and resources in Los Angeles County to do the job. Back of this Local Union B-11 stands the power of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. It is up to you to choose by means of this ballot the type of representation which would establish the best possible wages, hours, and conditions that can be obtained.'

In opening his communication to electrical workers, Davis said:

'For a long period of time, the IBEW has opened its charter to legitimate electrical workers in the motion picture industry. This was done as a definite step to prepare the way to bring back, by all legitimate means, the jurisdiction over electrical work to the IBEW, where it properly belongs. In the progress of making this attempt, every consideration was made to allow members of the IATSE free choice in becoming a part of our organization.

'Through the association of such members with Local Union B-11, a field of opportunity for jobs was opened, through the various units of Local B-11, where jobs were available.

BENEFITS CITED

'Many studio workers have benefited materially. The greatest benefit to be derived by these workers was that a channel was opened to electrical workers in the motion picture industry, not already covered by our Local Union 40, to associate themselves in a manner which would eventually bring about an opportunity to choose their own bargaining agent. A channel is now open to bring about a determination of whom you desire as your representative if a majority of gaffers, lamp operators, fixture men and special electrical effects men want a different type of representation than you have had since 1936.

'In order to assure ourselves as to what the workers involved actually think on this question, and without fear of jeopardizing their present jobs, we are enclosing a straw ballot. If a substantial majority believe in direct representation to correct some of the obvious evils that exist in your present wages, hours and conditions, or if you would like to have these negotiations conducted by our own members and their representatives here in Hollywood, and if you want to save any of the recognized standards of a skilled occupation from being thoroughly scuttled in the present emergency, we sincerely recommend that you so indicate your choice on the enclosed ballot. Then on the evidence thus obtained, we will be in a position to use other means to bring this issue to a successful conclusion.'

Ballot was first direct bid by IBEW to take over control of all electrical jurisdiction in studios. Committees were appointed by both Internationals some time ago to attempt to settle fight, but no real headway is reported to have been made.

H'WOOD BONDBARDIERS OPEN DRIVE

FIRST SHOW AT PHILLY TONIGHT

Finance Committee, Secretary Henry Morgenthau said: 'You people are always first to respond in a crisis. The way you have rallied to the Third War Loan Campaign is magnificent. I often think that you yourselves do not realize the importance of the part you play in every effort that involves the American public. You not only will sell bonds in this drive, but you also will inspire others by your example and enthusiasm. You carry the torch that lights the bond fire of public enthusiasm to work harder for the common cause.

'I appreciate your coming here today and the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade has my best wishes as you continue your tour. You start on a day when one of our enemies has surrendered unconditionally. I am sure that you will continue to Back the Attack until total victory is won.'

Frances S. Harmon, executive vice president of the War Activities Committee, voiced appreciation of the group to Secretary Morgenthau and his staff, stating that it was a privilege to serve on this great All American team and that the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade was on its way not only to back the attack with war bonds but to unite America in behalf of speedy total victory.

PAY RESPECTS TO LEADERS

James Cagney, president of SAG, and Kenneth Thomson, executive manager and secretary of the Cavalcade tour, conveyed the respects of the entire group to the President and to Prime Minister Churchill, who sat by as President Roosevelt spoke.

For the stars of the Cavalcade the White House broadcast marked culmination of a day in which Washington took them to its heart. Even the news of the surrender of Italy failed to interfere with the almost record-breaking crowds which turned out to see Hollywood come to Washington to help launch the drive.

Due here about 9:30, the Bond Special train was almost two hours late. The stars were greeted at the station by a huge crowd and hustled off to the Statler hotel in Army trucks where they remained only long enough to change to other Army equipment in which they rode through the city streets in a midtown parade which wound up at the Washington monument grounds, where they previewed the Army's huge Bond display which officially opens to the public tomorrow.

MARTHA SCOTT JOINS

Only one not on the train was Martha Scott, who flew in, arriving some time after the main party. Kathryn Grayson was met here by her husband, Lieut. John S. Rice, who came up from Florida.

The Cavalcade was on its own for lunch, and then was guest of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau for a ride down the Potomac in the afternoon to visit Mt. Vernon, home of George Washington.

The party returned to the hotel for dinner and later went to the White House for the broadcast, headed by James Cagney, prexy of the Screen Actors Guild. Their luggage was shipped down to the station where the special Bond train waited, so that, after the broadcast, the stars went directly to the train, which pulled out in the early morning for Philadelphia, first of the 15 major cities where the star-studded variety show will be presented as a highlight of the Bond drive.

ROONEY DOES DEDICATION

On the way into Chicago the train stopped to let Mickey Rooney off at Kedzie, Ill., and he was whisked 40 miles away to Great Lakes Naval Station, where he dedicated a new station. Paul Henreid, who flew east, met the troupe in Washington.

Rehearsals continued all the way into Washington, with Judy Garland, who had been laid up with a cold, back in action and the other stars reaching top form. In addition to rehearsing, Betty Hutton gave an impromptu show for a trainload of troops on a siding at an Illinois town, singing 'Murder, He Says' by request. Final dress rehearsal will be held tomorrow at Convention Hall, Philadelphia, where tomorrow night the Cavalcade gives the first of its shows for Bond buyers.

A complete list of cast members with the Cavalcade are: Fred Astaire, Lucille Ball, James Cagney, Judy Garland, Kathryn Grayson, Paul Henreid, Betty Hutton, Kay Kyser and his band, Harpo Marx, Dick Powell, Mickey Rooney and Martha Scott. Miss Scott leaves the company here to join a War Heroes Airmada. Starlets appearing with the cast as Bond Bombardiers are Dorris Merrick, Rosemary La Planche, Margie Stewart and Dolores Moran.

Film personalities participating in the broadcast from Hollywood included Bing Crosby, Gary Cooper, Burns and Allen, Dinah Shore, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Robert Young, Humphrey Bogart, Don Ameche, Jimmy Durante, Charles Boyer, George Murphy, Ronald Colman and Akim Tamiroff.

Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the SAG, and Charles K. Feldman were named co-managers of the tour, but Thomson took over assignment when Feldman was forced to remain in Hollywood because of illness brought about by his day and night work in lining up talent.

HEAR FDR IN THEATRES

Los Angeles theatres darkened their screens last night for a half-hour at 9 o'clock to permit audiences to hear a rebroadcast of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Third War Loan Drive speech, recorded earlier by KFWB for the special reairing. Individual Bond rallies also were held at each house to help promote Bond sales. Third War Loan Drive was officially launched today. Theatres yesterday dropped collections for the 'Beds For Buddies' campaign and screening of special trailer to permit full use of facilities for the Bond drive. 'Buddies' collections, reported to be running far ahead of any other money-raising drive in theatres, were resumed today.

EVERY BRANCH OF FILM BIZ STARTS BOND SALES TODAY

Carrying out a well-planned program of democracy of War bonds, the Motion Picture War Finance Committee today begins its all-out efforts for the Third War Loan Drive in the film industry. The campaign has been setup so that every phase of the industry's personnel is represented in the volunteer bond salesmen who will conduct the drive. Various committeemen include studio heads, back-lot employes, representatives of every union and guild, production executives, employers and workers in allied industries, agents, business managers and independent publicists.

The campaign largely will be a person-to-person task, with all of the 532 individuals who participate in the drive contacting those men and women in their respective fields. Efforts will be widespread, covering extra bond purchases ranging from $18.75 upward.

In order to cover sales to corporations, Chairman Henry Ginsberg has set up a special committee under J. H. Rosenberg to work solely with studios, allied companies and treasuries of guilds, unions and other Hollywood employee organizations. HINTS of a lifting of the dimout in all but immediate Coast areas some time in the near future is causing no particular jubilation among theatre operators. Exhibitors, at first fearing effects blacking-out of marquees and other lighted lures for the box office might cause, have found ticket trade thriving and even increasing under the bright-lights ban, and figure there is little additional business they could cram into their houses. They point out that past few months of operation have hit peak figures in the dimmed-out southern California territory, besting any records set previously, and that the entire year has been a record one at the box office. Some advantage might accrue to the neighborhood operator in competing with de luxe first-runs by again using fully lighted marquees. There also may be slight increase in trade from theatregoers who do their shopping as they drive around at night, but here again an upswing, if any, would only be a drop in the bucket compared to figures rung up during the dimout.

Long time ago were guessing games in which the kids guessed what
And where the trinket would be dropped in which secluded spot.
And now the masterminds of pix are mapping here and there,
And wondering what troops will land and when and how and where.
In days of old when films were made in yonder Griffith Park
Producers wrapped a picture up between the dawn and dark.
So fast they worked in ancient days that they were in position
To change a tale between the sixth and seven-star edition.
But now the bombers fly so fast and reach so great a span
That wars have shifted weeks before the film is in the can.

You may look for a general trend of war pictures toward the Pacific where the World Series will be played, and not a baseball series. Not so many years ago the Nipponese athletes thought they were so proficient that they disputed the right of the American and National Leagues to play for the global championship. In due time the ball park in Tokyo will echo with plenty of home runs, and they won't be wrapped in horsehide.

Back in the simple days there was a drama known as 'The Bells,' considered tops in creepy acting until 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' came along to make you shudder as you hastened homeward in the darkness of Sycamore street, which actually featured sycamore trees, and they were gloomy at 11 p.m., even with the moon shining. Dr. Jekyll changed into Mr. Hyde by the simple process of rumpling his hair and slapping in a set of false upper teeth, which made him an early edition of the Wolf Man. Spine-chilling was an easy art in those days, before the motion pictures made the children horror-proof. Youngsters today look down with disdain at the old-fashioned ghost tale and demand a super-duper-colossal monster and sit through a triple-feature to compare the horror technique. If an ogre stepped into a nursery today the infants would arise from their cribs and run him out of gas. When they want horrors they want HORRORS, without any fooling.

Top Man

(Musical Comedy-Drama)

Universal release. Stars Donald O'Connor, Susanna Foster, Lillian Gish, Richard Dix, Peggy Ryan. Features Anne Gwynne, Noah Beery, Jr., Samuel S. Hinds, Louise Beavers, Dickie Love, Marcia Mae Jones, David Holt, Count Basie and orchestra, Borrah Minevitch Rascals, Bobby Brooks Quartet. Director, Charles Lamont. Associate producer, Bernard W. Burton. Screen play, Zachary Gold. Original story, Ken Goldsmith. Photography, Hal Mohr. Art direction, John B. Goodman, Robert Clatworthy. Sound director, Bernard B. Brown; technician, William Fox. Set decorations, R. A. Gausman, E. R. Robinson. Film editor, Paul Landres. Assistant director, Mack Wright. Musical director, Charles Previn. Arrangements, Fank Skinner. Dances staged by Louis Da Pron. Special songs, Inez James and Buddy Pepper. Previewed at the Pantages, Hollywood, Sept. 9, 1943. Running time: 83 MINS.

Universal opened its purse strings to deal 'Top Man' a lavish pot-pourri of music, songs and dances. The result for the Donald O'Connor fans are happy enough, giving him opportunity to romp and mug in elegance. Elaborate dress at times smothers the simple story, the type of yarn that first started O'Connor on the road to marquee strength and buries considerable of the appeal with which this young man spellbinds his followers.

Individual honors are equally divided between O'Connor and Peggy Ryan, his partner-in-mug in previous adolescent antics. The pair dance, clown and generally endow the proceedings with youthful enthusiasm. Susanna Foster lends her voice to the long-hair side of the musical score and carries off the romantic moods as the object of O'Connor's swing wooing. Richard Dix and Lillian Gish share in the starring credits, as normal parents of such offspring. Fifth member of the family group is Anne Gwynne who splits some meagre footage with Noah Beery, Jr., Count Basie and his orchestra give a hep note to the score, the leader's 88'ing on 'Basie Boogie' and 'Get It' being in the groove.

Additional musical talent includes the Borrah Minevitch Rascals and the Bobby Brooks Quartet. Samuel S. Hinds, Louise Beavers, Dickie Love, Marcia Mae Jones and David Holt each do their work well.

Charles Lamont's direction of the Zachary Gold screen play, scripted from an original by Ken Goldsmith, draws the best results from the production flash injected into the plot. Story tells of a gorup of Junior College freshmen who give up their class show and free hours to solve a manpower shortage in the town's aircraft plant and in doing so help win the Army-Navy 'E' award for the factory and a chance to stage their musical jamboree for benefit of elbow workers.

Bernard W. Burton guided the picture as associate producer capably. Hal Mohr's photography, as always, is first rate. The art direction, sets, music and dances, the songs by Inez James and Buddy Pepper and other credits fit the juvenile mood.

Miller May Do Musical

I. Miller, Paramount producer may do musical following completion of his next film, 'The Griswold Case.' Miller has just canned 'Ministry of Fear.'

Film Review

Blazing Guns

(Western)

Monogram release. Stars Ken Maynard, Hoot Gibson, with Kay Forrester, LeRoy Mason, Roy Brent, Lloyd Ingram. Produced and directed by Robert Tansey. Original and screenplay, Frances Kavanaugh. Photography, Marcel Le Picard. Assistant director, Arthur Hammond. Sound engineer, Glen Glenn. Film editor, Fred Bain. Production manager, Fred Hoose. Reviewed at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, Sept. 9, 1943. Running time: 54 MINS.

Hoot Gibson and Ken Maynard, a couple of old-timers at turning out westerns, come through with another offering for delight of the Saturday matinee kiddies in 'Blazing Guns.' Produced and directed by Robert Tansey, oater stresses stunts that have always found favor in the outdoor market. Lead team just as quickly pits fists and wits against the baddies as their blazing guns, coming off most satisfactorily on either count.

Plot furnished in Frances Kavanaugh's original screen play has Gibson and Maynard becoming marshals sent by the territorial governor to clean up the town of Willow Springs and find the murderer of two previous marshals who had been given the same assignment. Pair parole three tough killers to aid in the clean-up and finale brings a blazing street battle, marked by highly satisfactory marksmanship on the part of the heroes. Plenty of western heroics are injected, each with a touch of comedy as Gibson and Maynard easily, but not too easily, overcome villainous traps and odds. Few current-day westerns use enough of the old hoke stunts to add flash to the do-and-dare assignments of the leads.

Kay Forrester carries the slight femme lead in a romantic assignment opposite Roy Brent. LeRoy Mason enacts another of his dirty western villains, heading a tough gang of meanies, and Lloyd Ingram as the governor completes credited cast.

Marcel Le Picard photographed and other technical credits are also standard.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

General Eisenhower decided that a full-fledged invasion of Italy would be the thing to do, and so American, British and Canadian forces are swarming ashore along practically all the west coastline of Italy. Operations are proceeding satisfactorily everywhere. The picture of conditions inside Italy still is confused. Nazi-controlled Paris radio says Nazi and Italian troops are fighting viciously all over Italy. Allied sources would neither confirm nor deny it. Hitler held a council of war in which he decided to hold northern Italy 'to the last man.' That's changed fortunately, otherwise it would have been 'fight to the last Italian.' Soviet advances gained valuable ground and far-reaching developments seem to be in the offing.

They are 'The Song of Bernadette,' 'The Gang's All Here,' Technicolor musical; 'Jane Eyre' and 'Guadalcanal Diary.' DOWNEY SAYS FILM BIZ IS STRIPPED BARE IN MANPOWER liable to reflect in the calibre of the product which is turned out by the studios.

'The country should know by now that good motion pictures are an important factor in home front morale. I believe that the entire industry in Southern California today employs only about 18,000 persons, many of them women, and employment has been as high as 30,000.'

Downey was backed up by Don H. Roney, assistant regional director of WMC on the Pacific Coast, who added that: 'the studios should be congratulated on what they have done voluntarily up to now. They have upped work hours from 35 to 44 and 48. They have shaved down on personnel, and I hardly see how any more can be squeezed out of the film industry in Hollywood to other types of industry. Most of the studio technicians are highly specialized men who would not be easily interchangeable with the shipyards and aircraft workers.'

The statements were made following a hearing of Downey's subcommittee of the Senate on Military Affairs Committee, which bared the extreme labor shortage conditions in California. One point affecting Hollywood was made at the hearings. Harry T. Krantz, coast regional director of the U. S. Civil Service Commission, testified that this year 3,000 Hollywood extras are claiming unemployment compensation, and are refusing to take jobs out of pictures, although there are thousands of openings.

Downey asserted later that the Krantz figures are hardly fair, since so many of the film workers are specialists who are needed in pictures. His feeling was that the small reservoir of available extras should be kept for the essential job of producing motion pictures.

65 Film Celebrities Acting as Bond Salesmen

With departure of three more bond-stormers to boost the Third War Loan, the Hollywood Victory Committee announced last night that it has enlisted 65 screen individuals to date in this drive as active salesmen for the Treasury Department.

After appearances at Sacramento, Portland, Seattle and Butte, they will be joined in Salt Lake City by Franchot Tone, who will continue in Miss Rainer's place for the remainder of the tour.

16,000 Theatres Flash Warning Against Complacency

Bulletin warning against complacency because of the Italian surrender, was flashed to more than 16,000 theatres yesterday by L. C. Griffith, general chairman of the motion picture industry's participation in the Third War Loan Drive. Bulletin also went to all state bond chairmen of the War Activities Committee and to members of the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade, which opened tour last night in Philadelphia.

In his message, Griffith said:

'It is hard to believe, but the unconditional surrender of Italy makes your job in the Third War Loan tougher. You must use every bit of showmanship to make Italy's fall the basis for backing the attack on the two remaining enemies, Germany and Japan.'

Seattle Amusement Spots Operating Without License

Seattle, Sept. 9.—Total of 48 theatres, cafes, dance spots and cabarets are operating in this city without licenses. Revelation came through check by city license department, and disclosed that some of the applications have been pending since last October.

Application for license is followed by inspections by the building and fire departments; and, if changes are ordered, they are supposed to be made immediately and operators then notify the two departmental inspectors to return for final okay. Building superintendent Hughes stated new regulations would provide maximum time to make changes required, and if operators delayed, the spots should be shuttered. He admitted, however, that some of the delay in the past might have been occasioned by city inter-department operations.

Some WB Cops, Firemen, Watchers Get Pay Tilt

Agreement covering wages, hours and conditions for policemen, firemen and watchmen at Warners was received yesterday by Ted Camp, secretary-treasurer and business representative of Local 193, motion picture division of Building Service Employes International Union. Deal is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1943, and calls for pay tilts for men in lower brackets. Camp and George Bradley, international representative of BSEIU, had negotiated an increase for all members of craft, but boost for men in higher brackets was turned down by the War Labor Board after Warners executives had approved it. Contract, however, calls for job security, improved conditions, etc.

'A further penalty of six per cent will be levied in such cases for underestimating the tax by more than 20%. A person failing to file a declaration will be considered to have filed a zero estimate.

'A taxpayer who sohuld report a tax of $100 next Wednesday will increase his total by $18.50, of which $10 will be for failing to file, $2.50 for failing to pay the installment and $6.00 for underestimating his tax.'

PETRILLO BLASTS NAB TOPPERS

STATE DEPT. MAY GRAB OFF CIAA

Washington, Sept. 9.—The Committee of Inter-American Affairs may be moved over to the State Department as a bureau, with Nelson Rockefeller, head of the outfit, becoming an assistant secretary of state, according to authoritative reports here.

Move would place the handling of CIAA films and short wave radio to the Latin American countries directly under Secretary of State Cordell Hull. No indication was given here whether this would mean any change in CIAA policy.

Conceivably the step would affect CIAA contracts with Walt Disney and other Hollywood producers who have been making pictures for the Latin market. One question which might arise would be completion of the Brazilian film which Orson Welles started for RKO.

Since Rockefeller has proven an understanding friend of the film industry, a post as assistant secretary of state might put him in a more strategic position to aid in the marketing of U. S. commercial films in the Latin countries. At present CIAA cooperates with the State Department as well as other Federal departments and War agencies.

ACCUSES KAY, MILLER FOILING DISC PEACE

New York, Sept. 9.—James R. Petrillo at today's WLB hearing of AFM-Transcription companies' dispute, charged transcription companies would have been and still would be willing to make deals with AFM, but were prevented from doing so by NAB which is pressuring companies to continue the fight.

He singled out Sydney Kay, NAB counsel, and NAB prexy Miller for attack, while making accusation unanswered either by Walter Socolow, attorney for transcription companies, or by NAB representatives present as observers.

Petrillo's charges were made during a speech congratulating Milton Diamond, World Broadcasting System and Decca counsel, for stating that protagonists had problems that could be threshed out at the conference table.

Petrillo stated that this is the first time in 13 month dispute that any rep of transcription companies admitted there was a problem. It could have been solved long ago, he added, if more transcription men had Diamond's attitude. Diamond had characterized the transcription companies as networks and said AFM should deal with them as such.

Earlier in the day, Socolow summed up the transcription case for WLB panel, charging ban was Petrillo's and not rank and filers' wish. He called it anti-social and predicted post-war television and AFM developments may abolish transcription.

When asked by Arthur Meyers, panel chairman, whether transcriptions companies would oppose copyright amendment giving musicians recording performance rights now enjoyed by ASCAP writers, Socolow said he and his clients favor any measure ending strike.

During day's testimony, Edward Canavan, Petrillo assistant, pointed out that 20 years ago and up to advent of sound films there were more musicians employed on Broadway than currently employed by CBS and NBC.

As Petrillo was leaving hearing room, Socolow asked him to call off strike and permit companies to make discs during further talks. Petrillo said now is not the time and companies had plenty of opportunity to talk prior to hearing.

Socolow also was turned down in a motion opposing a week's adjournment requested by Padway and granted by Meyer. Padway asked for time to reply to Socolow. Hearing will continue Friday, Sept. 17.

BIG FIRST DAY FILM BOND BUYS

3 STUDIOS BUY OVER MILLION

Henry Ginsberg, chairman of the Motion Picture War Finance Committee, announced last night that War bond sales throughout the film industry yesterday on the opening day of the Third War Loan Drive were extremely gratifying. Among large purchases reported was $1,000,000 by Warners, $200,000 by Technicolor, and $175,000 by Republic.

Because bond-selling efforts are being made by more than 532 different volunteer committeemen among their fellow film workers in all studios, allied industries and offices of agents, business managers and independent publicists, figures on the first day's sales could not be tabulated completely by night. Purchases by individuals, however, included $25,000 by Mary Pickford, $50,000 by Nathan J. Blumberg and $40,000 by Walter Wanger. Many buys of $5,000 and $10,000 were registered.

The drive got under way yesterday morning and the various offices set up for handling of bonds in studios and other places of business were busy all day receiving orders ranging from $18.75 upwards. Receipts indicated that workers in all phases of the business were cooperating with extra bond purchases.

CAVALCADE HITS PHILLY TO TUNE OF $12,500,000

into astronomical figures the customers were treated to two and three quarter hours of a whing-ding of a show.

The show is anybody's money's worth and the customers were plenty satisfied, from the guys and gals in the rear balconies who bought the $25 bonds, to the couple way down front who had bought two seats for $200,000.

The guy who steals the honors is the little red-headed dynamo, who breaks up the proceedings of the next to closing spot with a take off on President Roosevelt, Eleanor Roosevelt, Wendell Willkie and Herbert Hoover. Then he tosses away all decorum along with his coat and tears into a drum solo along with Kay Kyser's band.

Kyser, incidentally, does a yeomanlike job of emceeing, a chore which he shared with James Cagney. The band also does a solid stint accompanying the singers, dancers, and carrying off a pieceable hunk of jive in between.

The show tees off with Kyser and his boys cutting up, setting the motif for Dick Powell who sets off the duke-thumping when he gives out with a flock of Powell faves from his pix. Cagney appears next to deliver a stirring verse tagged 'What Do We Buy When We Buy Bonds?' winding up with his memorable bit of terp from his 'Yankee Doodle Dandy.'

Lucille Ball's palaver with Kay Kyser is overlong and should be pruned, as it slows up the proceedings. Kathryn Grayson, charming and petite, is well received in her presentation of several operatic arias. Harpo Marx, who appears all through the show with his perennial chase after blondes, brings on the belly-laughs when he snips off, bit by bit, the gown of an ear-screeching unbilled diva. Later he returns with his ever-entertaining set-to with his harp, added to an old-fashioned burlesque routine with Miss Ball.

Greer Garson's contribution is a stirring 'Buy More Bonds' message, which gets under the skin of her auditors. The supply meets the ridiculous with entry of the bubbling Betty Hutton with her renditions of 'Murder He Says,' 'When His Hobby Horse Ran Wild' and 'Doing It for Defense.' The gal's zing is catching.

Fred Astaire does a restrained though graceful bit of terping. Paul Henreid reads a letter purportedly received from a friend in the Free French army, which is both poignant and pointed. Then comes the piece de resistance—Judy Garland singing 'Blow Gabriel, Blow,' 'Embraceable You,' 'Man I Love,' and 'Over the Rainbow.' Rooney follows.

A finale brings the entire cast on deck for the national anthem. Cavalcade will visit 14 more cities to spark the Third War Loan Drive.

STARS TOUR CITY

Prior to the show at Convention Hall the touring stars paraded in jeeps through the center of the city while tons of confetti and tickertape cascaded down upon them. Following the parade they were the featured attraction at an auction on the steps of a mid-city bank at which $42,750,000 worth of bonds were sold.

Autographed pictures of the stars were among the articles which went to the highest bidders. High bid for the day was $25,000,000 by the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., while the City of Philadelphia purchased $10,000,000 worth of bonds.

Betty Hutton and Judy Garland attended an employes rally, the former doing her stint in front of thousands of cheering workers at the shipbuilding yards in Chester, while thousands of men and women spent their lunch hour at the Navy Yard listening to Miss Garland give out with her golden voice. A half-dozen of the stars each attended a luncheon at which at least $1,000,000 worth of bonds were sold.

STARS STORM NY TODAY FOR $1,000,000 SHOW AT GARDEN

New York, Sept. 9.—Staging breakfast meeting with trade press and other industry representatives at Astor Hotel tomorrow, largest group of Hollywood stars to visit New York at one time arrives Saturday for Madison Square Garden show to spur on Third War Loan.

Ed Alperson, chairman of War Bond Cavalcade committee who accompanied group to Washington, plans arriving here tomorrow and leaves for Pittsburgh same day to set final details there.

Meanwhile, Garden is scaled to realize $86,000,000 in Bond sales with top of $110,000,000 and may reach $125,000,000. Additional millions resulted from resale of boxes originally sold at $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 each. Most of big business organizations purchasing boxes resold individual chairs to top executives.

Stars will be received on arrival by U. S. Army band and committee headed by Newbold Morris, president of City Council, Nevil Ford, executive chairman of New York State War Finance Committee, and W. Bayard Pope, vice-chairman. Stars leave for Pittsburgh same night after completion of performance.

LOEW'S PAYS 17 MILLION FOR BONDS

New York, Sept. 9. — At Third War loan rally in Loews, Inc., home office today Nicholas Schenck announced that purchases had been made by the Loew organization and its subsidiaries of $17,000,000 in bonds. Portions will be allocated to various cities where the Circuit operates. Balance of the purchases were made in New York and California.

For the Hollywood Star Cavalcade performance to be presented Saturday night in Madison Square Garden, 72 box seats representing purchase of $4,000,000 in bonds were given employees holding lucky numbers. These employees pledged themselves to purchase an extra bond during September, with the company financing the purchase and allowing the employees up to one year to pay. Loew's employees' Welfare Fund purchased $25,000 in bonds.

Paramount employees also held a rally today with the speakers being Adolph Zukor, Si Fabian and Claude Lee. Benny Goodman and his sextette and Sonny Tufts.

THE old dodge of advance plugging the appearance of stars at the ballroom opening of a new band and the luminaries either not showing up or taking a fast bow and scramming has proved a boomerang to the Palladium, Charlie Spivak and, innocently enough, Frank Sinatra. For a week previous to Spivak's opening last Tuesday at hoofery the announcer there blared nightly that both Sinatra and Bing Crosby would be at the opening. He had the bobby-socks following of Sinatra and the fans of Crosby so wrought up that they spread the word around town and awaited the big night. They piled in and sprawled all over the floor. Sinatra came on for a quick hello and Spivak moved in close for the photographers. That was all and Sinatra, who promised nothing more than to show up, went away from there. As for Crosby, who rarely goes to night spots and never disappoints when he is contacted and accepts, he wasn't around. That further incensed the swoon crowd and they bellowed their indignation. Now many of them are venting their displeasure at Sinatra, Crosby and the Palladium announcer, who gave them the bum steer. Together with the free paper that goes out with Palladium openings and the surge of youngsters attracted by the Sinatra-Crosby comeon, the turnout was said to have topped the first night attendance of name bands that have played there.

Producers huddle round the board and grasp amid the haze
To find the proper plan for what are known as post-war days.
They argue and investigate, they fathom and explore,
But boy and girl will meet again as in the days of yore.

One vital difference between pre-war and post-war pictures is that boy will meet girl in a helicopter, or a flying trailer on the Ethereal Express, one hour from NY to LA.

While the film producers are looking into the future, they might take time out to look over the past and discover that there are no post-war or pre-war periods. This world is like an actor between pictures, bragging about what he did in the last one and hankering for a bigger role in the next.

NY LEGIT OPENING

MY DEAR PUBLIC

New York, Sept. 12.—'My Dear Public,' Irving Caesar musical starring Willie Howard opened mildly at the 46th Street theatre, with slight chance of success. The show comes alive briefly two or three times during the first act but then subsides into vacuum.

There is only one genuine punch song, 'Color Line,' which colored Rose Brown whams across despite absence of staging. Only other click number is patter—'If You Want a Deal With Russia,' which Howard's droll skill saves. Show's comedy is forced and ordinary, despite tireless efforts of Howard and minor help from various others. Book is too complicated and theatrically unproductive.

Dancing, except for click routines by Georgie Tapps is skimpy. Such featured people as Nanette Fabray, Eric Brotherson, Ethel Shutta, Tapps, and David Burns are throttled by tepid material and inept staging. Fatal tipoff of show was steady line of walkouts during second act. Caesar has been seven years preparing 'My Dear Public' and has completely re-written and re-cast it with all new numbers since road tryouts during Spring of 1942, but it's still no dice.

Play Review

ALL IN ALL

Buffalo, Sept. 12.—'All In All' opened here at the Erlanger and fancied timeliness of comedy treatment of capital-labor theme is probably chiefly responsible for resuscitation of this definitely dated Aaron Hoffman script. Under title, 'Give and Take' and also, 'It Can Happen,' show originally ran on Broadway in 1923 also in Chicago with George Sidney and Louis Mann co-starred.

Present version offered under probably collective pseudonym of Norman Bruce depends on broad comedy treatment and robust histrionics obviously aimed at capitalizing on currently believed public demand for laughs as open sesame to b.o. success. Story and motivation are old hat despite vigorous and heavy handed streamlining. Jack Pearl as bullheaded fruit canning employer first opposes his workers left by lifelong employee and friend Harry Green. Then capitulates his factory set-up to an industrial democracy. Green develops headaches sharing capitalistic responsibility and longs to return to plain worker role. Machinations of banner-backed competitor forces Pearl's outfit to wall, but employees collectively bankroll a comeback and situation is finally saved when eccentric millionaire first thought to be insane turns out sane and solvent and puts company back on its feet.

Pearl's projecting of benevolent employer is in his trade marked dialect metier keyed to plenty of crackling, mugging and gyrations. Green, who also staged show, handles role of companionable worker with a low comedy delivery remarkable for its fine timing. Between them they are responsible for all the evening's hilarity.

Rest of cast labors valiantly against amorphous characterizations of this script. Only six characters playing in one undistinguished set tends toward monotony, though dull stretches are relieved by robust laughs engendered by skillful handling by the leads of comedy lines and business.

Story and treatment are reminiscent of Hoffman's 'Friendly Enemies' which utilized same formula of conflicting ideologies in comedy characters. As a treatment of the problem of capital and labor, 'All In All' contributes about as much as 'Abie's Irish Rose' did to the subject of inter-marriage. Picture possibilities problematical.

New York, Sept. 12.—In self suit by Paramount in connection with theatres in which he is partner with Par in Nebraska, Colorado and Oklahoma, Joseph H. Cooper—who headquarters in the east—brought action Friday against Paramount in Supreme Court seeking damages of $250,000.

Also claims he was forced to pay $100,000 to the Internal Revenue Bureau due to these acts, and that he is entitled to an additional $150,000 because of damage to his reputation, credit, etc.

Paramount, which has 50% interest in Cooper theatres, on Thursday sued for an accounting of assets and expenditures in connection with Lincoln theatres operated by Cooper; while previously Par had sued Cooper for repossession of leases in Colorado where partnership circuit embraces 10 theatres.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

Trinidad, Col., Sept. 12.—Fighting in Italy appears to be headed towards pitched battles between Allies and Nazi forces who are trying desperately to hold what airfields are still in their control, claiming they are trying to keep the Allied forces from the few 'safe' Italian cities. The delaying actions being fought by the Nazis on Italian soil are intended to gain them the much needed time in which to build defense installations along the Po River line. Present Allied diversionary moves seem to point to an invasion of France or Albania, at least a landing of Allied forces seems likely on either or perhaps even both of these countries. Soviet advances along a wide front still constitutes the greatest threat to Hitler.

ADMISSION TO FREE BONDS PIX PREEMS BY COIN NIXED

liam Rodgers, chairman of the War Bond Premieres of the Third War Loan campaign, following a meeting at the Warwick hotel. Rodgers wired all War Activities distribution chairmen that 'distributors further agree that where a theatre or theatres in a community want to designate the day as "free movie day" and accept as admission to the theatre's regular performances a bond purchased on the theatre premises, distributor will waive his share of such free admission if pictures are being played on percentage that day.

'It is recommended that all theatres in the United States, if possible, select the same date, Sept. 27, as "Free Movie Day." New York has already designated this date. Where theatres are not the issuing agents they can undoubtedly make arrangements with local banks to have someone at theatres to issue bonds.'

Paramount home office employes war bond drive as part of Third War Loan campaign is exceeding expectations, according to execs and will top the quota set. Also revealed that Treasury Department is now considering selection of names for two Flying Fortresses which were earmarked by government as having been purchased with extra bonds subscribed by Par employes and the company is last April's drive.

Two special bond nights have been scheduled locally by the Treasury Department's Theatre Committee in connection with the Third War Loan Drive. First bond night tees off at the Los Angeles Paramount Monday, Sept. 20, with admission being purchase of a bond ranging in value from $100 up to $10,000. Second bond night is at the Pantages theatre Sept. 27, with same scale of bond admissions.

Theatre Committee currently is tallying results of bond rallies held in theatres last Wednesday night and Thursday afternoon.

Par's Pix on Crest Of New BO Highs In Canada

New York, Sept. 12.—Grosses on Paramount pictures are reaching new highs in Canada, according to Gordon Lightstone, general manager of Paramount Film Service, Ltd., Toronto, who arrived here this weekend. In line with upped Par grosses is fact that theatre business generally is undergoing its heaviest boom in the Dominion, he said. Such films as 'Let's Face It,' 'Dixie,' are beating previous top records set by other Paramount product.

Canadian theatre operation is experiencing manpower shortage, same as in the states, according to Lightstone, who pointed out personnel problem is now more serious since selective service ages there were increased from 35 to 40 and lowered from 20 to 18. This is resulting in greater training of women for replacements in theatres and exchanges, he said.

CAVALCADE HITS $200,000,000 IN NY

SHOW GIVEN BIG HAND IN GOTHAM

New York, Sept. 12. — Hollywood Bond Cavalcade, exceeding all early expectations or quotas, had rolled up a total of $150,000,000 Bond sales for Madison Square Garden last night, but final returns now are expected to go over $200,000,000.

A single loge at the Garden show sold for $40,000,000. Tickets bought by corporations and banks sold and resold to their executives. Percy Straus, head of Macy's Department Store, needing two extra tickets at the last minute offered $150,000 for pair and stretched to $165,000 to get them.

Bond sales recorded by Cavalcade in Philadelphia were approximately $160,000,000. In Boston, Hollywood stars attracted $200,000,000 worth of Bond buyers last night. That take in Philadelphia and Boston, according to latest tabulation, topped $400,000,000.

2 BILLION IN SIGHT

Originally setting what then seemed a fantastic quota of $500,000,000 bond sales for the Cavalcade alone, it now appears that the films stars, Uncle Sam's greatest aggregation of super-duper salesmen, will bring in a couple of billions. First three dates alone account for nearly $750,000,000 on basis of early reports.

Example is New York show, where original quota mentioned was $70,000,000, out of total Garden maximum capacity of $86,000,000. Cities such as Boston and Philadelphia were originally quoted around $40,000,000 each.

Airmadas being flown to smaller towns with only emcees accompanying war heroes also are reporting amazing response. One Interstate theatre in Austin, Tex., sold standing room at $1000-bond. Austin sold $4,000,000 in bonds with airmada idea.

SHOWMANSHIP AIDS SALE

War Finance Committee credits showmanship and players with influencing all bond purchase throughout New York state, where $789,000,000 in bonds were sold the first two days including Hollywood Cavalcade figures.

Treasury officials wish to stress, however, that this is not a rich man's campaign, that they want the small and average wage-earner to participate fully.

Mob packing Garden to the rafters of course gave stars a terrific ovation. Greer Garson, Paul Henreid, James Cagney, Fred Astaire, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Betty Hutton, Kathryn Grayson, Harpo Marx, Barney Ross and Jose Iturbi panicked them. Iturbi, last-minute addition for New York appearance only, first contributed a couple of concert pieces and later a jive number with Judy Garland, both evoking tremendous applause. Pianist will continue with tour.

Backstage last night was I. L. Alperson, chairman of Hollywood Bond Cavalcade who later left with troupe for Pittsburgh and may head for Coast shortly. Also Harry Mandel, handling exploitation for New York Metropolitan area, and Kenneth Thomson.

PITTSBURGH THRONG PAYS OUT $75,000,000

Pittsburgh, Sept. 12. — The Hollywood Bond Cavalcade drew more than 40,000 people at Forbes Field tonight. The crowd bought a total of $75,000,000 worth of War Bonds to see the all-star performance staged outdoors at the home of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The fans got a break in that today in Pittsburgh was warm and bright, after several straight days of cold and rain.

Two hours long parade had at least 100,000 lining the route.

Jose Iturbi joined the Cavalcade last night in New York to accompany Judy Garland on the piano in a show-stopping Boogie Woogie number. James Cagney remained behind in New York to do a Readers Digest radio show tonight.

Dick Powell is leaving the troupe here for one day to fly to Boston for opening tomorrow night of Gypsy Rose Lee play 'Naked Genius,' which stars his wife Joan Blondell. He'll rejoin Cavalcade in Detroit Tuesday. Johnny Maschio had to leave personnel in New Jersey yesterday to return to Coast.

BILLION IN BOND SALES; MUSICALS INVADE CAMPS

New York, Sept. 12.—Kenneth Thomson told the Coordinating Committee of the National Entertainment Industry Council in session here that the Caravan of Stars will exceed one billion dollars in War Bond sales by the time the show reaches Chicago, thus more than doubling the goal set as Hollywood Victory Committee's contribution to the Third War Loan campaign.

NEIC session, postponed from last Tuesday to permit attendance of Thomson and Cagney, both members of the Coordinating Committee, paid tribute to Thomson's role in mobilizing the film industry for the gigantic bond sale. Message from Ted Gamble, read by Jim Sauter, NEIC coordinator, conveyed the Treasury Department's gratitude for the work accomplished thus far.

It was disclosed at the meeting that George Schaefer, head of NEIC, currently on the Coast in behalf of War activities is huddling with industry execs on lining up a $1,000 award for a script contest among men in service which NEIC and that National Theatre Conference is sponsoring. The script would be filmed. Similar NTC-NEIC contests also are set for radio and legit, with two best plays in latter division to be given Broadway presentation.

Bert Lytell reported series of legit shows being channelled into camps gets under way next week when the cast of 'Blithe Spirit' gives a camp performance on its free night. 'Kiss and Tell,' 'Doughgirls' are other legits lined up for camps and hospitals, with casts asked to do cuffo shows on alternate free nights. Casts from all Broadway musicals are going into camps and hospitals.

PHILLY'S KICK-IN $175,000,000

Philadelphia, Sept. 12.—Philadelphians turned out 500,000 strong and opened their purses to the tune of an estimated $175,000,000 in giving a rousing welcome to the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade, which opened its 15-city nationwide tour here in behalf of the Third War Loan. The stars were heartened by the report that an industrial plant bond selling competition inspired by their visit would result in an estimated $75,000,000 sale, much of it under the payroll deduction plan, and that 12,800 customers had invested $100,000,000 to see the Cavalcade at Convention Hall.

MILLION AT HUB LAMP STARS

Boston, Sept. 12.—Tearing into the third day of its tour in top gear, the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade took movie-star hungry Boston to the cleaners emotionally and financially Friday night to add a staggering $20,000,000 plus to the War kitty.

Climaxing a hectic day, long list of parades, appearances, interviews and glamour folderol, the Cavalcade rolled into the Hub's mammoth Garden and was greeted by 24,000 bellowing fans who had fought for the privilege of laying down plenty of ducats to see it. The bottom bracket bond holders had to sit so high they got altitude nose bleeds.

The show was faster, funnier than first Caravan. Staged by Eddie Buzzell, who was called upon for a big hand at the finale. Triple-wow performances by Mickey Rooney and Betty Hutton, both of whom got hands to teeter the rafters. Greer Garson and Paul Henreid lent serious touches to the show.

Cavalcade was greeted at the train by 200,000 persons, but the pre-show parade crowd was estimated at more than one million.

Paramount Home Office Workers Top Quota

OWI Shows Films For Use in Lands We Capture

Washington, Sept. 12.—OWI presented a special showing Friday night of films it has made for overseas distribution. Pictures, with English sound tracks, were run for an invitation audience to acquaint American newsmen and officials with work of Robert Sherwood's Overseas Branch.

Show included one issue of a United newsreel, for world-wide distribution; 'Swedes in America,' featuring Ingrid Bergman, made for use in Sweden exclusively; autobiography of 'The Jeep,' for use everywhere outside of the U. S.; 'Oswego,' story of how one American town celebrated United Nations Week; and 'News Review.'

Last of these is designed especially for use in countries recaptured from Nazis. Film tells the story of the U. S. at war from Pearl Harbor to the final conquest of North Africa, put together from newsreels and such pictures as 'Desert Victory' and Darryl Zanuck's 'At the Front.' It will give audiences in liberated territories their first chance to see what America has done and is doing in the war.

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, Sept. 12.—Meet a couple of Army champions—but it's in something they don't get medals for. Champion pin-up girl collector; and champion Stage Door Canteen visitor. Corp. Jerry Massover, who was transferred out of here the other day on a new Signal Corps assignment, visited the Washington Stage Door Canteen every night for 10 months, a record that should stand for the duration.

It was like tearing one of the main foundation pillars out from under the American Theatre Wing, and the hostesses got together and presented him with a large cake as a parting gift. Also there is Corp. Winston K. Young at Fort Benning, Ga. He boasts about 700 autographed photographs of Hollywood gals, he has been collecting for the past two or three years. His buddies hold him in awe as a man who has 'power and influence' with the film lovelies.

U. S., BRITISH PRODUCTION

Months ago this column predicted the British and Americans would get together and produce jointly an official war film on the Tunisian campaign. Then the Army announced they wouldn't; and Lieut. Colonels Frank Capra and Bill Keighley set to work in Washington on an all-American film story of the Battle of Tunisia. You will be interested to note Capra is now in England, working with British authorities on a film combining the best of the U. S. and British footage of the Tunisian scrap. Pic is in final stages of editing.

Semi-official reports are that releasing will be entrusted to the British who will put it out through commercial channels in this country, in their customary fashion. Should this happen, it will mark the first commercial release of its kind of official Army film, and will raise a question of what the Army will do with its share of the gate.

EXHIBS BALK McNUTT

You will recall during the bond drive session of eastern exhibitors here, a few weeks back, WMC chairman Paul V. McNutt extended an invitation to a committee to talk over with him the draft problems of theatres. Committee got together, drew up some hot stuff to lay before McNutt—and then nothing happened. At least one version is the boys decided they might come out of the meeting worse off than they went in, so they quietly dropped the whole matter.

AXIS PROPAGANDA REELS

Toho Motion Picture Company, of Japan, has nearly completed its new super-de luxe war special, 'Rip Down the Stars and Stripes.' Tch, Tch, tch. . . . Nazis are now putting Estonian, Letto - Lithuanian, Ruthenian, Russian and Ukrainian sound tracks on the German weekly newsreel for showing on screens in the occupied regions. Nazis have decided this is the best form of propaganda to convince the conquered Eastern territories that Hitler is still winning. . . . Shooting has been completed on the new Soviet documentary dealing with German atrocities in Vyazma, Gzhatsk and Sychevka. Pic was made by Ivan Belyskov, veteran newsreel cameraman, following the Soviet capture of the towns.

THEY PREFER U. S. ARTISTS

Must be quite a crushing blow to the Laval collaborationist government that a recent poll in Marseilles by the newspaper 'Mot d'Ordre' disclosed adolescent French film goers there overwhelmingly favor American films, American stars and American directors. This, despite the fact that we've sent no new pix into France for some time. These films topped the popularity list: 'Modern Times,' 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington,' and 'You Can't Take It With You.' Remember, they haven't seen the new ones. Stars preferred by French girls were Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable, Errol Flynn, James Stewart, Bette Davis and Jean Arthur. Young men cast their ballots for Charlie Chaplin, Gary Cooper, Paul Muni, Irene Dunne, Merle Oberon, Luise Rainer and Bette Davis. Favorite producers and directors were: Frank Capra, John Ford, King Vidor, Walt Disney and Sam Wood. Worshipped French actors and producers on the list were: Raimu, Gravey, Michael Simon, Jouvet, Jean Gabin, Charles Boyer, Franco. Serosay, Rene Clair, Marcel Pagnol and Jean Renoir.

Metro Opens Drive With 2 Million Bond Buy

Purchase of $2,000,000 worth of War Bonds by Metro over the weekend highlighted the opening three days of the bond campaign being conducted in the film industry by the Motion Picture War Finance Committee as a part of the Third War Loan Drive. This is the top single investment by a corporation in the industry during a bond drive, and with other individual purchases will help to get the Hollywood campaign off to a flying start, according to Chairman Henry Ginsberg.

Monogram introduced an interesting method of participation by film companies Saturday with the purchase of $25,000 in securities to be distributed to employes as bonuses. These two corporation purchases gave Hollywood a $3,400,000 total for this phase of the drive.

At the same time, more than 500 volunteer salesmen who make up the MPWFC are carrying on an intensive campaign among fellow workers in studios, allied industries, guilds, unions and offices of agents, business managers and independent publicists. Included among the larger purchases over the weekend were $50,000 by Hal Wallis, and $15,000 by M. C. Levee.

'Army' Pulls Out Of 3 WB Houses, 'Watch'

Warners opens 'Watch On the Rhine' at the Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern theatres Wednesday following four-week stay of 'This Is the Army.' Picture has topped any previous record-holders at the three houses and will gross close to $40,000 on the final week's stay.

SPG Seeks 'Steel' Formula in Confab With Producers

Screen Publicists Guild meets tomorrow with Producers representatives to discuss reopening of current agreement with major companies. Guild will seek improved grievance machinery, with an arbitration provision, clause setting forth reemployment of men now in armed services and application of Little Steel formula to current wage minimums.

If Little Steel formula is applied to minimums, SPG believes many of its members will receive increases, with tilts ranging from 5% to 15%. Boost would depend upon whether members have already received increases since Little Steel formula was adopted by the War Labor Board as a standard for approving wage hikes.

New York, Sept. 12.—Screen Publicists Guild negotiating committee met with representatives of major distributing companies Friday in an effort to reach settlement on wage increases and reclassifications of the second year of two year agreement and thus avoid arbitration which had previously been proposed.

Another session will be held during the coming week. SPG is asking that all salaries be brought up total of 15% more than earned on Jan. 1, 1942, under the Little Steel formula.

'Better Than Before,' to which Manning will return when he completes the Boyer task, is based on Luigi Pirandell's stage play.

NAVY USES PIX TO HIKE PRODUCTION OF SHIPS

Washington, Sept. 12.—Three new Navy incentive shorts for showing to war workers in factories and shipyards will be released this month, Rear Admiral C. H. Woodward, chief of the Industrial Incentive Division of the Navy, announced today.

Pictures are 'December 7th,' 'Life and Death of the Hornet' and 'The Navy Flies On.'

First was produced by Com. John Ford, aided by Lieut. Gregory Toland, deals with the debacle at Pearl Harbor and shows the job of salvage and repair by civilian workers.

'Hornet,' best of the group, tells about the ship from which Jimmy Doolittle launched his flight to bomb Tokyo.

'Navy Flies On,' timed to coincide with the 30th anniversary of Naval aviation, traces the history of Naval flying.

Present group raises to seven the number of films made under the Incentive program. Except for 'Conquer by Clock,' produced by RKO, pictures are made from official Navy films, plus captured enemy film.

Among film industry names working on the program are Lieut. Robert Taplinger, ex-Warner studio publicity head; Lieut. Thomas Orchard, ex-MOT, and Lieut. Philip Kellogg, ex-Warner writer.

ONLY 14 PIX FROM WB BUT PLAYING TIME TILTED 200%

Release of only 14 pictures for this year, up to mid-September, marks an increase of nearly 200% in playing time per picture for Warners over corresponding period of previous few years. Heretofore, playing time for the Warners product averaged close to one release per week, as it did for most of the other majors.

While pace of production has only begun to lag, with lesser number of films demanded, and more time and money being alloted to each, the numerical decrease is expected to be seen very markedly in the program schedule for the coming year, if present marketing conditions are maintained.

Backlogs would suffer, it is pointed out, through dissipation of topical and time elements, if previous top pace were maintained on the one-release-per-week level. Warners already has piled up backlog of 16 features now in the vaults or in production, and that ratio is not expected to be much disturbed by end of the year.

Releases for the first nine months of 1943 were and are 'Yankee Doodle Dandy,' 'The Gorilla Man,' 'Casablanca,' 'Truck Busters,' 'The Hard Way,' 'Mysterious Doctor,' 'Air Force,' 'Edge of Darkness,' 'Mission to Moscow,' 'Action In the North Atlantic,' 'Background to Danger,' 'The Constant Nymph,' 'This Is the Army,' 'Watch on the Rhine,' and, due to go out at the end of September, 'Thank Your Lucky Stars,' bringing total to that date up to 15.

Running time per picture has averaged close to three weeks.

One of the Swedish series will be a story about Sweden's film industry, told in English by Victor Seastrom, who formerly made pictures in this country.

Filling these requests by camp appearances, 2,336 players, including all top stars, have entertained in service camps and overseas, appeared on radio broadcasts and transcriptions for the Army, Navy and Government agencies, and given their efforts of War Bond sales and relief and charity drives. The committee has set up a total of 5,593 events.

posals: right to purchase full year's product from distribs with unconditional 20% cancellation privileges; new and non-legalistic arbitration setups, with arbitrators experienced in the film business; local mediation by qualified mediators familiar with trade practices, and simplified standard form of exhibition contract.

Kuykendall goes on to flay the blocks-of-five selling system, which has raised film prices to highest levels, and admits that the distribs will be reluctant to give up the advantage of five picture block selling. He then points out that the exhibitor tradeshows have been complete busts, insofar as exhibitor attendance is concerned, also that the system has saddled the industry with a heavy and unnecessary expense. He sidesteps the theatre divorcement controversy by tabbing it a fake issue, and states affiliated circuits are quite capable of defending themselves against attacks in court or in Congress.

H'WOOD WAR PIX LOSING INTEREST TO BRAZILIANS

Washington, Sept. 13.—Hollywood War films are reported losing popularity in Brazil because there are so many of them, the U. S. Commerce Department reports in a survey of the film industry of that country. Study shows that in 1942, 99% by weight of all pictures imported by Brazil came from the U. S.

Most of this country's product, however, is generally approved, with adventure and sentimental stories tops. Cartoons are well received, and serials get a heavy play in the interior.

Unofficial study of Brazilian production shows that only one entertainment feature was made last year, the bulk of the output being government propaganda shorts and newsreels.

Argentina was the second largest exporter of pix to Brazil in 1942, with Great Britain third and Germany fourth. Small amounts were sent in by Switzerland, Portugal and France. Italy, Japan, Mexico and Canada got nothing in last year. All Axis pix imported last year, or in the hands of distributors, subsequently were confiscated by the government.

PAR SUSPENDS DONLEVY AND PUTS 'BLONDE' ON SHELF

Paramount has supended contract of Brian Donlevy for his refusal to accept part assigned him in 'Incendiary Blonde,' story based on life of Tex Guinan in which Betty Hutton will have principal part. Donlevy refused assignment claiming part was not important and big enough for him.

Y. Frank Freeman, who suspended the Donlevy contract said that the film would be shelved until Donlevy got ready to play the part, as no other actor around is acceptable for the part. Donlevy's contract has three years to go, calling for three pictures a year, with outside picture permitted by Paramount. Donlevy recently refused to play top character part in 'Double Indemnity,' because role was that of a murderer, with Fred MacMurray taking the part.

Donlevy currently has plans to make an Alaskan tour for USO Camp Shows, and expects to leave shortly on the tour.

DRAFT LIVINGSTON FOR REVERE SERIES

Bob Livingston has been drafted by Republic to handle starring spot in the John Paul Revere series of westerns which studio substitutes for coming year in place of the Three Mesquiteers series. Livingston will not lose his own film identity under deal for him to star in the series.

STRICT vigilance maintained by attaches of the Palladium over manner of dress and other factors held to be undesirable by the management has resulted in refunds to patrons running into three figures almost weekly. Last week's kickback to ticket buyers amounted to $250, according to Maurice Cohen, general manager of the Sunset boul ballroom. Strict observance is demanded of the tabu on bobby socks, zoot suits, tieless shirts and other habilaments deemed out of line with the run of trade at the dancery. Those whose behavior is questionable also are shunted back to the boxoffice for refunds. FIRST disclosure of America's secret war weapon—which British admit greatly aided them in defeating the mighty German Luftwaffe and which is contributing so greatly to the Allies' overwhelming air superiority today—is made in detail in Paramount's forthcoming 'Popular Science' release, produced by Jerry Fairbanks with Government seal of sanction. Actually it isn't a weapon at all—it's a new kind of gasoline! Aviation gasoline of such high octane rating that it gives a minimum of 50 miles to the gallon even when used in today's motor cars. What it does to airplanes is what the Nazis didn't and don't like. Vital secrets are not, of course, revealed, but the military did okay release of film telling the story of American scientific skill rising to meet a crisis in World War II.

'As long as a sponsor is big enough and has a product to sell over a network, he'll get time. If he doesn't, he won't. That's too easy a standard. WHODUNIT ACTOR DIES IN MYSTERY

David G. G. Bacon, 28, died as he acted—in a whodunit. The scion of a Massachusetts family died before he could reveal the name of his assailant as he stumbled from his careening car into the arms of a bystander after being fatally stabbed in the back. He asked the bystander to 'help me' then died.

He portrayed the role of the Masked Marvel in the Republic serial of the same name. He was married to the Austrian opera singer, Greta Keller. They lived at 8444 Magnolia Drive, Hollywood.

Bacon was the son of Lieut. Col. Gaspar Bacon, a former lieutenant governor of Massachusetts and now serving with the Army in England. His grandfather was ambassador to France during the Teddy Roosevelt regime.

HOLDOVERS SLOW GROSSES

NEW UPRISING EXPECTED WITH CHANGE IN BILLS

First run film grosses locally are lagging behind top figures of recent weeks due to lengthy holdovers in 10 of the 16 de luxers and moveover houses. With six theatres now having pictures in fourth weeks of a run, this week's estimated total take will hit only $238,000. Business is expected to zoom upward again next week with the Pantages and Hillstreet and the three Warners houses bringing in new bills.

'For Whom the Bell Tolls,' on reserved seat run at the Carthay Circle and United Artists theatres, is still pleasing after totaling approximately $37,000 for the fourth week's business. UA hit estimated $23,000 of the total with four shows daily. Carthay, with $14,000 of the fourth week with two shows daily, adds extra matinee performance starting today and is expected to up substantially weekly average.

'This Is the Army' winds up sock four-week stay at Warners Downtown, Hollywood and Wiltern tonight with approximately $226,000 in the till. Warners houses are donating all profits from run to Army Emergency Relief fund instead of retaining 50%. 'Watch On the Rhine' goes in tomorrow for stay. 'Army' holds for at least another week at Warners Beverly, having hit nifty $10,700 the first stanza.

Only new first run bill in town this week is 'The Sky's the Limit' at Fox West Coast's Chinese, Loew's State and Ritz. Picture is plowing under excellent $48,000 for the triple screening. At the Orpheum Jimmy Dorsey's stage appearance will clock better than $27,000. 'So Proudly We Hail,' in second week at the Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramounts, looks good for $35,000, while 'Mr. Lucky' and 'Saludos Amigos' at the Pantages and Hillstreet finishes four weeks tonight at 6 p.m. with neat $22,500. 'Behind the Rising Sun' preems at two theatres tonight. Hawaii theatre continues to pay off with the horror bill, 'Walked with a Zombie' and 'Leopard Man,' catching $9,500 estimate for the week after record-breaking $10,950 last week.

'Claudia' shows promise in its moveover to the Four Star and Wilshire after hitting top takes for first week in three F-WC de luxers. Picture beat 'Random Harvest,' previous high at the Ritz with $12,430 against $12,365, and was only slightly under 'Harvest' figure of $19,400 at the Chinese with $19,000. It also caught sweet $25,000 at the Loew's State.

Play Review

THE WALTZ KING

Boris Morros has found an effective entertainment prescription in the light opera form, for both the regular music addicts and the general run of amusement seekers, in his presentation of 'The Waltz King' which opened to a generous audience at the Philharmonic Auditorium last night for two weeks' stance.

In translating the Johann Strauss music into the current idiom of speech and behavior, Morros and Theodore Bachenheimer and Aubrey Stauffer have written with stress on the picturesque and spectacular, rather than the melodic, in telling 'the life and loves and music' of the Viennese waltz master. Appropriately to this treatment, then, the piece comes to its gorgeous highlight in the dance routines of the second act, when Tatiana Riabouchinska flashes the new David Lichine ballet in a beautiful performance to sustained applause.

Richard Bonelli and Irra Petina ably sing the principal roles of Strauss and his wife, with the amorous complications interpolated by Virginia Card as the waltz king's current inamorata; Marjorie Cooke, a pretty model; Leon Belasco, a weazoned but smart old minister of state to the Austrian court; Anthony Marlowe, as Strauss' servant, and Max Willenz, scheming father of the sweetheart.

All carry their assignment well, with Virginia Card especially putting fire into her assignment to add verve otherwise somewhat missing in a slow and sometimes strained first act. Charles La Torre and Edna Harris carry roles smartly.

Staging and costuming, lighting and spectacular effects are strikingly handsome and exciting.

Morros and Fritz Berens adapted the Johann Strauss music, and Berens also directed it and made the orchestral arrangements. Theodore Bachenheimer did the stage direction. Additional lyrics are by Mort Greene, and additional dialog by Bert Levine adds the required light note and captures laughs. Settings are by Boris Leven; lighting and technical supervision, unusually effective, by Adrian Awan, and the gorgeous ballet costumes, fresh and chic, are designed by Travilla.

Altogether the show is a distinguished presentation and should regale the Philharmonic trade amply during its fortnight stay.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

Chicago, Sept. 13.—The Mussolini liberation was a good piece of showmanship by Hitler, but little else, except perhaps Hitler's desire to avoid a precedent in bringing Axis war criminals to trial at this stage of the game. It will be well to keep your eyes on the Balkans right now. There seems to be a good bet that things will happen there shortly, especially in view of the events that are brewing all around that section of Europe, plus the announcement that the Soviet Union is understood to be ready to give its approval to an Allied move under certain conditions.

Resolution also provided that all unions and guilds now outside the Council will be eligible to participate in the election provided they have re-affiliated or filed application for membership by Sept. 30.

It is understood that Paul Smith, AF of L international representative, now operating Council, expressed satisfaction with resolution. He has authority to waive constitutional requirement time so returning unions can vote.

Collarites Demand For 7% Pay Hike Up to Majors

Demands of Screen Office Employes Guild for a 7% wage hike for 2,000 studio White Collarites will be presented to the major companies Sept. 21 when a Guild committee headed by Business Representative Glenn Pratt confers with Producers. At the same time, SOEG has drafted demands for a 15% increase for Exchange Collarites, to be presented to eastern company heads when negotiations are opened here shortly.

Guilders insist that both increases are due clerical workers under Little Steel formula and adjustment of pay inequalities called for by President Roosevelt when he issued his 'hold the line' order. Clerical workers have received only an 8% tilt since the 15% Little Steel formula was adopted by the War Labor Board as a guide for wage boosts.

SOEG also is asking that all stenographers be moved up from Classification 6X to Classification 5, which would give stenogs an average tilt of $3 per week. It is understood some executives favor latter request because of difficulty in holding good stenographers with competition of higher pay in defense plants. Guild wants approval of time and one-half after 40 hours for members in Classifications one and two. Most of these administration workers currently are paid under the Fair Labor Standards, which gives them only one-half above regular scales for overtime.

Question of which classifications and departments will work 44 hours under the War Manpower Commission's 48-hour week will be worked out at conferences between Business Representative Pratt and Fred Pelton, Producer representative. This was agreed upon yesterday after Pratt had talked with WMC officials here.

Set Designers To Get Fat Back Pay Checks

Recent wage increases negotiated for studio Costume Illustrators by Screen Set Designers will be retroactive to July 1, 1942, according to word received from the War Labor Board yesterday by Business Representative Ed Mussa. Average retroactive check will be around $600, while some Illustrators will drag down $1,000. New rates go into effect as of this week.

POST-WAR

Above you see ten different sound tracks made with Western Electric Equipment from 1928 up to the beginning of the war.

...during the war

Wonderful new weapons—based on the engineering principles learned in recording sound for motion pictures—are being developed and perfected today. They will help to end this war sooner. Where and how they are serving will make an interesting story when it can be told. In the course of this wartime development program, the scientists at Bell Telephone Laboratories and Western Electric are constantly adding to their already unique knowledge of sound-recording and transmission.

...and after

When V-day comes, the post-war sound track—no matter what it may look like—will reflect the new ideas and developments now coming out of our work on war projects. The Voice of the Screen will be still finer!

Par Buys $1,500,000 War Bonds to Boost Industry Total

Purchase of $1,500,000 in War Bonds by Paramount Studios yesterday boomed the total being piled up by the Motion Picture War Finance Committee in its local campaign in the Third War Loan Drive. Although the drive is only four days old, this is the third big investment in bonds, made by a major studio. Chairman Henry Ginsberg previously reported purchases of $2,000,000 by Metro and $1,000,000 by Warners.

Other studios in both the major and independent fields have announced that various amounts of corporation bonds will be purchased during the current drive as a part of the industry effort. Similar purchases are planned by the various film unions and guilds.

An amazing response was reported from employes in all branches of the business. Among the larger investments made yesterday were $25,000 by Joel McCrea, $35,000 by Y. Frank Freeman, $20,000 by Eddie Cantor and $10,000 by Edward Golden. An overall report on sales will not be ready until the end of the first week's effort because of the rush at various bond offices set up by the Committee.

BONDBARDIERS GRAB OFF $143,000,000 IN CLEVE.

Cleveland, Sept. 13. — Advance sale for the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade here tonight was lobbied so heavily that sale of $40,000,000 worth of War Bonds was in bag for stars appearance in the Civic Auditorium. Last minute rush for standing room, priced at $100 bond and $1,000 pews were expected to add $2,000,000 to the gate. Final figures for Auditorium show was placed at $83,000,000 by Bond Cavalcade officials.

With sales at first official luncheon forecast running to $60,000,000, total for city was $143,000,000. Amount was raised through auction of war relics, food, etc. Top bid was Fisher Groceries offer of $10,000,000 for silk American flag, with a three-pound steak going for $10,000. Autographed Doolittle poster drew $4,000,000. Troupe split to visit 12 major war plants, to spur goal of $1,000,000 for each.

Kay Kyser attended luncheon at Chamber of Commerce, Lions, Rotary, etc., for auctioning of autographs of stars, Generals MacArthur, Doolittle and Eisenhower, Governor Bricker, Senator Bolton. One box for tonight's show was bought for $10,000,000 in bonds.

Six Cleveland families were guests of honor. Each has six sons in active service.

Cleveland Auditorium, with a capacity of 9,500, was jam packed by 11,000 persons, while tens of thousands of disappointed ticket buyers lined the streets for a glimpse of the film stars. Returns still were coming in from war plants, with a possibility the total would soar above the $143,000,000 figure.

shaken down by the ghost writer. She stands him off until the wedding ceremony, but he crashes in and the socialite crashes out. Stripper thereupon falls into her press agent's arms.

Two-act comedy runs 140 minutes, and is all upholstery. Gags developed from mad crops, burleycue hangers-on, vaude turns engaged for the wedding, and jokes obviously aimed at the author's friends, intimates and associates. Audience soon tires of prop gags, and fails to catch the jokes. Show is frequently vulgar but seldom dirty.

Joan Blondell in the starring spot has plenty of stage presence and keeps up interest when the story sags. On stage most of the time, she has drive and security. Miss Blondell was well liked, but with wittier lines she'd have been socko. Others in cast are mostly character walk-ons. Frederick Fox's two sets steal the show. Advance sale for 'Genius' here at the Wilbur theatre clocked $17,000, tremendous for debut prior to critical notices.

PLAN BIG RALLY HERE TO WELCOME CAVALCADE HOME

Drive. Tickets would be distributed to various industries cooperating in the campaign.

Plans, however, may be altered, with the Bond Cavalcade returning Oct. 1, instead of Sept. 26, as originally planned. Proposal for extension of the number of cities to be visited by the star bond salesmen are now being worked out in Washington.

Current schedule of Cavalcade calls for appearance in 16 cities, but an extension to Oct. 1 would permit the addition of several other centers. Current schedule calls for shows in 15 cities in addition to the initial broadcast appearance in Washington. These are Philadelphia, Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Chicago, Memphis, St. Louis, New Orleans, Dallas, San Antonio, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

In the meantime, results of War Veterans Bond Airmadas continued to keep pace. Tour manager Gene O'Brien reported that Milwaukee's bond dinner for his group brought in $5,522,000. Returns from the tri-cities, Moline, Rock Island and Davenport, were as yet incomplete.

Austin, Texas, reported $4,500,000 in bond sales for the entire county, following the Airmada visit, with a bond premiere in Corpus Christi alone bringing in $1,341,065, according to Bill Porter.

Appearance of the Zone 1 Airmada heroes and screen personalities at Seattle and Tacoma shipyards brought in $11,202,975, according to a message from Ed Scofield. An additional $2,228,435 was raised through auctioning Nylon hose at Seattle's Victory Square.

Luise Rainer was selected by Camp Kohler, western signal training center, as 'the girl we would most like to communicate with.' Men of the Portland Air Transport Base chose Marie McDonald as their 'duration pin-up girl.'

Agency and Sponsor Of Screen Guild Show Split

Settlement is being worked out in New York between Pedlar & Ryan agency and its client, Lady Esther cosmetics, sponsor of Screen Guild Players radio show, following rupture of relations and dismissal of agency. Syma Busiel, head of the Lady Esther Co., served notice on the agency last week that business relations had terminated. P & R outfit refused to accept the dismissal, claiming it was entitled to 90 days notice of cancellation.

Agency holds a contract with Motion Picture Relief Fund, which is paid a flat sum weekly for gratis performances of stars appearing on Screen Guild airer. Bill Lawrence, producer of Screen Guild Players, is under contract to Pedlar & Ryan and it is within the agency's province to pull Lawrence off the show. Points of law have been raised in this connection but Lawrence remains with the show until notified of terms of the settlement in New York. Break between agency and Lady Esther has occurred before but P & R has always managed to retain the account.

New York, Sept. 14. — Ralph Hawkes, London publisher currently visiting in this country, has been asked by Ascap to relay to British Performing Rights Society its reasons why Ascap thinks there ought to be a revision of existing contract between the two societies. Hawkes' partner, Fred Boosey, is BPRS prexy. Ascap claims the present pact is 20 years old and needs revamping to meet new conditions. It is proposed that Ascap be allowed to withold from BPRS royalties share due an American publisher and remit directly instead of the former via England.

British Squeeze On U. S. Pix

New York, Sept. 14.—American film companies are facing a squeeze in England due to control of that market by J. Arthur Rank. British situation was mulled thoroughly at Metro confab in the Waldorf-Astoria last Friday, which was attended by Louis B. Mayer, J. Robert Rubin, Al Lichtman, Nicholas Schenck, Ben Goetz, Alexander Korda and Sam Eckman. Rank, head of several powerful British production and distribution outfits, offers to cooperate with U. S.-backed producers only if he obtains British distribution rights. He tried to swing such a deal with Korda, but since latter is committed to Metro, chances of going through with such a deal seem slim. Despite British Board of Trade notification that Rank cannot acquire any more houses without the BT consent, he recently closed deal for the Buxton and Brennan circuits. Owing to the importance of the Metro pow-wow here last week, Korda postponed his Coast trip for several days.

EXHIBITORS with smaller houses in the southern California district are being flagged by several major distribs in their recent coin-harvest in buying top pictures of two to five years ago from the exchanges for $10 and $15 for two or three-day datings. Exhibs generally booked the oldies with top stars for weekend bookings, and collected plenty of profit in comparison to film rental of current product. One exchange, which has been target for numerous revival bookings at the small figures, recently clamped down by ordering bookers to take no contracts for less than $10 a day rental. As latter figure is close to what the exhibs are paying for current supporting product, the theatre operators squawked, but the minimum stands. Other offices quickly followed suit, with the minimum now general along the row.

ALTHOUGH Paramount execs, following openings of 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' in New York and Los Angeles, agreed that around 20 minutes should be clipped from the running time of two hours and 55 minutes, and tightening up of the footage was accomplished at the studio several weeks ago, abbreviated prints have not yet been turned over to theatres for replacement of the longer versions. Further editing made on the production after original negative was cut requires Technicolor to go through extensive changes on its processing in making such added changes, and Par is likely awaiating new prints from the laboratory to substitute in the theatres where 'Bell' now is playing.

POSTWAR era is expected to produce more informative and factual films, due in part to the increaase in literacy brought about by the war and educational opportunities extended to armed forces. Changes in public taste for the better is reflected in increased circulation of highbrow mags and books. phonograph manufacturers (the other two, RCA-Victor and Columbia) that it appeared to him as if from now on it would have to be every man for himself, and that subsequently the other two companies relieved Decca of a commitment to stick with remainder of the industry and not signature a separate agreement.

It is also recalled that Diamond stated lack of control by phonograph companies over commercial uses made of their wares offered a real problem for the phonograph record companies. Remark was made during War Labor Board's panel investigation of the recording shutdown. Petrillo thanked Diamond for admitting that AFM had a problem, saying this is the first time anybody on the other side conceded that there is something to be discussed. Decca reported recently that recordings had been made by some of its artists, including Bing Crosby and Connie Boswell.

Gorgeous and pretentious, this is really two shows in one package, a musical drama and a revue which parades Metro's top talent in song, dance, skit, comedy and thrill, giving packed and diversified entertainment for two solid hours. It will garner heavy coin and add luster to its many names, both in the thesp and the technical brackets. In the parade of its top personalities, 'Thousands Cheer' emulates the showcasing previously flaunted by other companies as well as Metro, and does it better in some respects. It has something for every taste, and will please widely.

The revue phase of the show follows an interesting and well told, music-studded love story between a female private in one of the military services and a former ace circus aerialist who finds difficulty in accommodating himself to the obscurity of an Army private. These two are Kathryn Grayson and Gene Kelly. By dint of love and chastening experiences, the boy again finds his satisfactory place amongst his fellow servicemen and in the heart of the colonel's daughter.

The musical drama is far better than the usual tales attached to this brand of entertainment. It has substance, color, credible characters and behavior, projected against a timely background of soldiering and the sensational excitements of the circus bigtop. Original screen play is by Paul Jarrico and Richard Collins, getting vivid performance by Kathryn Grayson, Gene Kelly, Mary Astor and John Boles, as the girl's estranged parents; Ben Blue, Frances Rafferty, Mary Elliott, Frank Jenks, Frank Sully, Dick Simmons and Ben Lessy in the featured bracket, with a whole raft of Metro stars in the show within a show.

Kathryn Grayson adds stature to her name with graceful singing, an impressive voice and an ability to meet all demands of emotional acting which will place her permanently amongst Metro's top flight players. Technicolor cameras also find her a dazzling subject. Gene Kelly scores a solid hit in a manly and sincere performance as the soldier who re-

PAR MAY SELL ONE FILM BUT UA WANTS TWO MORE

New York, Sept. 14.—Although it may give United Artists one more feature, in accordance with an agreement made last year at the time it sold them a batch of pictures, Paramount is not interested in disposing of anything else. This film is 'Triumph Over Pain,' directed by Preston Sturgis, with Joel McCrea and Betty Fields heading the cast. Price for the picture was in excess of that for any of the other films UA bought and it asked that it be given opportunity to close deal later. Paramount waited until recently, and then placed the film in a block of five that will be offered exhibs, after its next block is disposed of. United Artists wants this picture and two others to complete its fall schedule of releases and Paramount, it is said, might withdraw it from the group, in accordance with the agreement it made last year.

Tops of Paramount say that although the company has a large backlog it cannot tell what it would cost to replace any pictures sold now. Thus it wants to keep what it has, with the exception of 'Triumph Over Pain.'

RKO HAS NINE PIX ON OCT. SKED

David Hempstead expects to roll 'Elizabeth Kenny' last week of month. John Auer begins 'Good Luck Johnny Coke.' Herman Schlom rolls his 'Gildersleeve, Detective,' and Val Lewton gets 'Are These Our Children' into production.

Play Review

MAID IN THE OZARKS

'Maid in the Ozarks,' Claire Parrish's dialect comedy of the facts of life as practiced in the southern mountains of Arkansas, opened last night at the Belasco before a generous audience. This Woolever Enterprises presentation, directed by Leon Lord, looks just corny enough to catch on in the present bullish entertainment market if Los Angeles audiences repeat play given the Chicago version, now in its second year.

Plot of the Claire Parrish piece, which has been knocking around large and small theatres for some years, tells of a young moonshiner who leaves his hills to find a bride dealing them off the arm in a hash house. It doesn't pan out, but the near-bride's sister proves adaptable to hill-billy ways so everything comes out even. Play is in three acts with single set.

Cast rollicks through varied characters with broad interpretations. Annabelle Williams, the gram; Paul Barrie, Richard Deane, the half-wit Mohawk; Robert E. Hill, Cicily Browne, Dwight Butcher, the moonshiner lead; Eve Dameron, Danny Duncan, a comedy mountaineer standout; Myrtle Ferguson, Joy Gwynnell, a profile s. a. menace; and Letitia Fay, each prove themselves up to the stage fun.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

New York, Sept. 14.—The battle currently raging in Salerno proves poignantly the fallacy of our optimism regarding Italy's surrender and points out again that hopes of 'ending the war by Christmas' are premature. The determination with which the Nazis in Italy are fighting bears out the fact that they are fighting a delaying action with hopes that with winter approaching it may delay a direct attack against Germany. The present strategy also is being used by the Nazis to show other satellite nations they will not be able or permitted to quit. While Hitler is sure the Allies eventually will win the battle of Italy, right now time is the all-important factor, so far as he is concerned.

Roosevelt Attacks Ouster of Two FCC Employes

Washington, Sept. 14.—President Roosevelt notified Congress today that he considers unconstitutional the ouster of two Federal Communications Commission employes provided in a deficiency appropriations act which he signed in July. A rider on the measure called for the ousting of William E. Dodd, Jr., and Goodwin Watson, both charged with pinko activities by the Dies Committee.

In a formal message to the newly reconvened Congress, Roosevelt declared in part, 'This rider is an unwarranted encroachment upon the authority of both the executive and the judicial branches under our Constitution. It is not, in my judgment, binding upon them.'

Observers took this to mean that after October 15th deadline provided by the rider, Watson and Dodd would continue to serve with the FCC. In event the Controller General should refuse to pay their salaries, they, Dodd and Watson, are expected to carry the case to the courts.

SDG WANTS MORE DIRECTORS ON PIX

Contract clause providing for compulsory use of second assistant directors on all pictures will be asked by Screen Directors Guild when current agreement is reopened and negotiations start with major studios. Script clerks at one major studio have been complaining because second assistants are not used on smaller pictures and clerks are required to make reports usually handled by second assistant directors.

"What a pageful of joy this is! It's just part of my 12 Toppers! 'GIRL CRAZY' brings Rooney and Garland together again in a musical bigger than 'Babes on Broadway'. And that Charles Laughton picture 'THE MAN FROM DOWN UNDER' will be one of the season's most lovable action comedies. As for 'LASSIE COME HOME' it is an all-time Great! It will be advertised to the skies as is deserves! 'BEST FOOT FORWARD' needs no introduction to the industry which has seen it set Astor, N. Y. records for two glorious months!"

"Note the variety of subjects in my new group, the 12 Toppers. Wally Beery's show 'SALUTE TO THE MARINES' is one of the biggest he's ever been in, the rough, rarin', romantic kind, with swashbuckling action of the Marines in Technicolor that's terrific. Ann Sothern's got a tall dark military secret in her timely comedy romance 'SWING SHIFT MAISIE.' Robert Donat gives another blue 'Chips' performance in the mystery love story 'The Adventures of TARTU' that the critics call t-h-r-i-l-l-i-n-g. Washington, Sept. 14. — Group of new Soviet films are in preparation, Russian Embassy announces. Novel, 'Dmitri Donskoe,' dealing with a famous Russian military victory over the Tartars some centuries ago, has been scripted and is now in production.

Series of three films will deal with everyday life of people on the home front. First, 'The Great Earth,' covers a working day in the Ural Mountains. Untitled are another on war work of Russian women and one on the search by scientists for more coal, oil and metal for war purposes.

Cinema Committee of the Council of People's Commisars has organized a studio to produce films dealing with Russia's history. Playwrights and war correspondents will do the scenarios.

A series is planned on the cities of Leningrad, Odessa, Sevastopol and Stalingrad, all of which have figured in this war.

Already completed is 'The New Order of Demyansk.' This tells of a collective farmer from that place who is carried off to Germany as a slave laborer by the Nazis and who makes his escape. Picture has been premiered in Moscow.

CENTRAL CASTING STARTS DRIVE TO END WAIVERS

Drive to eliminate use of waivers for employment of film extras is being inaugurated by Central Casting Corp. through adoption of a new method of assigning studio jobs in the $5.50 wage bracket. Special call board, with a separate number, is being set up to handle all $5.50 calls.

Any extra interested in working in that wage bracket will be given the number, as well as the special number he calls for employment in other classifications. In this way, it was pointed out, any of the 4,200 Class B members of the Screen Actors Guild interested in working in the $5.50 classification will be given a crack at available jobs before waivers are asked for employment of outsiders.

Players working in higher classifications will be permitted to call on the $5.50 board in addition to the number assigned for $10.50 and $16.50 jobs. In the past certain extras have complained that outsiders have been hired on waivers while they were sitting at home waiting for a call.

Plan is said to have been worked out by Howard R. Philbrick, Central general manager, following conferences with major studio heads and SAG officials. New scheme is expected to eliminate many waiver beefs and should direct thousands of dollars into hands of regular extras that formerly went to outsiders who were not affiliated with SAG.

Details of plan will be disclosed by Central in a few days, at which time the special telephone number will be given to all extras.

sents the Army caste system, but comes to realization of need for teamwork, as he did with his trapeze fellows.

Jose Iturbi, screen bowing as himself at the piano and with orchestral baton, proves himself a capable actor as well as music maestro. Preview audience was delighted with him, giving him top cheers for all talent. He will be more in demand. Scenes with Iturbi and Miss Grayson have special charm.

Prodigal musical content comes to its melodic peaks, under Herbert Stothart's skillful direction, in 'Daybreak,' 'I Dug a Trench,' 'Three Letters in a Mail Box,' 'Let There Be Music,' 'United Nations.' Three orchestras are tossed in for extra featured strength — Kay Kyser's, Bob Crosby's and the band of Benny Carter.

George Sidney acquits himself with distinction in this his third directorial assignment, handling the assorted material and the galaxy of talent with assurance, a robust guidance and a smooth flowing tempo to carry the picture across its two hours extended course.

Joseph Pasternak's production authority testifies his experience and smart showmanship. Picture is a fine piece of organization.

In the revue sequences, introduced as a show Miss Grayson (Private Miss Jones) is putting on for servicemen, Mickey Rooney acts as emcee; Judy Garland sings to Iturbi's piano accompaniment; Red Skelton clowns hilariously; Eleanor Powell hoofs a staccato number; Ann Sothern, Lucille Ball and Marsha Hunt, with Frank Morgan, contribute a slyly suggestive routine as servicewomen prospects coming to a masquerading dentist for physical examination; Virginia O'Brien deadpans a song; Lena Horne sings; Don Loper and Maxine Barrat, Marilyn Maxwell, Donna Reed, Margaret O'Brien, June Allyson, Gloria DeHaven, John Conte and Sara Haden make characteristic appearance.

George Folsey got exceptionally brilliant results with his Technicolor cameras, with the art directors and set decorators and the costume designers sharing exceptional merits in color arrangements and decor.

GRAUMAN WAX WORKS WILL DEPICT HISTORY OF FILMS

replica of cinemaland, from its early days to the present time.

Grauman is no novice when it comes to waxing personalities. In the early 20's, Sid did it as a hobby, and had figures made of all the reigning stars of the time, most of which he still has in his possession. He figures on having about 1,000 or more figures, besides paintings by various prominent artists including a number that Howard Chandler Christie made for him. Then also there will be a lot of sculpture of personalities whose names were and are of public interest.

The figures will be shown individually and in groups, latter in settings of important films of the past, with each figure in the raiment of the character played by the artist.

The setting tableaux will have lighting and scenic equipment, of the same realism that Grauman used for his prologs in the Million Dollar, Metropolitan, Egyptian and Chinese theatres.

It will take around two hours for the patrons to tour the Museum, as with all the exhibs, Grauman will have lecturers to explain their significance and narrate a history of the personalities. Also there will be a motion picture hall where a compound of scenes from various important pictures will be show, accompanied by a lecture.

Grauman figures that he will be able to get his enterprise operating around the Christmas holidays, with an investment of around $300,000 in the project.

CAVALCADE SALES HIT $750,000,000

6-DAY SUM SWOLLEN IN DETROIT

Detroit, Sept. 14. — Total bond sales for the first six cities visited by the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade will exceed $750,000,000, it was stated here tonight, although the original goal was only $500,000,000.

A crowd of 17,000 jammed the Olympia Stadium here to greet the picture stars and see their three-hour variety show. Receipts were still being tabulated at midnight, but more than $47,000,000 had been counted as the performance got under way. This figure was incomplete, and expectations were that it would be doubled, with millions pouring in from other affairs in connection with the visit of the Bond Cavalcade.

Thousands of persons waited at the railway station when the Bond Cavalcade special pulled in. Although no parade was scheduled huge throngs lined the streets as the stars were shuttled from the railway station to the hotel. Throughout the afternoon mobs of people hung around the Statler.

Military police escorted the stars on shopping tours and visits to picture houses.

'Par Week' Biggest In History; 'Hail' Elevates Biz

New York, Sept. 14. — Business during the 25th annual 'Paramount Week,' just ended, was 13% ahead of the same seven-day period last year and biggest yet of any previous observance of anniversary, according to announcement today by Neil Agnew, general sales manager. Week launched Paramount's new selling season, with 'So Proudly We Hail' as the Silver Anniversary feature.

Upping of business was direct result of pull of 'Proudly,' booked to print capacity, plus grosses being tallied for 'Dixie,' according to Agnew. Picture broke all-time gross records in 11 situations, Agnew stated, plus very big business in other spots in which it has opened so far. Florida State Theatres has rearranged bookings on film, calling for 39 changes, so extended playing time could be obtained in all of circuit's towns.

Turnabout

George Jessel and Eddie Cantor have made a deal in which Jessel will play himself in 'Cantor's 'Show Business' at RKO, and Cantor will play himself in 'The Dolly Sisters,' which Jessel will produce at 20th-Fox studio.

NY NITERY THREAT TO SUE SINATRA

New York, Sept. 14.—Riobamba, New York nitery, threatens Frank Sinatra, and Music Corp. with breach of contract suit if Sinatra doesn't honor verbal agreement he is said to have made to return to the spot next December. Linton Weil, Riobamba operator, claims he will file an injunction suit to prevent Sinatra from opening at the Waldorf-Astoria Oct. 1, first job MCA booked for the swooner since taking over his management from General Amusement Corp. Weil claims Sinatra agreed to return but was unable to get a definite okay from the singer.

Explosive Ascap Meeting Today On Point System

When the gavel falls at 4 o'clock this afternoon convoking the semi-annual session of Coast Ascap members at the Roosevelt hotel it is expected to touch off one of the most explosive meetings in the Society's eventful history. Issues affecting the livelihood and prestige of the country's top songwriters and some of the world's master composers, smoldering since adoption by Ascap of the point system of rating, will be tossed into the welter of argument. Among the 250 in attendance will be that small but spirited group of so-called insurgents who can always be depended upon to set off the verbal pyrotechnics. Nor will they monopolize the scene. That shy, modest coterie of serious composers will raise their voice, but lustily, for the first time since they were brought into the Society by ex-prexy, Gene Buck, as 'window dressing,' to lend dignity and class to the organization.

Up on the dias will be the 'big three' of Ascap—Prexy Deems Taylor, General Manager John Paine and Fred Ahlert, champion of the point system. Whether that 'sentimentalist,' Buck, is asked up or accepts will be another interesting sidelight to enliven the proceedings. It is considered likely that Buck will insist on sitting with 'my boys' out on the floor. It will be no love feast, however, for those along brass hat row once the meeting is transformed into an open forum. Another reason

RKO TOPS BIT SHY ON HIGH PERCENT FOR GOLDWYN PAIR

RKO tops, who are here conferring with Sam Goldwyn on releasing plans for 'North Star,' which cost him $3,000,000 are reported as not inclined to feel that 'Gone With the Wind' terms of 70% can be procured from domestic release of the Russian subject. Though pictures during past season have grossed into the seven figure area only around five or six have hit the $3,000,000 mark, and with the political situation on Russia being rather acute as to feeling of the populace, it is said to be questionable as to whether this picture would gross into high proportions on the domestic sales.

Exhibitors on the other hand feel that they are paying tops now on percentages for all product and would balk against any 'GWTW' or near corresponding terms.

HOPES of the set-'em-up operators were dashed yesterday with announcement by War Production Board that no converted alcohol distilleries would be released for production of beverage alcohol during balance of 1943. WPB has been considering proposal to allow distilleries to resume production of drinking whiskey for at least a two-year period with early indications that approval would be given. Hard liquor shortage and other causes have accounted for folding of more than 3,000 bars and other spots selling booze during past year in California, according to figures released by the State Board of Equalization. Within the next few months, as liquor supplies hit rock-bottom, at least this many more taverns are expected to shutter. There are a few fortunate operators who had sufficient bankrolls to stock their cellars to ride out coming dry period, but others will find the going tough. Among reasons given for closing of the 3,173 spots were shortage of liquor, particularly bourbon; drop-off in highway traffic since gas rationing, which socked the roadside place a lethal blow, and entry of owners into the armed services. Liquor shortage explanation predominated.

PREEM audience which turned out for first showing of RKO's 'Behind the Rising Sun' at Hollywood Pantages theatre Tuesday night had to wait more than an hour for picture to begin, after announced starting time. Frank Sinatra had introduced James R. Young, author of story, from stage, and after 15 minutes of palaver from stage Young finally uttered words audience had been waiting impatiently to hear . . . 'and now the world premiere of 'Behind the Rising Sun.' Lights out, instead of 'Sun' flashing on screen, however, title of 'Honeymoon Lodge' appeared, and first-nighters had to sit through this Universal programmer before picture they'd come especially to see finally started to unreel for their fancy.

After company pulled out he was advised that no airline accommodations were possible, and he had better make up his mind to go by train. After two-day delay director finally recalled his assistant days and agreed to travel in an upper. But latter also was a blank. Now he's en route to join the waiting unit in a chair car—with a pillow and lunchbox.

AS Mark Twain might have remarked if he were alive, 'the report of Lou Metzger's death is highly exaggerated.' Due to an erratum in transcription, his death is recorded in Sept. 14 issue of Variety. So, Daily Variety is happy to report that Mezger is very much alive and hopes that any report of his demise is many, many years premature.

PARAMOUNT has five out of the 10 top money pictures for the 1942-43 season so far, according to box office digest made for B. G. DeSylva, executive producer. Par's quintet of heavy grossers are 'Star Spangled Rhythm,' 'Road To Morocco,' 'Reap the Wild Wind,' 'Dixie' and 'So Proudly We Hail.' On this appraisal list Warners has two, 'Yankee Doodle Dandy' and 'This Is The Army'; Metro has 'Random Harvest,' 20th-Fox 'Coney Island' and RKO 'Hitler's Children.'

PROFESSIONAL courtesy: Recently the C. B. DeMille 'Story of Dr. Wassell' company on Paramount lot and RKO's 'Around the World,' just across the fence, both were working with considerable noise. Each bothered the other. At the same moment, practically, each, with the greatest consideration and polity, asked the other if it couldn't pipe down. So each, not to be outdone, called off working for the rest of the day, thinking the other might profit thereby.

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

A writer weaves a screenplay on a simple old-time theme,
And never has to fret about locations for his dream.
By hills and rills his Jacks and Jills pursue their tangled ways,
At times in pioneering times, at times in modern days.
But when the writer lets his mind go roaming overseas
Where troops are landing on the shores and bombers roam the breeze,
He looks the war maps over and he wipes his fevered brow,
And wonders where his story will arrive a month from now.

Producing war plays in this far-flung conflict is something like dropping two bits in a one-arm bandit and waiting for a jingle. Warners hit the jackpot with 'Casablanca,' and now the boys are dropping coins in the slot and hoping. It ain't true that the Hollywood producers are running the war. They don't know any more about it than the experts on the radio.

Back in your grandpop's day you leaped to your feet and hastened down to Main street whenever you heard a band. Maybe it was the Elks Silver Cornet band, or a street carnival, or a dog-and-pony show, or an Uncle Tommer or Dr. Hiawatha and his Marvelous Indian Elixir of Life. Anyway, it was a band, and the kids forgot all about their chores and started doing handsprings and cartwheels down the street. Those days are gone, but any time a band is heard in Hollywood a flock of film producers hasten from their offices with contracts and fountain pens in their hands. A band is still a band, only more so.

Your correspondent walked down Cahuenga blvd. this morning and glimpsed a bare spot where Orson the Tent Maker had moved out. There is nothing so desolate as the remains of a circus.

For years Franchot Tone was a kind-hearted hero, saving maids in distress and otherwise upholding law and order, all the time a carefree bachelor. Now he is settled down to family life and paternity, so the studio casts him as a lawbreaking villain.

The Hollywood way—Buy a best-selling novel for its title value, rewrite the story and then shift the title to another picture, meanwhile saving the story to be rewritten under a title taken from another novel, which will be produced later as a musical with four swing bands.

At morn the doves in yonder tree give out with bills and coos,
And voices on the radio give out with wartime news.
The warlike tidings are the same, repeated endlessly,
And you prefer to hear the doves out yonder in the tree.

PIX FACE NEW DRAFT BLOW

ESSENTIALS GO IF DADS BARRED

Washington; Sept. 15 — Legislation halting the father draft might hit the film studios just as hard as the calling up of parents, it appeared here today on the basis of testimony given before the Senate Military Affairs Committee. Spokesmen for the armed forces said their global strategy, as worked out at the Quebec conference calls for an army of 7,700,000 by the end of 1943.

They strongly indicated that, even if Congress should halt the father draft, the armed forces would not change the size of the draft calls for the last three months of the year. This would force the draft boards to seek out single men and married men without children who now have 'essential occupation' deferments.

Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson touched on the point when he warned 'if the proposal to not draft fathers were adopted, the men to be added to the military forces would necessarily be the non-fathers who are doing skilled work in the munitions plants.'

Naturally, if draft boards are forced to dip further into the Pacific Coast aircraft plants they would also call up essential men from the studios. Other branches of the show biz, not on the essential lists, would, however, benefit by the protection of fathers from the draft.

MAN IN A MILLION

THAT WAS SERG. BELL AT CANTEEN; AND READ WHAT HAPPENED TO HIM

Top Sergeant Carl E. W. Bell, whose 11 years of soldiering and three wound stripes hadn't erased a brick red complexion acquired while growing up around Rising Star, Tex., had a night off last night. He decided the Hollywood Canteen was the place to go. Polishing up some proud campaign ribbons, Sergeant Bell left Fort MacArthur, where he is presently awaiting a new assignment, for the home of the top bands, the top stars, and the tops in entertainment.

Arrival at the Canteen found Bell wondering if he would have a chance to get in—the sidewalk and entrance was jammed with some 600-700 soldiers, sailors and marines, waiting their turn to catch a dance—maybe with Lana Turner; share a sandwich with Marlene Dietrich; and possibly an autograph from Deanna Durbin. With the patience of an old campaigner, Sergeant Bell took his place in line, gradually moving up nearer and nearer the door.

As he shifted closer he wondered about a feeling that something special was in the air, else why would the Army Signal Corps be setting up motion picture cameras, lights and microphones—not that he was familiar with all such Hollywood terms. Inside he could hear Xavier Cugat and his orchestra dealing off some elegant Latin rhythms and someone said Harry James' band was standing by to go on later. Ginny Simms was singing. Phil Regan was tenoring some Irish ballads, Lorraine Krueger was dancing and Eddie Cantor was bragging about his family and singing 'Ida.'

The Doorman raised his finger and signaled the sergeant in. As he crossed the threshold Lana Turner, Deanna Durbin, and Marlene Dietrich encircled him. Surrounded by the beauties, the now scarlet faced top kick was ushered through the solidly packed Canteen, fellow servicemen cheering and making room while the Signal Corps cameras turned and Cugat gave out with his best music. Right up to the stage went Bell wondering what was going on.

'Congratulations,' said Cantor. A huge cake, with all the trimmings was brought in. Also a fitted suitcase, an identification bracelet, a wrist watch, a twenty-five dollar merchandise order and other assorted gifts.

Some busses for benefit of camera set the Sarge's face to blazing red again. But he took it like one of Uncle Sam's best. He might have thought, 'I'll have to come back again soon, if this is the way the Hollywood Canteen treats the boys in the service.'

But, although all the boys get cordial treatment, they need not expect what happened to the Sarge. He was a man in a million—the millionth service man to visit the Canteen.

HERE ARE ARMY'S BOXOFFICE CHAMPS

Washington, Sept. 15.—Box office champions for the month of August, as reflected by members of the armed forces in their attendance at War Department theatres, were, in the order named:

'Salute To the Marines,' Metro; 'So Proudly We Hail,' Paramount; 'Du Barry Was a Lady,' Metro; 'Behind the Rising Sun,' RKO, and 'Dixie,' Paramount.

PAL TOONERS USE FLESH NOT WOOD

George Pal will use human beings for first time in connection with his puppetoon productions for Paramount in 'And to Think That I Saw It in Mulberry Street,'

New technique will infuse color and music with increasing emphasis as reality passes into total fantasy in the picture, the humans being gradually replaced entirely by the wooden puppets.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

New York, Sept. 15.—As the Salerno situation returns to 'well in hand,' military considerations recede before the multitude of political problems which remain still unsettled in the background, and over which international circles are greatly concerned as they look over the prospects. The much-heralded Italian surrender apparently has turned into an Allied headache, but the important experience gained proves that the Nazi power still held is great, and evidently will help in avoiding similar optimistic anticipations in the future. Even the Soviets came in for a surprise as 'the storming of Bryansk' reliably reported not more than occupation troops were in the undefended city, the Nazis having evacuated it 20 hours before in accordance with the strategic withdrawal mapped by the general staff without Hitler's interference.

EXPLOSIVE ASCAP MEETING TODAY ON POINT SYSTEM

for Buck's likely refusal of a seat on the dias is that he might want to have a few things to say for the old timers, who see reduced royalties as their only 'reward' via the point system. 'Sentimentalist' Buck fought long and hard for the rank and file when he was in the driver's seat. Despite his weakened condition due to a recent serious illness, he is expected to turn loose that fiery oratory if he feels 'the boys' are being abused.

Just who will speak for the standard writers is anybody's guess but surely there will be a spokesman for such local members of the Society as Igor Strawinsky, Carrie Jacobs Bond, Louis Gruenberg and Ernest Toch. These master musicians will be hardest hit by the point system, it is said, as their works are heard only rarely on the networks, the basis on which computations will be made in arriving at point value for public performance.

Understood that Ascap will be asked to provide a subsidy for these members or set them aside in a separate class from popular writers to make up for revenue lost through application of the point system. Case in point expected to be brought up is that of Strawinsky, whose first quarterly check from Ascap was $150, later slightly raised, after he had been drawing $7,500 a year from SACEM, France's equivalent of Ascap and now defunct. Under the new setup it is said that Strawinsky's royalties will be considerably reduced as will others of the serious group.

The old guard, those vets of the Society whose numbers were hit paraders quarter of a century ago, are said to be considerably disturbed by the new payment plan. Their songs are aired only occasionally on the networks, which will cut deeply into their earnings.

Results of a six-month survey on how the new plan will affect various members are to be given at the meeting, with Ahlert likely presiding. First payment under the new point system falls due April 1. Financial condition of the Society, economies instituted to trim the cost of operation and other organization matters will be discussed by the speakers. Meeting breaks up around 6:30 p.m. so the guest and members can freshen up for the dinner at 8 p.m.

He has been advised that the agency will give him a release if he wants to continue with Lady Esther, which is eager for him to carry on. Break between agency and client occurred over some vague ideas of procedure harbored by the account. Under Lawrence's production aegis, the show has rated with the top Crossley programs.

COMMUNITY TAX SUIT BY TREASURY

Washington, Sept. 15.—Tax court decision upholding the Oklahoma community property law was appealed here today by the Internal Revenue Bureau. The court had refused to recognize a similar Oregon statute. Community property laws permit husband and wife to divide income of either for tax purposes. The Oregon law was enacted this year but has not been involved in litigation. Pending decision by Tenth Court of Appeals in the Oklahoma case and a ruling on the Oregon statute, the bureau said neither would be recognized.

Besides California, the following states have community property laws in effect, Arizona, Idaho, Louisiana, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas and Washington.

FIDLER'S BLACK BOOK JAMS BLUE NET WITH WB

work and forbid its contract players from appearing on that web.

It was a note from Fidler's 'little black book' that put his network behind the red ball. In 'an open letter to Congress,' he posed the question, 'shouldn't ex-actors now in uniform be sent to the battlefronts instead of being allowed to parade around Hollywood and New York because they appear in pictures and on the stage for Army Emergency Relief?' He further prattled that 'patriotism was being stretched' and if his suggestion was followed 'it would save a few fathers from the draft.'

ATTACK CALLED SEDITIOUS

Warners branded the attack by Fidler as 'seditious' and said it reflected on the Army and men in uniform. Furor created in Army circles by Fidler's remarks is said by Warners to have moved them to take summary action. Army morale was considerably undermined by the attack, it was stated by WB, and if Fidler's advice was followed it would result in Army Emergency Relief being denied such splendid aid as it has been getting from picture companies and notably from the receipts of 'This Is the Army,' which may reach the staggering total of $10,000,000.

WHAT FIDDLER SAID

Following is excerpt from the Fidler blast:

'Intimate notes from my little black book—open letter to Congress—Gentlemen:

'This week you men who represent the people convene in Washington. Your first problem will be the drafing or non-drafting of pre-war fathers. Now I know little about the manpower situation; therefore I shall venture no political opinion but I do call the attention of Congress to one thing that is beginning to annoy a lot of people. I refer to the stage plays and motion pictures that are being produced with members of the armed forces in their casts.

'Wouldn't it save a few fathers from draft if ex-actors now in uniform were sent to battlefronts instead of to New York and Hollywood? What was actually gained through Irving Berlin's admittedly fine play, "This Is The Army," which kept several hundred soldiers out of fighting for a year? Some people may reply that "This Is The Army" will earn millions of dollars for war relief and I must agree that sounds very patriotic, but isn't the patriotism being stretched a bit?

ONE POCKET TO OTHER

'While profits of that picture were donated to war relief wasn't it taking money out of Uncle Sam's right-hand pocket and putting it into his left? Certainly it was. For had Warner Bros. produced an ordinary film for the cost of "This Is The Army" and had this ordinary film earned several million dollars most of the profits would still have gone to Uncle Sam in taxes.

'I think that Congress should decide whether these plays and movies which keep hundreds of fighting men at home are vital to the war effort, but I will always believe that it is more important for daddies to stay home with their kiddies than for husky unattached ex-actors now in uniform to parade around Hollywood and New York.

'Yours for remembering that this is war, and not play,

Jimmie Fidler.'

Fidler has forced the Blue network to make previous apologies for his erratic reporting, the latest incident being the episode about Gene Tierney smoking cigars, for which he publicly apologized two weeks ago after the network had been declared out of bounds to 20th-Fox players for nine months.

off calendar was made by James Carper, Assistant U. S. Attorney. Judge Jenney remarked that the defendant had been in prison for two years, but said he could be brought here to stand trial on charges of defrauding the government of nearly $100,000 in income taxes.

Bioff, former personal representative of George E. Browne, when latter was prexy of the IATSE, was sentenced to ten years in prison in the U. S. District Court in New York on charges of extorting millions of dollars from the film industry. Browne drew a sentence of eight years. Most of the time since, however, Bioff has been held in the Federal Detention House in New York City, while being questioned by Federal authorities in connection with the motion picture shakedown.

Goldwyn has also budgeted to date 'Up In Arms' in Technicolor with Danny Kaye and Dinah Shore at over $2,000,000, and, during the confab, will probably advance reasons that it must also get top terms. Picture is reported from inside as being excellent entertainment as far as performance of Kaye and Miss Shore are concerned, but it is hardly likely that the RKO boys will countenance the idea of asking for any premium percentage from the houses that play it.

Those who have been meeting with Goldwyn from RKO are Ned Depinet, Charlie Koerner, Eddie Alperson, Harold Mirisch and Walter Branson, while Goldwyn's vice prexy James Mulvey and his sales advisor Bill Heinemann, are sitting on his side of the table.

Young performer who wed young bomber pilot after courtship of two weeks, is mother. He is missing in South Pacific. His wealthy parents arrive from the West and soldier husband who was rescued and flown home arrives just after baby is born. A quieter second act is devoted to the conflict between his parents and young wife over the care and training of the child. Before the young husband, who has been cited, leaves for the eastern front the young couple argue it out and agree that she will bring up the child not as pampered scion, but to be qualified to follow what is hoped will be the new life.

Betty Field, wife of the author, gives her performance as the young mother. It's very long part meticulously directed. Merle Maddern and Walter Greaza stand out too as insistant elders who lose out. George Lambert very good as young husband. Ann Thomas as another performer and Blane Corner also give fine performances. Settings and nurses add to hospital atmosphere of expert presentation.

CAVALCADE SPEEDS ON IN BOND DERBY

NT OKAYS ON BUY OF 5 MILLION

National Theatres Corp., and affiliated companies are purchasing $5,000,000 in bonds during the Third War Loan Drive. Large buy was recommended to NT board of directors several weeks ago by Charles P. Skouras, president, and subsequently given unanimous okay.

Purchase will be allocated among the six operating divisions of National Theatres, with Fox West Coast, largest division, accounting for biggest share. Five million dollar purchase is believed to be the biggest single war bond commitment among film exhibitors in the country, according to Skouras.

Theatre circuit is also playing large part in continuous sale of bonds, having 600 of its houses licensed as war bond issuing agents as well as promoting payroll savings plan among employes in theatres.

Growing bond sale total in local branches of film distributing companies was given a $50,000 jump yesterday when Tom Connors, 20th-Fox general manager, wired Los Angeles office of company okay to buy that amount in war bonds for credit against local sales. Bonds will be purchased today by Clyde Eckhardt, LA branch manager. In addition to $50,000 buy, 20th-Fox exchange employes are picking up an extra bond during September as well as continuing 10% of salary purchases.

Figures for first week of the Third War Loan Drive among Los Angeles exchanges were being compiled last night and total to be announced today is expected to exceed any sum reached in past campaigns. Harry Cohn, RKO branch manager, is chairman of Los Angeles distribution bond sales.

ANOTHER HIGH TOTAL HIT AT SHOW IN CINCY

Cincinnati, Sept. 15.—Stopping off here today, the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade registered another wallop in its triumphant nationwide bond-selling jaunt. Audience which jammed the 3,300-seat RKO Albee for stage show tonight purchased more than $13,000,000 worth of bonds, individual buys ranging from $25 to $100,000.

Final total accredited to Cavalcade here was $19,000,000. Directors of local drive credit screen celebs' visit as most valuable contribution to early and definite success in reaching goal.

To accommodate portion of multitude eager to ogle stars, Crosley's WLW-WSEI stations cooperated with Cincy War Savings Staff in arranging a special afternoon show in the University of Cincinnati's stadium which drew 25,000. It was a free gate. Crosley talent, including James Leonard, emcee; Phil Davis' 15-piece orchestra, Norman Ruebell and Three Cheers, warblers, supplied matinee entertainment.

James Cagney introduced troupe stars. Kay Kyser and his band inaugurated Lucky Strike Wednesday night program from University of Cincinnati auditorium before an all-military audience. Kyser developed foot trouble before arrival in Cincinnati and is Cavalcade's only casualty.

A few members of party are finding one-nighting difficult, and, like others, are having a tough time getting enough sleep.

Tonight Cavalcade show was put on early to free Kyser for broadcast.

The War Heroes Bond Airmadas, comprising groups of service heroes and film personalities, continue to add impressive records in sales to the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade's growing total, according to reports received yesterday.

The Zone 3 Airmada out of Chicago, headed by Albert Dekker, Elyse Knox, Helen Walker and Lon Chaney, Jr., has piled up a total of $34,379,325 in bond sales, it was reported by tour manager Gene O'Brien. Ft. Wayne subscriptions amounted to $2,375,325.

With Annabella, Shirley Patterson, Lynne Carver and Alan Marshall headlining, the Zone 4 troupe has brought in a total of $20,691,475, with four more cities to visit, it was reported by Bob Sunderland. Appearances at the Gibbs shipyards in Jacksonville and a premiere at the Florida Theatre netted $3,814,000.

'Rhine' Opens at Three Local WB Houses

'Watch On the Rhine' opened yesterday at Warners Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern theatres, following four-week run of 'This Is The Army' at triple day-daters. 'Rhine' was given a first-night premiere at the Hollywood house, with film names, representatives of exiled governments and others as guests.

Harry Joe Brown Kicks Off 'Knickerbocker Holiday'

Harry Joe Brown, handling double chores of producer and director, launched production on 'Knickerbocker Holiday' for Producers Corporation of America yesterday at Goldwyn studios. Cast includes Nelson Eddy, Constance Dowling and Charles Coburn. Phil Tannura has been borrowed from Columbia to handle photography.

'BACK SALERNO DAY' FRIDAY IN THEATRES BOND DRIVE

Backing Treasury Department War Finance Committee's designation of Friday as 'Back Salerno Day,' L. C. Griffith, general chairman of the film industry's participation in the Third War Loan Drive, yesterday wired all War Activities Committee state bond chairmen:

'I can think of no more just and right support to give American boys who are giving their lives before Salerno, than to set aside one day in which all Americans will be asked to back the specific attack in which they are involved. Many of these boys are from your own state. Here, certainly, is a job for all showmen.

'As this is written, the dangerous situation at Salerno is comparable to Chateau Thierry. It is easy to see what it would mean if our boys could be told that all America is behind them in the battle.

'There is no time for the national War Activities Committee to prepare posters, trailers and other accessories to aid the campaign. It is squarely up to the exhibitors to rush preparations to make this day one of the most important in the campaign. If possible, a brief ceremony beginning with prayer and ending with a request to 'Back The Attack—Buy Bonds to Push Back the Germans' should take place in every theatre in the land. There is barely enough time. Let's not waste a minute of it.'

Berle MC's New Show

New York, Sept. 15.—Milton Berle emcees new coast-to-coast weekly, 'Army Air Force Salutes,' which starts Friday night over Mutual. Show will be heard here at 7:30 p.m.

COL KICKS IN MILLION TO WAR CHEST

Columbia yesterday announced the purchase of $1,000,000 worth of War Bonds, sending the total sold throughout all branches of the industry during the first week of the Third Loan Drive beyond the $8,000,000 mark. Columbia, in addition, is engaged in an intensive campaign to encourage all its employes to purchase War Bonds on the payroll deduction plan.

Purchase of $500,000 by Samuel Goldwyn also was reported by the Motion Picture War Finance Committee. Other large individual purchases yesterday included $25,000 by Charles Winninger and $10,000 by Charles Rogers. Committee also reported $17,500 in bonds had been subscribed by Commander Eugene Zukor, former film executive now on naval duty.

From Washington, it was reported that a total exceeding $1,250,000 in War Bonds was in the bank as admission to the premiere of 'For Whom The Bell Tolls' at Loew's Palace last night. House was scaled from $10,000 to $25,000 in War bonds. Indications are total will be greatly increased by late purchases.

BLUE BACKS FIDLER IN WB TIFF

The Blue Network will take no disciplinary action against Jimmie Fidler nor will it back down in its support of the gossiper in his latest tangle with a major studio, it was indicated last night. Don Gilman, western division manager for the network said that while he might disagree with what Fidler has to say, he has a right to his own opinion and should be free to criticize whether it be the government or the army.

Paraphrasing Voltaire, Gilman said, 'I may disagree with what he

'WILSON' WILL BE DISCED BEFORE PIC IS SHOT

20th Century-Fox is going to make a radio transcription of the screen play 'Wilson' which Darryl Zanuck produces before putting the film into production. Bill Bacher, studio producer, who is one of top radio producers, will make the transcription, and use a 30 piece orchestra in rendering the musical accompaniments planned for the film.

Zanuck feels that he can get a line on how scenes play by the advance recording, and decide how he wants them played, shortened or lengthened. Both radio and motion picture technique will be utilized by Bacher in the recordings.

Studio plans putting the picture itself into work by Nov. 1. Just three definite castings have been made, Sir Cedric Hardwicke as 'Senator Lodge,' Vincent Price as 'W. G. McAdoo' and Thomas Mitchell as 'Joe Tumulty.'

BRIGHT LIGHTS OF 1944

New York, Sept. 16.—From intermission on, Alex H. Cohen's 'Bright Lights of 1944' which opened at the Forrest theatre tonight becomes an entertaining musical revue. What went before is better forgotten. In an attempt to work in a long array of talented performers topped by James Barton, Frances Williams, Smith and Dale, Buddy Clark, via a Norman Anthony-Charles Sherman book, entire first act is bogged down by dull, uninspired dialog. It's only when book is ditched and Barton, Miss Williams, et al, let go with their specialties that 'Life' hits a fast clicking, clinging, smooth groove.

TARZAN (Johnny Weissmuller) will come out of his tree and go west, if plans now afoot mature. Actor, who has been treebound during his entire screen career, will shortly don leather chaps instead of a breechcloth, and has started extensive course in plain and fancy riding and six-gun twirling to fit himself to the different celluloid character. Weissmuller, who just completed two weeks of added scenes for 'Tarzan's Desert Secret,' Sol Lesser production, owes the producer three more of the jungle adventure films, and would like to do them at the rate of one a year while also carrying on a career as western hero. Understood tentative deals for oaters series have already been advanced. Weissmuller is said to feel that since his box office is the youngster trade, he could easily click as a film cowpoke without having to give up the Tarzan stints.

The beard grows more important now upon the picture screen,
Not only in the western plays but in the music scene.
John Philip Sousa's marches still go ringing through the years,
And ah, the recollection of those whiskers 'round his ears.

Bill Bacher is assigned to immortalize the career of John Philip Sousa on the screen, which will be a soft job as far as the music is concerned, but his big job is to make today's youth beard conscious. Harry James gets away with a pencil-stripe mustache, which doesn't seem to interfere with his artistic or romantic appeal, but not even Harry could retain his public with a set of black hedge roaming effulgently from ear to ear. There was something dynamic about old John Philip, but he never expressed it in gymnastics as many band leaders do. Old John would enter quietly and make a few gentle passes with his baton and out would come a torrent of sound that made you feel like hopping out of your seat and marching down the avenue, hoisting your knees like a champion in a horse show. Old John's marches will always go stepping along, with or without whiskers.

PRC has a winner in this compactly-constructed picture which features Armida, the Mexican actress, and gives heavy duty to Edgar Kennedy. Production sends solid entertainment throughout its length, with dancing, songs, prize-fights and as nice a little story as the traffic demands. Armida is given a terrific sendoff in a highly acceptable role, and cast in general comes through with top performances.

Story unfoldment carries out in interesting manner the theme of a Mexican dancer, Armida, taking over the managership of her baby brother, Anthony Caruso, big hombre with a wallop like the kick of a mule. She brings him to the States, where he's a fighter in Edgar Kennedy's stable, and she guides him upward to contender for the lightweight championship of the world. Nigger in the woodpile is that little item of her being in love with the champ, Terry Frost, and the two men are warm friends, as well.

Tiger Fangs

(Melodrama)

Jack Schwarz prodution for PRC. Stars Frank Buck. Features June Duprez, Duncan Renaldo, Howard Banks, J. Farrell MacDonald. Supporting cast: Arno Frey, Dan Seymour, J. Alex Havier, Pedro Regas. Director, Sam Newfield. Associate producer, Fred McConnell. Original screenplay, Arthur St. Claire. Photography, Ira Morgan. Musical score, Lee Zahler. Art director, Paul Palmentola. Sets, Glenn T. Thompson. Editor, George M. Merrick. Previewed in Hollywood, Sept. 16, 1943. Running time: 59 MINS.

Wild animal film enthusiasts unquestionably will get a boot out of this Frank (Bring 'Em Back Alive) Buck starrer, providing they don't search too deeply for story-quality. There's sufficient action and suggestion of menace and action in the story—dated, it's true, but nevertheless effective as melodrama—to make it stand up on double bills, Buck himself proving a definite personality in a setting in which the public has come to acquaint him. Overlooking certain discrepancies and embarkatures into the melodramatic at times, 'Tiger Fangs' rates favorably for PRC's market.

Buck leaves this country on a somewhat mysterious mission for the Government to the Malay Peninsula, where in Penang he finds a situation which is causing a labor shortage on all the rubber plantations. A sudden wave of tiger attacks upon the natives has led to a panic among them. Buck suspects that a human agency in some way is back of all this terror, and he accurately places his finger upon it, the evil machinations of another wild animal hunter and a doctor, both Nazi agents.

A good deal of wild animal stock footage is inserted into the picture, excellently matched up with the film shot here. Tiger scenes are frequent, and there also is a black panther sequence which is suspenseful, as well as an elephant sequence.

Duncan Renaldo plays Buck's partner on the enterprise of helping out the plantation owners by relieving the natives' terror, contributing a good bit of acting. June Duprez makes a lovely heroine, other characterizations well played by J. Farrell MacDonald, Howard Banks and Arno Frey. J. Alex Havier turns in an effective native portrayal, that of Buck's boy.

The Man From the Rio Grande

(Western)

Republic release. Stars Don 'Red' Barry, with Wally Vernon and Twinkle Watts. Others in cast: Nancy Gay, Harry Cording, Kirk Alyn, Paul Scardon, Roy Barcroft, Wally Vernon, Kenne Duncan, Jack Kirk, Kansas Moehring. Director, Howard Bretherton. Associate producer, Eddy White. Original screenplay, Norman S. Hall. Photography, John McBernie. Film editor, Ralph Dixon. Reviewed at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, Sept. 16, 1943. Running time: 55 MINS.

'The Man From the Rio Grande' proves to be another of Don 'Red' Barry's action-packed westerns from the Republic corral. Use of ice-show footage from some of studio's frozen features adds production, scenes being used in connection with introduction of moppet Twinkle Watts, precocious young skater. Howard Bretherton has directed this Eddy White production with his usual steady hand to shape it for certain favor in the action market.

Norman S. Hall's plot involves attempted grab of a huge ranch empire by the estate executor through killing off of the heirs. Scope to the plot is the $500,000 being dangled by a railroad for a right-of-way across the range, the executor refusing to sell until he becomes sole owner of the property. Into this rides Barry, masquerading as a gunman but really one of the three heirs, supposedly already removed in a gunfight. He and his side kick, Wally Vernon ably lay the background for final roundup of the crook and his killers, injecting usual chases, traps and swift gunslinging. Barry has several tricks with a gun that add showiness for kid pleasure and Vernon's comedy is good.

Nancy Gay lends a pleasing personality to the femme lead as one of the ranch heirs. Twinkle Watts has a good ice-skating routine. Top villain is Harry Cording, with Paul Scardon and Roy Barcroft the slick henchmen. Kirk Alyn carries off the slight romance with Miss Gay as a cowtown editor and others of the cast measure up.

Excellent photography, taking full advantage of the outdoor scenery, is contributed by John McBernie.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

New York, Sept. 16.—The Allied offensive around the Salerno sector foreshadows energetic action against the Nazis in all Italian sectors with the possible strategy being a consolidation of all Allied lines along the Naples, Foggia, Bari fronts which constitutes the prerequisite for successful operations in the Balkans and thereby pushing the Nazi army into positions along the Alps, where it could cool its heels during the coming winter and where the climate closely resembles that of Russia. The Soviets today sent a warning note to Bulgaria to 'make peace with the Allies and cease hostile actions toward the Soviet Union.' The situation points strongly toward imminent Balkan actions, especially since Novorossisk's recapture opens the Black Sea flank.

JIMMY DURANTE yesterday got an opportunity he long has waited for—the chance to do a straight dramatic scene. He delivered it in text and in song for 'Two Sisters and a Sailor' at Metro, and scored such a hit with the scene that personnel on set paid him tribute of silence for a minute or two afterward. He enacted role of a broken old vaudevillian living his ancient glories again in a bare storage room—talking of the days when his name was up in lights.

Word spread yesterday on Universal's 'Third Glory' set, where Quiz Kid Joel Kupperman is working, that horse named Kupperman was running in seventh race at Aqueduct. COURT FIGHT THREATENED TO STOP ASCAP POINT PLAN go to court and ask for an injunction to forestall its operation. It was contended that the six-month survey made by the Society is inadequate and certain inequalities are rampant in the setup.

On direct questioning by L. Wolfe Gilbert, wirter-director, on the dispute phases of the new plan, Prexy Deems Taylor declared that if the plan is found to be unworkable and works a hardship on any individual or group of writers it will not be put into operation. Those opposed to the plan were satisfied that Taylor had put himself and the Society on record.

BALK ON NET SCORE

Chief objection to the new setup is that payments will be made on the basis of network performances of the writers' works. Many of the writers wanted to know why the playing of a number on a single station shouldn't be credited to the writer inasmuch as the Society collects fees from its licensee stations. Plea for old timers and standard writers brought promise of some adjustment of their grievances.

Fred Ahlert, who created the new point system, said after the meeting that the new system is not intended to be discriminatry against any group, 'be they old timers, standard writers, production or popular writers.' He went on to say that 'the point system has been devised to create a more equitable distribution of monies of the Society and the theory behind it is a matter of mathematics in this respect: it would take the 12 men who sit as a classification committee all their time to fine-comb the records of 1,570-odd members every quarter. Purpose of the new system is partially to take that tremendous burden away from the 12 classifiers.

"Our problem is to extend the survey to a point where the cost of surveying will not materially dilute the Society's income. Application of the six-month survey to the new system has been held up by report on the weighing of standard works which were turned in toward the end of August.'

BUCK ACCLAIMED

Turnout of 225 writer and publisher members sensed another bombshell when acclaim from the floor went up for Gene Buck, for 19 years president of the Society. Almost immediately after he got to his feet he launched into a tirade against Herman Starr, one of the publisher stalwarts of the Society. He said he had bided his time since last March when Starr, at the membership meeting here 'impugned his character.' He accused Starr of starting the radio fight that dropped Ascap's annual income from $7,500,000 to $4,000,000 and said it was Starr who 'cooked up the formula for a $9,000,000 pot.'

CAN DISH IT OUT

Buck pulled no punches in his excoriation of Starr and added, 'I've been on Broadway for 37 years and I can dish it out as well as take it.' Buck inferred that he had been singled out to take the rap and quoted Jerome Kern, who once characterized the Ascap board as '24 directors in search of a patsy.' Buck paid high tribute to Nathan Burkan as 'the smartest copyright lawyer that ever lived,' and Buddy Morris as 'one of the finest directors Ascap ever had.'

Buck said he was opposed to mechanization of the Society but withheld comment on the point system until 'we see what it does.' He said that if it hurts anyone it shouldn't be put into effect.

Rest of the meeting ran pretty much to form. Ahlert delivered the report of the executive and relief committees; John Paine, general manager, spoke about the management end, and Taylor read the president's and treasurer's reports. Following the meeting, which broke up after 7 p.m., the meeting adjourned to the dining room for repast and entertainment. Richard Powers, western division supervisor for Ascap, handled the arrangements and the double-decker session was run off without a hitch.

District Supervisors End Three-Day Sesh

Three-day business session of Ascap district supervisors was concluded yesterday with a general discussion of new policies and licensing in the symphony orchestra and concert field. Rate structure, problems arising from wartime shifts in population and travel conditions confronting the Society's field men were given a thorough going-over. Symphony and concert impresarios are enthusiastic over Ascap alignment, according to John Paine, general manager of Ascap, who with Herman Greenberg, counsel, presided over the meeting of supervisors. Attending the biz session were Richard Powers, western division supervisor; I. T. Cohen, Atlanta; Fred Erdman, New York; John Wooden, Chicago, and Samuel Roeder, western counsel for Ascap.

Ban on Drafting of Fathers Faces Veto If It's Passed

Washington, Sept. 16.—Chances of the Wheeler bill to defer fathers becoming law weakened today as Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley said he did not believe the President would sign such a bill. Even if the measure should pass both houses there is no indication that it would be a two-thirds vote, and that the President's veto would be sustained.

STANTON GRIFFIS REPORTED REFUSING MELLETT POST

Washington, Sept. 16.—A successor to Lowell Mellett as head of the OWI Motion Picture Bureau is reported all set here, with the announcement to be made in a day or two by Palmer Hoyt. It is understood he comes out of the ranks of the film industry and that he will retain Arch Mercey as his aide. Mercey, assistant to Mellett when the latter filled the post, has been carrying on as acting chief of the bureau.

Stanton Griffis was desired to fill the Mellett post, but turned down the job. It was reported last night that he had been opportuned by industry leaders to take over the assignment, as the only man who could fill the job satisfactorily. Griffith would not state whether he had changed his mind, but it was known that last-minute efforts were being made to persuade him to take over.

Camels Are Coming

Elephants will be missing from latest version of 'Kismet' being turned out by Metro, with studio execs okaying sole use of camels. Idea is that script will depict caravans coming in from the desert, and the behemoths would be out of line in such sequences. Result is roundup of camels around the country for the picture to replace the lost production values of the elephants.

Rubin Stretches Stay In Frisco Nitery From 4 to 9 Weeks

San Francisco, Sept. 16.—Benny Rubin, who came here for four weeks to emcee the floor show at Slapsy Maxie's, has stretched his stay to a ninth week as result of his draw ability for the nitery. Rubin has proved best bet the place has had since operating. Week after week since his opening the establishment has been breaking business records. Indications are that this show Rubin heads is good for at least three months, while shows preceding it never lasted more than two weeks.

Rubin has received numerous Hollywood offers while here, and is holding them in abeyance until conclusion of his engagement, when he goes south for the same management to work in its new Wilshire Bowl enterprise.

I have just purchased a very large ranch and have no further use for this beautiful home which I built 2½ years ago.

Visualize if you will please one of the most attractive rambling ranch houses nestled under sky reaching trees, together with almost every kind of fruit and citrus tree.

There is championship size tennis court, a very fine little guest cottage. The grounds are perfectly planted with rare specimens, together with being steel fenced and cross fenced.

I will try to describe this rambling early California ranch house by saying that it must be seen to be appreciated. However, I have a spacious entry hall, liv. rm., din. rm., den, 3 bed rms., 3 baths, and an unusual kitchen, and the patio, well, you wait till you see it.

'Crescendo' Staging Is Slowed For Rewrite

Senator O'Mahoney Praises Films Part in War

'The motion picture, in war time, is rendering invaluable service to the war effort,' said U. S. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, during a visit to RKO studios yesterday, as the guest of production chief Charles W. Koerner.

'The screen's contribution to the overall picture, both at home and abroad deserves every praise and our American films will play an even greater role in the post-war reconstruction overseas,' Senator O'Mahoney concluded.

Gibson, American Red Cross Commission to Great Britain, and War correspondents Bob Considine and Drew Middleton. The other webs also will go in heavy for the bond sales with special Sunday stuff.

Film Previews

Flesh and Fantasy

es,' inter-related stories of the 'supernatural,' woven in with passionate love incidents, are told in three separate episodes, tied together through device of a couple of clubmen narrators who discuss and analyze their own dreams while reading the stories of Oscar Wilde, Laslo Vanday and Ellis St. Joseph. The fine screen craftsmanship by Ernest Pascal, Samuel Hoffenstein and Ellis St. Joseph does them full justice.

The first episode, excellently portrayed by Betty Field, Robert Cummings and Edgar Barrier, tells the psychological 'miracle' of an ugly, bitter woman who becomes beautiful under disguise of a Mardi Gras mask and the love of a stranger.

In the second episode, Edward G. Robinson is mentally conditioned to commit a murder because of a prediction made by a fortune-teller, Thomas Mitchell, and relationships involving C. Aubrey Smith, a clergyman, Anna Lee, who expects to marry Robinson, and Dame May Whitty, whom he has attempted to poison. The palm-reader has sealed his own death by telling the man's 'fortune.' Here, too, the performances are exceptionally good.

Charles Boyer, as a circus tightrope artist, and Barbara Stanwyck, as a mysterious crook refugee, together with Charles Winninger, circus manager, deliver the powerfully dramatic and exciting third episode, based on Boyer's reaction to a foreboding dream by which he loses his nerve for the dangerous wire act, and another which foretells the arrest of the woman, after they have fatefully fallen in love.

Robert Benchley and David Hoffman are the clubmen who discuss and debate the credibility of dreams, and do it with a light and bantering note which adds its own definite entertainment element to the more tensely dramatic and romantic intervals.

The Boyer-Duvivier bracket is a happy production combination. Duvivier directs with fine discrimination for all the dramatic shadings along the narrow edge between the palpable 'flesh' and the intangible 'fantasy' which gives this picture its character and charm. Suspense is held remarkably. The characters behave suitably. The mystic matters are kept on just the right note, keyed to entertainment, rather than attempted pseudo-science. Boyer's dramatic sense and showmanly understanding is evident throughout in the production guidance, as well as in his fine performance.

Paul Ivano and Stanley Cortez earn an outstanding credit for their camera work, as does Alexandre Tansman for his appropriate musical score. Other technical contributions are of similar top calibre to round out a choice piece of mass entertainment.

The Girl From Monterrey

champ is well worked out, screenplay by Arthur Hoerl never becoming too hokey for solution of who should win the big fight. Hoerl's script throughout lends credence at all times to the story, and Wallace Fox maintains a pace which never permits interest to lag. On the production end, Jack Schwarz and his associate, Harry D. Edwards, have endowed picture with values which engage, and Marcel Le Picard's photography is at all times effective. Frank Sylos' art direction, too, comes in for a word of commendation.

Armida is fetchingly attractive and turns in a piece of acting which calls for a repeat performance. Caruso, as her brother, and Frost, as the champ with whom she's in love, both acquit themselves excellently, and Edgar Kennedy is himself in top form. Obviously cast for name value, he makes his role count. Jack La Rue and Veda Ann Borg score in well-cast parts, too.

Mexican actress sings trio of songs by Louis Herscher—'Jive, Brother, Jive,' 'Last Night's All Over' and 'Girl from Monterrey'—and does a good job in warbling them. Picture is first of three in which Armida will be top-billed.

CAVALCADE GARNERS $291,000,000

$1,250,000 PURCHASE BY 20TH

A War Bond purchase of $1,250,000 by 20-Fox yesterday sent the second week of the Motion Picture War Finance Committee's campaign for the Third War Loan Drive off to a booming start.

Purchase, it was announced by Joseph M. Schenck, is over and above the $3,750,000 worth of bonds purchased by the 20th-Fox Corp. and is in addition to individual subscriptions by executives, stars, directors, writers and other employes in the studio.

Yesterday's reports also included purchases of $85,000 by Leo Spitz, $50,000 by Charles Chaplin, $50,000 by David Loew, $30,000 by the Motion Picture Relief Fund and $25,000 by J. E. Brulatour Co.

The amazing response to the current drive by local film corporations and employes in all studios, allied industries, unions and guilds, and offices of agents, business managers and independent publicists gives indications that a new record will be hung up by the War Finance Committee. Indicative of the response by film workers to the drive is the announcement that every one of the 15 members of the hairdressing department of Columbia had subscribed for bonds within an hour after the campaign opened.

700,000 WATCH PARADE OF STARS IN CHI LOOP

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Despite one of the coolest nights of the year, approximately 130,000 people jammed Soldiers Field tonight to witness the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade. While actual figures were not available the Treasury Department estimated the attendance represented the purchase of close to 250 million dollars in bonds, which exceeds any stand played by the Cavalcade so far.

One hundred and thirty boxes were sold at a million dollars each.

Previously, at Marshall Fields, $41,000,000 was subscribed, with Greer Garson receiving two $1,000,000 checks.

Earlier 700,000 persons lined both sides of State Street for blocks to glimpse stars who paraded Loop in jeeps and Army cars, as enough open cars could not be rounded up for the contingent. So that none of the stars would be accorded 'top billing,' they rode in alphabetical order from Astaire to Rooney.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly officially welcomed stars personally and greeted them from the reviewing stand set up at Randolph and State streets as they were introduced to the crowds by Vincent Gootschalk. Betty Hutton planted a kiss on the mayor's cheek when she was introduced and caused merriment among the crowd as the mayor wiped the lipstick from his face.

Playing their eleventh consecutive one-night stand without a break in St. Louis Saturday night, the Bond Cavalcaders are slated for a well earned rest over Sunday, before resuming their gruelling itinerary in New Orleans Monday.

With Washington, Philadelphia, Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati and Chicago behind them, the volunteer Third War Loan bond-stormers will appear in Minneapolis tomorrow night. Swinging back across the country from New Orleans they are booked for Dallas and Ft. Worth, San Antonio and San Francisco before returning to Los Angeles next weekend.

James Cagney, originally slated to travel with the Cavalcade for only part of the tour, will remain in the cast throughout the trip,

First act's pointless book, aimed at ringing in topical Broadway flavor transfers to the Forrest's stage replica of a Sardi nook. It is given additional authentic note with Renee Carroll, the 44th Street hat check girl, playing herself.

Miss Williams, handcuffed by poor material, gives it her best. Her trio act with Jayne Manners and Billie Worth in the Norman Zeno-Al Schofield tune, 'A Lick, A Riff and a Slow Bounce,' is socko. Clark registers in duo with Miss Williams burlesqueing one of show's top tunes, 'Your Face Is Your Fortune,' although he, too, falls flat in first half in straight singing role.

Surprise click of show are Jere McMahon and Billie Worth in song and dance specialties, latter's charm and former's unusual terping spotting them as comers. The Jerry Livingston-Mack David score is highlighted by 'Your Fase Is Your Fortune' and 'You'd Better Dance.'

Had 'Lights' stuck to its intimate revue stance without injecting pointless book its chances would have been considerably enhanced.

OTHELLO

Boston, Sept. 16. — Margaret Webster's production of 'Othello' starring Paul Robeson, opened to an ovation at the Shubert Theatre here tonight. A stellar cast gave outstanding vitality to the Shakespearean tragedy.

Sparked by a beautifully designed and lighted background, this particular version should rate as one of the better presentations of the romance of the Moor. One nicely balanced performance followed another in the supporting group, and over it all Robeson towered physically and vocally, with his booming voice lending stature to his role.

Jose Ferrer's Iago was close to perfection; Uta Hagen was impressive as Desdemona; James Monks made a fine Cassio; part of Emeilia, originally announced for Miss Webster, was played in sterling fashion by Edith King. Averill Harris and Jack Manning registered in lesser roles. Staging was grade A, scenery and lighting credited to Robert Edmond Jones.

139 MILLION SALES BY AIRMADA

New York, Sept. 16. — L. C. Griffith, general chairman of the film industry's Third War Loan campaign, revealed today that the Airmada, conceived by the War Activities Committee, has sold $139,000,000 in War Bonds to date. It is likely that the sales by this means will top $200,000,000.

Bond sales in theatres, meantime, also have been hypoed by the current drive. Griffith cited RKO theatres figures where weekly sales of $350,000 in the first week of the bond drive jumped to $1,006,000.

Ford Motor Co. employes pledged $16,000,000 in War Bond purchases following the appearance of the Airmada there. Sale credited by Treasury officials to impetus from show business.

Advance sales of the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade in Dallas are over $40,000,000: Ft. Worth has been added to the Cavalcade itinerary for a performance at Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum.

EXTRAS GET $10,000 IN OVERTIME

AGREEMENT MADE OUT OF COURT

Screen Actors Guild announced last night that $10,000 will be distributed among 1,300 film extras as settlement of suits filed against producers on behalf of overtime pay due under provisions of the Wage-Hour Law. Coin will be passed out on basis of records submitted by players before action was instituted.

In announcing settlement of Federal Court suit, SAG said:

Screen Actors Guild has obtained from the major motion picture producers a payment of $10,000 as complete settlement of the suits it had filed, on behalf of some 1,300 Class B members, for overtime pay due under the provisions of the Wages and Hours Act.

'As a result of the out-of-court settlement, the cases have been dismissed from the Federal District Court, where they have been pending since Oct., 1941. Out-of-court payment was accepted by the Guild as the most equitable means of settling the claim when it was discovered that hundreds of individual claims were insufficiently substantiated by written records to justify court trial of the suits.

'Full amount of the settlement has been turned over to the firm of Thomas and Moore, Guild accountants, who have also been assigned such records as were furnished to the Guild by the claimants. On the basis of these records, the firm will distribute the sum among those claimants whose work records are sufficiently definite to justify their claims.

'Preliminary review by the accountants of the data furnished the Guild by the members involved indicates that a number of Class B members who filed claims but who have been unable to produce any written data to support their claims will not be eligible for an allocation of the settlement sum.'

BLUE NET BACKS FIDLER IN DISPUTE WITH WB

says but I'll defend his right to say it.' He declared that it is not the intent of the Blue network to choke its commentators.

Gilman said he had received a letter from S. Charles Einfeld, director of publicity and advertising for Warners asking for time on the network to refute the Fidler attack but that he had received no other communication from the studio. Request for time would be taken up with the New York office, he said.

Other letter referred to was from the studio demanding apologies both from Fidler and the network. Until such amends are made, Warner contractees are forbidden from appearing on the Blue network, similar to the recent dictum by 20th-Fox, which obtained for nine months until Fidler bowed and scraped in abject apology.

THAT BLACK BOOK

Latest of the series of Fidler cracks, which jammed up the network and forced several apologies, had to do with his 'black book' editorial on last Sunday's broadcast in which he took to task ex-actors now in the service whom he said should be up front fighting instead of parading around New York and Hollywood. He had particular reference to servicemen in the Irving Berlin stage play and the Warner's picture, 'This Is the Army.'

Following letters were sent to Gilman by Warners and Einfeld:

'In connection with Mr. Fidler's unjustified and derogatory attack on the motion picture, "This Is The Army," made over your network Sunday, Sept. 12, 1943, and the implication he conveys against the motion picture industry and this company in the production of such picture, and in no way affecting the contents of the letter directed to you Sept. 14, 1943, by our Mr. Charles Einfeld, we desire to advise you as follows:

APOLOGIES ASKED

'We further feel that unless suitable apology or retraction is given promptly by Mr. Fidler, and, as well, by your network, to the Army Emergency Relief Fund, to those members of the United States Army who appeared in the aforesaid motion picture, and to the undersigned company, we cannot be expected to extend the slightest cooperation to Mr. Fidler or to your network over which he broadcasts, and we will have to prohibit any use by you of any property, right, talent or facility belonging to us or within our control while such condition exists.'

'On Sept. 12 Mr. James Fidler made certain statements about Irving Berlin's "This Is The Army." Because of the controversial nature of his remarks, we now request time to answer Mr. Fidler on your network at an hour equally as good as that given Mr. Fidler.

'Sincerely,
'S. Charles Einfeld,
'Director of Advertising and Publicity.'

It was reported yesterday that officers of Army Emergency Relief were preparing to take appropriate action against Fidler. Officials of American Legion posts and other veteran organizations also are said to have filed protests with the Blue Network, demanding that a retraction be made of Fidler's attack on servicemen. AER officials declared that if the Blue Network agrees to Warners' request for time to refute the Fidler remarks, which were branded as 'unpatriotic and seditious,' they would make available for the program many of the 1,027 beneficiaries of AER through the Los Angeles office, including the widows of soldiers and sailors who have died on the battlefront.

Washington, Sept. 19.—A bill to abolish the Office of War Information and switch its function to the State Department has been introduced here by Rep. William B. Barry, New York Democrat. Bill probably will not get anywhere.

Meanwhile, OWI getting ready for its periodic going over on Capitol Hill, has streamlined and changed its overseas branch to eliminate the old regional setup. There is no indication that this will affect in any way the shipment and use of American films abroad under OWI handling.

WAR DEPT. NIXES NEWS POLL D'XERS

Washington, Sept. 19.—Attempts of radio news correspondents on the Italian war front to establish a 'radio pool' have been scotched here by the War Department. Dispatches clearing through the OWI Foreign Service Bureau, the past week, were labeled 'Radio Pool,' and addressed to the networks. Queries to New York disclosed there was no authority for this from the webs.

Idea apparently originated in the field where the radio correspondents in Italy were outnumbered 20 to three by the newspaper men. Stories of the newspaper men have been pooled for both press and radio service.

SOLDIERS down in India have been getting a great laugh out of advertisements in newspapers there for an elixir of life to keep you young 'Up to a full 100 years,' inserted by 'The Hollywood Goldwyn & Delexo Laboratories.' The advertising says that they have a scientifc invention in a 'Vitamin Tonic,' that makes a man or woman look and feel 15 to 20 years younger. It says: 'The Actors and Actresses of Hollywood are active young looking, and charming by the use of this medicine even at an advanced age of 80 and 90 years and they are enthusiastically working on the stages.' So confident are they of the power of the medicine that they offer a substantial reward to anyone who proves the inefficiency 'of this wonderful invention.'

LABORATORY Technicians at Warners are puzzled over failure of studio to pay for Labor Day holiday. They say it is first time in 15 years company has failed to pay them for holiday, and are still trying to figure out whether it was an oversight or adoption of new policy by studio. It is perhaps the only studio that for years paid boys in Laboratory on holidays, although contract did not require it.

NO word has reached newsreel circles here about when the first Italian invasion films may arrive. Reelers have been waiting a week for the shots and expect them at any time.

'I DIDN'T MEAN YOU' SOP TOSSED TO WB BY FIDLER

Tossing a sop at Warners by cringing, 'I didn't mean you,' Jimmie Fidler on his last night's broadcast over the Blue network tried to crawl back into the good graces of the Burbank bosses by hedging on his editorial of the previous Sunday. It is doubtful that the Warners will accept it as the apology demanded to restore cooperation of the studio to the network.

Fidler prefaced his remarks by asking his listeners to pay close heed to the editorial he was about to read. He said his 'black book' entry of the previous week, which kicked up a storm of protests all over the country and in army circles, was based on a growing tide of resentment through mail reaching him. That his attack on actors in the service, whom he censured for parading along Broadway and Hollywood instead of being up at the battle front, involved only a few thousand, he said he knew. He pointed at the case of Jackie Coogan, who, he said, had been given intensive military training only to be put in a Broadway show for Army Relief. He added that it was for Congress to vote funds for wounded and sick Yanks, dropping the inference that the country could very well get along without Army Emergency Relief.

Then came his pitch to soothe Warners, who have called off all cooperation to the Blue network and ruled the chain out-of-bounds to studio contractees. His remarks, he hedged, were not intended for Warners or Irving Berlin. They indeed, he had to admit, turned out a good picture in 'This Is The Army' but avoided mentioning that some $10,000,000 will go to Army Emergency Relief from the proceeds of the film to aid families of servicemen. He offered the suggestion that 4F's be put in benefit plays and pictures so able bodied actors can be released for actual combat.

Warners not only broke off all relations with the network over which Fidler broadcast and has gotten into numerous jams before but ordered negotiations frozen on a new program featuring WB players which was to be sponsored on the web. Show is 'Luncheon In The Green Room,' a take-off on 'Breakfast at Sardi's,' which was about to be bought by a National advertiser. Studio announced it would also cancel three prospective deals with clients of the N. W. Ayer agency.

Repercussions of the Fidler blast have spanned the country and from Washington it is reported that James Lawrence Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, had asked for a copy of the script to decide whether some punitive action should be taken. Major Gen. Irving Phillipson, head of Army Emergency Relief, is understood to have made representations to both the Blue network and Fidler's underwriter, Arrid, underarm Deodorant.

Curious anomaly of the Fidler-Warners contratemps was the daily transcribed plugging by Fidler of his broadcast over the Warners station KFWB, placed by the agency for the sponsor. It carried a live hitchhike calling attention to the gabbers Sunday time and station.

The Man From Music Mountain

(Western With Songs)

Republic release. Stars Roy Rogers, with Pat Brady, Ruth Terry, Paul Kelly, Ellsworth Blake, Ann Gillis, Renie Riano, George Cleveland, Paul Harvey, Hal Taliaferro, Jay Novello, Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers. Director, Joseph Kane. Associate prducer, Harry Grey. Screen play, Bradford Ropes, J. Benton Cheney. Photography, Bill Bradford. Film editor, Tony Martinelli. Assistant director, Art Siteman. Music director, Morton Scott. Songs, Tim Spencer, Bob Nolan, Smiley Burnette. Previewed at RCA projection room, Hollywood, Sept. 17, 1943. Running time: 71 MINS.

'The Man From Music Mountain' is solid outdoor fare in the best Roy Rogers manner, presenting the Republic star in songs and action to further broaden the market for his pictures. Well-written screen play lays its background in the mountains of the west to stage story of feud between cattlemen and sheepers, and cast performances under Joe Kane's skillful direction interestingly project the tale. Expert production hand of Harry Grey is noticeable in the mounting, spotting of the western music and other values that gear the picture well above usual western rating. Scenic splendors of the Mammoth Lake country, where picture was filmed, are a distinct contribution to the production values as photographed by William Bradford.

Script by Bradford Ropes and J. Benton Cheney brings Rogers, bigshot western radio singer, back to his home range on vacation. Rogers spots trouble when Ruth Terry, sheep ranch owner, gets into difficulty with catlemen over grazing lands. Rogers turns detective to find source of trouble, discovers Paul Kelly, head of the Cattlemen's Association, is promoting feud in order to gain all government grazing permits himself. Plenty of action is staged against the eye-catching backdrop of mountains as the villain and his henchmen finally fall before the headwork and gunwork of Rogers and his aides.

Rogers' screen ease and vocal ability is pleasant to see and hear as he romps through the top assignment. Ruth Terry gives pertness to the femme side of the cast. Ann Gillis, as her kid sister smitten with Rogers, sparks a good role. Comedy falls to Pat Brady, as Roger's sidekick, and Renie Riano, majordomo of the Terry-Gillis household. Both count for laughs. Paul Kelly's dirty work is slickly done. George Cleveland, the sheriff; Jay Novello, aide to Kelly, and others of the cast are good. Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers deliver melodic prairie ballads with distinction.

LEGIT OPENING

ONE TOUCH OF VENUS

Boston, Sept. 19.—Despite a notable cast and list of authors and producers and notably individual style, Cheryl Crawford's 'One Touch of Venus' caught a mixed response at its Shubert opening. Handsome but not extravagant, overly booky musical was wanting chiefly in humor and tunes, and this although Ogden Nash, S. J. Perelman and Kurt Weill are heavy devisors thereof. Additional jokes might turn the trick, but book needs drastic overhaul in any case.

Drawn from mythology, story tells of romantic barber, Kenny Baker, who impulsively places ring on finger of priceless statue of Venus, Mary Martin, imported by wealthy art dealer, John Boles. The statue comes to life and falls in love with the barber, magically disposes of barber's fiance and involves the barber and dealer with the police. Dream twist follows, but cute situation develops in end. Dialog is just not funny, although occasionally blue. Best number develops from barber shop quartet: other specialties are so so. Romantic tunes, 'Speak Low' and 'That's Him' may be sleepers, but that again is doubtful. Biggest hit was made by Agnes DeMilles' two ballets, which are exquisite. Nash lyrics coming next. The trio of principals were excellent. Martin, Boles and Baker needing only punchier material to wow.

Others in the cast are: Paula Laurence, Teddy Hart, Adelaide Klein, Ruth Bond, Harold J. Stone, Stanley Prager and Florence Dunlap. Staging by Elia Kazan, scenery by Howard Bey and the costuming by Paul du Pont and Kermit Love.

Even as it is the offering clicked nicely with Martin registering biggest hand in 'That's Him.' Clumsy on stage, the story seems especially suited to film medium.

Disney Finishing CIAA Short, 'Performance'

First purely entertainment subject for the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs by Walt Disney, 'Command Performance,' now is being completed for distribution in American hemisphere. Performers are Carmen Miranda, Mopy Cortes, Tito Guizar and Armita. It is a two-reel musical to go out on the 16mm. circuit.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

New York, Sept. 19.—Operations on the Italian mainland are proceeding favorably, but much speculation is centering around the Yugoslav guerrilla fighters who are occupying important bases on the Adriatic coast virtually opposite the eastern end of the Allies' Italian front. Well informed circles still insist that operations in the Balkans are imminent. Soviet advances continue to threaten the entire Nazi front, with Kiev and Dnieperopetrovsk as their next objectives. Their recapture before the impending tripartite conference would immeasurably strengthen the Soviet's position in the bargaining for a European solution.

Washington, Sept. 19. — Unless there are unusual circumstances surrounding the proposed take-over by Loews of the Walter Reade theatre circuit covering New Jersey and New York; Loews will have to slug it out with the Department of Justice, it is indicated here.

Up to this point, no request has reached the DJ from Loews for permission to acquire the 44 Reade houses. CHI FILM CLEARANCE ATTACKED SCHOENSTADT CHAIN SUES

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Another effort to break the present Chicago film clearance system was made Friday when suit was filed in the Federal District Court by H. Schoenstadt & Sons, Inc., operators of the Piccadilly theatre and chain of other houses in this area; with charging a restraint of trade monopoly, and naming 11 theatre and film companies.

Action charges that the defendants reserve 'second run' privileges —or the showing of films from four to six weeks following downtown runs—for neighborhood houses controlled by them. Injunction is sought to halt alleged monopoly.

Defendants include: Balaban & Katz Corp.; Federal Theatres Co.; Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corp.; Paramount Pictures; Vitagraph, Inc.; Loew's, Inc.; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp.; RKO Pictures, Inc.; Columbia Pictures Corp.; Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; and United Artists Corp.

Crosby Still Tops Over Sinatra And Haymes

Washington, Sept. 19. — Bing Crosby rates as top crooner in these parts with Frank Sinatra second and Dick Haymes third according to an informal telephone poll made by station WRC, National Broadcasting System outlet here. Station launched a new three hour program largely featuring recordings and invited telephone calls several times during the broadcast.

Calls ran into the hundreds with individual callers casting ballots. In some instances ballots called in were for 5,000 soldiers of an Army camp. Final tabulation showed Crosby getting 53,000 votes. Sinatra drew down 30,000 for the place spot and Haymes showed with approximately 7,800.

In the latter part of the program callers were asked 'How about Perry Como?' But no votes were rung up for him. General male vote went to Crosby. Gals went for Sinatra. Through an air freak, the airer was heard at Fort Benning, Georgia, and a long distance call from there added three thousand votes for Bing Crosby.

FORUM

North African Theatre of Operations, Sept. 6, 1943.

Mr. Arthur Ungar, Editor DAILY VARIETY,
1708 N. Vine,
Hollywood, Calif., U.S.A.

Dear Arthur:

Got my first copy of Variety yesterday, date of Aug. 9. Believe me, it's a Godsend. We have a flock of fellows in this section who were connected with the motion picture industry in one way or another in civilian life, and I've had to put a 'buck slip' on it to make the rounds so all can have a crack at it and pass it on.

I'm not the guy to do it officially, but someone should thank the industry for the 16mm. entertainment film we get. I run the exchange for North Africa, and supervise five sub exchanges. We work not a bit differently than any U. S. exchange. Have our own booking book system, 'cut-off sheets,' and even occasionally have to use 'stop' pictures. The first sergeants get downright choosey about what they'd like their units to see. Left to them, they'd book nothing but musicals, although they'll settle for an occasional comedy.

It would do any producer, director, player, etc., good to see the manner in which the pictures are received. Some of the spots where they're shown are in the most remote sections imaginable. May consist of a unit almost continuously on the alert, 100 miles from any town (even Arab), and not a damned thing to do evenings except see a movie. They're under continuous blackouts, although films can be shown with certain caution. The men will sit through a rainstorm on rocks, tops of trucks, or just lie on the ground. If they have two films on hand they'll yell until the officer in charge permits them to see both the same night. And they'll sit there until 2 in the morning if necessary.

If there's some part they particularly like, they'll squawk to have that portion run over again. Certain old musicals that were ready for salvage, like 'I Married An Angel' and 'Alexander's Ragtime Band' were taken by us and reduced to the musical numbers. And although the units saw the original, they'll request the musical reels over and over again. We also made up a reel of old band shorts, none less than two years old, and it's never on the shelf more than a half hour before being inspected and rewound.

The OMPS (Overseas Motion Picture Service) wisely does not request from the industry any pictures of a heavy nature, nor of staged battles. For instance, I saw 'So Proudly We Hail' and 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' in N. Y. They're both excellent pictures. But I'd bet a month's pay that if shown to combat troops, they'd walk out in droves. After surveys we withdrew from circulation such excellent films as 'Mrs. Miniver' and 'Shadow of a Doubt.' An Air Corps commander says that if he can get his crews to a movie immediately after a heavy mission, they are relaxed within an hour—if it's not a picture of the above type.

$500,000 Bond Sale To Universal 11th Big Film Buy

Purchase of $500,000 in War Bonds by Universal Studio, reported yesterday by the Motion Picture War Finance Committee, was the eleventh big purchase of securities by film corporations and allied industries since opening of the Third War Loan Drive. Previous investments, ranging from $25,000 to $2,000,000, have been reported by Warners, Metro, 20th-Fox, Paramount, Columbia, Republic, Technicolor, Monogram, Motion Picture Relief Fund and J. E. Brulator Co.

'While these big purchases help assure our committee of a record bond month, the response being made by individual buyers in every branch of our local industry must be considered one of the gratifying highlights of the campaign,' said Chairman Henry Ginsberg. 'Men and women in every salary level at studios, allied industries, unions, guilds and offices of agents, business managers and independent publicists are flooding bond offices with subscriptions from $18.75 upwards. This shows that the drive truly is an all-out participation.'

With daily reports being made by the 500 volunteer bond sales, individual purchases Saturday included $50,000 by E. J. Mannix, $50,000 by B. G. DeSylvia and $25,000 by Pat Casey.

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY RANCH
FOR SALE BY OWNER

I have just purchased a very large ranch and have no further use for this beautiful home which I built 2½ years ago.

Visualize if you will please one of the most attractive rambling ranch houses nestled under sky reaching trees, together with almost every kind of fruit and citrus tree.

There is championship size tennis court, a very fine little guest cottage. The grounds are perfectly planted with rare specimens, together with being steel fenced and cross fenced.

I will try to describe this rambling early California ranch house by saying that it must be seen to be appreciated. However, I have a spacious entry hall, liv. rm., din. rm., den, 3 bed rms., 3 baths, and an unusual kitchen, and the patio, well, you wait till you see it.

We will be home all day Sunday, and week days by telephone appointment.

'GREATEST SHOW EVER', MINNEAPOLIS VERDICT

Minneapolis, Sept. 19.—Playing to 9,000 persons, practically capacity, the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade netted $19,512,000 in bond sales, just short of double the show's local $10,000,000 quota, at the Auditorium here Friday night. This brought the total for the tour up to that time to $939,500,000 for nine nights in that number of cities. Six stands still remained to be played.

The house here was scaled from $50 up. Choicest 800 seats went to purchasers of $10,000 and more bonds. Other lower floor seats and some balcony sections called for $2,000 and $1,000 bond purchases.

Unanimous verdict was that it was 'a wonderful show.' Every number was a show stopper. All stars and Kay Kyser and his band received terrific ovations, the audience enthusiasm setting a new all-time high locally.

Critics said the impossible apparently had been achieved in packing as much, if not more, entertainment into the offering than had been provided last year by the Bond Cavalcade. It was acclaimed the greatest show seen here up to that time and also was a complete sellout. 'There'll never be another stage band show to equal this,' declared reviewers. 'It represents a record amount of talent assembled for a single unit.'

Cheering thousands welcomed the Cavalcade on its arrival and jammed the streets in front of hotels housing the picture stars. Soldiers and police 'protected' the stars. Troupe arrived from Chicago at noon and went to the city's two leading hotels, the Necollet and Radisson. Newspapers commented on the stars graciousness in giving time and interviews to the press and posing for photographs. Mickey Rooney, Betty Hutton and some others spent part of the afternoon attending 'Behind the Rising Sun,' at the Orpheum. Following performance, which ran from 8:30 to 11 p.m. without intermission, company immediately entrained for St. Louis.

CARAVAN GETS RIOTOUS WELCOME IN ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, Sept. 19.—The Hollywood Bond Cavalcade drew an SRO crowd of 10,000 to the Henry W. Kiel Auditorium Saturday, after a colorful parade through the downtown district in which all branches of the armed services participated. Admish to the huge convention hall was through the purchase of bonds and ducats were distributed on a first-buy policy. No total estimate can be made of the bonds sold for the shindig, although it was reported more than $30,000,000.

Eight screen stars rode in jeeps and bouquets of posies for the femmees were tossed to the spectators who jammed the streets. The males each wore a carnation presented by the local committee. Crowds rushed the stars, making it difficult for them to reach the parade line of march.

Doris Merrick, a native and a member of the Bombardiers, departed from the flower tossing stunt by kissing a bunch of soldiers who sought autographs. A number of autograph hounds were chased out of the Hotel Jefferson and one school gal was found hidden beneath Fred Astaire's bed in the same hotel.

The appearance of the screen stars accelerated bond sales which here have reached $71,127,414 or 39% of the $180,676,000 goal.

Kay Kyser, who mc'd the show, chided spectators when he asked them why they were not in a happy frame of mind now that the Cardinals had copped another National League pennant on the day the Cavalcade hit this burg. Every effort of the visitors, particularly Harry Babbit, native and featured warbler with Kyser's band, scored solidly. Speeches were cut to the bone. The troupe departed for New Orleans early Sunday.

Fire Halts 'Laughtime' Mat At Shubert, NY

New York, Sept. 19.—Fire in small storeroom of Shubert building here this afternoon caused dismissal of 1,100 patrons from Shubert theatre at matinee of 'Laugh Time,' two-a-day vaudes. Frank Fay adlibbed 20 minutes, 10 of them after smoke and water filtered into the orchestra pit. On order of fire department Fay reappeared and said: 'class dismissed.' Audience filed out in orderly fashion.

fore a capacity crowd of 25,000 at Municipal Stadium. In event of unfavorable weather, two indoor appearances will be substituted.

Arriving in New Orleans at 5:15 p. m. today, the stars met the press and attended an honor citation reception for New Orleans citizens making outstanding achievements in the Third War Loan Drive. Then, for the first time since their special train pulled out of Los Angeles for Washington Sept. 4, the Calvacaders were on their own, with prospect of a night not spent on a moving train.

In St. Louis unexpected crowds at the railway station got out of control and the Calvacade stars, rushed from their special train to waiting Army jeeps, were unable to get into the line of march until additional troops were called. At Convention Hall of Kiel Auditorium, 14,000 bond-buying customers jammed in for the Calvacade show, investing $32,942,000. This brought the Calvacade total for 10 cities to $971,000,000 from the Calvacade show, not counting sales resulting from political rallies and industrial plant appearances.

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, Sept. 19.—Well, Congress is back, but it may be some little time yet before show biz has to start worrying about brickbats. Until the father draft issue is settled, the statesmen are not going to have time for much else. After that, however—it may be a very different story.

The leaders say there is little real business before this session which will likely sit through until Christmas without a recess. And with all that idle time on their hands, there can be plenty of mischief.

Ways and Means Committee consideration of the tax bill will mark time for a couple of weeks yet, until the war bond drive is out of the way. Nobody wants to frighten prospective bond purchasers with talk of higher admissions taxes, forced savings and, perhaps, a sales tax.

Cox Committee interim report and bills to weaken the FCC are probably also a fortnight off. The bills will be tough ones and will be vitally interesting to the radio industry. Administration leaders don't believe they will go too far. Mr. Big does not approve of too much manipulating with the FCC.

It should be a month before the legislators start sounding off on the Big Five Consent Decree. And even OWI, scheduled to be one of the whipping boys again, will probably get a reprieve for the next few weeks.

OVERSEAS FILMS IGNORED

While on the subject of OWI, when it held a special screening the other day of films it has made for overseas use, invitations went out to all Senators and Representatives who have anything to do with OWI—appropriations committees, investigating groups, etc.

The statesmen were unanimous in staying away—so it will not stop them from criticizing these films sight unseen, when they are in the mood.

Department of Justice anti-trust division people are keeping quiet about it, but they are watching the television situation with an eagle eye.

Should you read in your morning paper, a few months hence, that they have started an investigation and are asking questions in Hollywood as well as New York, remember we told you so.

Following up the Daily Variety disclosure of a couple of weeks back, the raw film situation is getting better and better. Only headache at the moment seems to be for chemicals to coat the celluloid. And that situation is gradually easing.

HOLLYWOOD JOHN'S SUNBURN

Hollywood's Congressman John Costello was back in town for the opening of the session last Tuesday with a sunburn that made him look a little handsomer than usual . . . and the authoress-Congresswoman Clare Booth Luce has a new hair-do, parted in the middle and slicked down. Even the newspaper gals who have been feuding with her, say she looks prettier. . . . Lieut. D. C., formerly a quiet spot with little night life, has bloomed in recent months into red hot. Niteries are going full blast and turning them away, with such attraction as Hildegarde, Joe E. Lewis, just back from entertaining soldiers in the Southwest Pacific; and the Duncan Sisters. Incidentally, the Duncans who busted house records at the Troika.

Incidentally, big name entertainers, fresh from towns like New York and Chicago, declare themselves thrilled to be working in Washington. Claim they have never run into this type of audience before. International figures from the embassies, senators, generals, admirals, war agency dollar-a-year big shots are a dime a dozen in the better clubs.

KYSER MEETS MOM

When Kay Kyser was here with the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade, his 86-year-old mother came up from Rocky Mount, N. C., for the first meeting with her son in two years. . . . Word is around that Dick Powell has gained new popularity with his fellow stars on the red, white and blue bond train. They found him ever willing to be helpful. . . . Hope Judy Garland has gotten over the cold she picked up en route to this city. . . . I suppose you've all gotten some of the postcards Lucille Ball has been sending out wholesale at every stop.

BILL KEIGHLEY'S ADVENTURES

DECCA-AFM END WAX WAR WITH PEACE PACT

Broadcasting, arrived here today from Chicago.

As a result of extensive negotiations, during which time Kapp spent several weeks in Chicago trying to set up peace between Petrillo and his two companies, agreement was finally reached Saturday for resumption of music recording immediately by the Decca units.

Agreement provides for four year term, and it is understood Decca will pay a graduating scale of fees on every musical record or transcription sold. This money will go to the musicians actually employed on each tune, and not to the AFM union headquarters as Petrillo had sought. Musicians receiving the fees, however, will in turn be taxed by AFM to aid unemployed members.

CUTTING IN 2 WEEKS

Although accord reached by Kapp with Petrillo provides for immediate availability of AFM members for recording or transcription work for Decca and World it is understood that cutting will not get under way for a couple of weeks. Decca recording studios both here and in New York have been advised to stand by for early resumption of activity, with Kapp slated to give the green light when he cleans up number of details required in the production and pressing departments.

The Kapp-Petrillo pact is seen as paving the way for peace terms with both Victor and Columbia, which—with Decca—compose the 'Big Three' in the field of popular recordings. Petrillo's original ban on musical recordings and transcriptions dates back to Aug. 1, 1942.

4-DAY PEACE MEETING

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Agreement reached by Jack Kapp, head of Decca and World Broadcasting, with James C. Petrillo for resumption of musical recordings was climaxed here last week by four day meeting of AFM executive board at the Palmer House to approve deal made between Kapp and Petrillo for lifting of music ban for Kapp's two concerns.

Petrillo refused to disclose any details or terms of the contract, which—although not yet officially signed—is effective as of today, and both Decca and World are allowed to utilize the services of union musicians at once.

Details of the deal will be made known in New York in about a week, Petrillo told Daily Variety today. He stated, 'Decca is the only company that has shown a sympathetic interest toward getting the recording situation settled. They have been very cooperative.'

When asked what effect the agreement would have on the other companies, Petrillo said: 'They can take it or leave it—the agreement is there. They are privileged to sign on the same basis or not, we don't care.'

DECCA IN GOOD SPOT

Break of the AFM recording ban by Decca in move independent from Victor and Columbia, reveals Decca was in the best position of the three disc firms, with hundreds of numbers still unreleased that could easily carry Decca through another year of marketed product at least. During the past year all record companies have been faced with restrictions on output due to necessity of conserving shellac, with result weekly and monthly releases have been cut down considerably. In addition, problem of retaining workers in the pressing end of the biz has reduced total output, although number of platters sold on individual tunes have skyrocketed during the past year.

to inquire whether local representatives would have power to act, etc. It is understood Producers object to spending time negotiating unless union representatives can close deal, eliminating necessity of having to finish negotiations here after making trip east.

Many studio representatives, however, are already making train reservations in belief negotiations will get under way on that date. Official time for parleys with both the IA and the Basic Agreement will be fixed by Pat Casey, Producer labor contact, when go ahead signal is received from Walsh. Unions in Basic have been clamoring for a meeting for several months.

Negotiations will include Cameramen, Sound Technicians, Laboratory Technicians, Carpenters, Grips, Property Men, Laborers, Teamsters, Musicians, IBEW, Electricians, Costumers, Plasterers, etc. Deal also must be made with Conference unions, including Painters, Machinists, Cartoonists, Set Designers and White Collarites, but there has been no indication whether they will be held in the east or here.

Most of the negotiations will pertain to conditions, although some crafts are demanding revision of what they term inequalities in pay. Many of the union heads will go east for meeting of the American Federation of Labor in Boston week of Oct. 4.

WAR PIX PACK 'EM IN

UNIONS ASK VACASH PAY NIGHT TILT

Vacations and 10% tilt for workers on night shifts will be principal demands of practically all film unions when their representatives head east next month to open negotiations with the major companies. Unionists realize they stand little chance of getting War Labor Board approval for straight percentage increases, but figure vacations equal to 4%.

Union leaders point out, however, that vacations are even more important than the 4%. They say that without a vacation clause giving the worker pay for vacation periods, few of them could save sufficient funds to take time off unless they were paid while absent.

Biggest drive will be on conditions, with some crafts demanding rest periods after so many hours, revision of location pay, etc. Union parleys are expected to open in New York shortly after close of the American Federation of Labor convention which meets in Boston Oct. 4.

Fourth house, Warners Beverly, winds up two weeks and five days with picture Thursday night before reverting back to second run policy.

AFM LOSES $4,000,000 TO WIN 400G A YEAR

New York, Sept. 20.—American Federation of Musicians won a rather small victory in achieving partial settlement of their disc controversy with Decca, it is felt here. In comparison to previous AFM demands for between $3,500,000 and $5,000,000 annually from disc manufacturers, the deal, when extended to Victor, Columbia and other outfits, will bring AFM between $350,000 and $400,000 yearly, depending upon disc sales.

This year, total sale is figured between 75,000,000 and 90,000,000, exceptionally high in view of materials and manpower shortage.

Details of deal with Decca calls for quarter-cent royalty on $0.35 retail disc, half-cent on $0.50, three-quarter-cent on $0.75, one-cent on $1.00 seller, five cents on $2.00 disc and 2½% of retail price on all above latter, to be paid recording leaders on basis of sales. Leaders will turn payments over to AFM in form of additional taxes.

Agreement is for four years, effective Jan. 1, 1944. It will be formally signed this coming Saturday.

Settlement also includes deal with

U. S. ENTERS CARTOONISTS DISPUTE WITH SCHLESINGER

Government stepped into labor dispute between Screen Cartoonists Guild and Leon Schlesinger Studio last night, following receipt of protest from Guild that Schlesinger had nixed recommendation of his own conciliator and had refused to arbitrate. Dispute involves classification of femme employee pertaining to settlement of wage arrangement.

Business Representative William Pomerance of SCG, was advised by Dr. John R. Steelman, head of the U. S. Conciliation Department, that he had appointed William Curtin to investigate protest. It is probable that first meeting between two groups, with Curtin sitting in, will be held today.

Guilders claim recommendation for settlement was made by Anthony O'Rourke, representing Schlesinger, but that after the proposal had been approved by the Guild, Schlesinger turned it down and refused to arbitrate the difference.

Princess O'Rourke

Warners release of First National production. Stars Olivia de Havilland and Robert Cummings. Supporting cast: Charles Coburn, Jack Carson, Jane Wyman, Harry Davenport, Gladys Cooper, Minor Watson, Nan Wynn, Curt Bois, Ray Walker, David Clyde, Nana Bryant, Nydia Westman, Ruth Ford, Julie Bishop, Frank Puglia, Rosina Galli, Ferike Boros, Dave Willock, John Dilson, Edward Gargan. Tradeshown in Los Angeles, Sept. 20, 1943. Running time: 94 MINS.

Unawed by any august connotations, Hal B. Wallis in his Warners production, 'Princess O'Rourke,' uses the White House as principal setting for a daring and hilarious comedy which will be rated among the screen's top laugh pieces of the year. It sells as quality entertainment and priceless commodity, the American notion of personal dignity and national ideal of independence, but treats it in wholly humorous fashion. Wartime politics and international relationships are told through an impudently approached romance between a European princess and an American plane pilot which treads delicate ground in spots but creates all the more merriment through that course. It must have been relished at the White House, for the picture obviously needed an okay from that quarter to be released.

Olivia de Havilland is the heir apparent to a European monarchy, in Washington on a visit and for the purpose of arranging—through her shrewd uncle, Charles Coburn,—a marriage of state with some 'eligible' American because the blood lines with which she might mate in Europe have been depleted. Completely and distressingly out of whack with the uncle's plans is a decorous but unalterable romance with a young commercial plane pilot on a western run with whom her fortunes are linked by comic happenstance, Robert Cummings. The proposed trip to a western ranch is never made by the girl. Instead, the action returns to Washington where the princess and her avuncular monitor are house guests of the President.

F.B.I. guards, the department of State, members of the Presidential menage and other high dignitaries are involved. The uncle finally agrees to the marriage when he discovers that the pilot comes from a long line of prolific forbears with a record for bearing sons. The prenuptial arrangements are being made in a guest room of the White House when the boy violently rebels against becoming a mere morganatic nonentity. The last straw is when he is told he must surrender his American citizenship. The girl apparently concurs in this unthinkable requirement. The boy blows up with a mighty declaration in which he tells off her highness and the astonished uncle. Finally everything is patched up, the girl is to become an ordinary American, and a surreptitious marriage takes place at night in a White House suite, with the President, by

Adventures In Iraq

(Melodrama)

Warners production. Cast: John Loder, Ruth Ford, Warren Douglas, Paul Cavanaugh, Barry Bernard, Peggy Carson, Bill Crago, Martin Garralaga, Bill Edwards, Dick Botiller, Eugene Borden, Manuel Lopez. Director, D. Ross Lederman. Screenplay, George R. Bilson, Robert E. Kent. From play by William Archer. Photography, James Van Trees. Editor, Clarence Kolster. Art director, Stanley Fleischer. Sets, Walter F. Tilford. Gowns, Milo Anderson. Tradeshown at studio, Sept. 20, 1943. Running time: 64 MINS.

Warners' final offering on its late 'B' program, 'Adventure in Iraq,' bit on the corny side, is spotted with sufficient action and production values to elevate it as popular Saturday afternoon dualer for the kids. Picture's lack of marquee names is compensated for by a plot which will get by where audiences aren't any too discriminating.

Concerning the adventures of a Flying Tiger pilot (Warren Douglas) and an estranged English couple (John Loder and Ruth Ford) when their plane, en route to Cairo from India, is forced down in Iraq, story follows trio as they're held by an Iraq sheik (Paul Cavanaugh) as hostages for sheik's three brothers sentenced to death by the English. Shortwave message to British in Cairo, during sending of which Loder is conveniently killed to assure romance between his widow and pilot, brings a squadron of American planes to the rescue, with accompanying climaxing thrills.

Cavanaugh is made to overplay for suavity the role of sheik, but gives as good an account of himself as part will permit. He is the standout in picture, with Ruth Ford an acceptable heroine for this type of adventure film. John Loder as her husband makes the most of material at hand, and Warren Douglas is an okay Flying Tiger. Other roles are mostly atmospheric.

D. Ross Lederman directed from George R. Bilson and Robert E. Kent's screenplay, adapted from a play by William Archer, and James Van Trees handled the camera effectively. Stanley Fleischer's art direction and set decorations by Walter F. Tilford are realistically worked out. Other departments likewise stack up.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

Washington, Sept. 20.—Reliably informed circles in the capital believe that the Allied military strategy and the war's timetable which were perfected at the recent meetings between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill aim at defeating the Axis on the battlefields instead of waiting for the collapse of the Axis' military and political machines. Though military operations may run ahead of schedule and all signs point to an approaching collapse of the Axis machinery, the general opinion here puts the war's end late in 1944. The Balkan campaign is being increasingly mentioned here with Soviet successes stimulating much of the interest. The political strategy, 'promise nothing,' is reflected in the attitude toward the Free French despite their strong indications that they desire a place in the meetings and discussions of post-war problems. Churchill's return is expected to expedite the Moscow tripartite conferences.

Noble Wants Wide Ownership of Blue Network

Washington, Sept. 20.—Edgar M. Noble, testifying before the Federal Communications Commission today on his proposed purchase of the Blue Network, said he wanted wide ownership of the web, with stock sold first to the management, second to affiliated stations, and third to the general public. He said he planned no commercial exploitation of the stock.

Noble said James H. McGraw, of McGraw-Hill, is definitely out of the picture. Mark Woods, Blue prexy, testified that his net has spent from $900,000 to $1,000,000 a year for sustaining programs to affiliates.

Noble was quizzed on his views about sale of time for non-commercial programs. He was told that the final decision on sale of the net will not be made by FCC until after he files with the commission an explanation of its policy 'on ways and means of expanding the public service mechanism.'

Woods was question about the Jergens deal to switch from 55 NBC stations to Blue with the Walter Winchell program. Woods stated they agreed to allow Jergens to continue certain NBC stations, even though this meant duplications. Some of the questioning dealt with the refusal of Blue to sell the Winchell program to station WRAL, in Raleigh, N. C.

FCC Chairman James L. Fly sought to make Woods say that this was to force the station into full affiliation with Blue, and that the network rules were being broken. John T. Cahill, RCA attorney, flatly denied this and asserted WRAL had failed to meet the customary financial terms.

WB PAT ON FIDLER

Jimmie Fidler's lame attempt Sunday night to woo and goo his way back into Warners favor by reversing his theme from 'I do mean you' to just the opposite, failed to change the status of the studio with the Blue Network as regards the tight ban on WB players appearing on that chain. Spokesman for the studio said that what Fidler drooled on his Sunday broadcast would have no effect upon the out-of-bounds order, and that the matter now is in the hands of Warners attorneys in New York, who will thresh it out with Blue officials there. Meanwhile, the studio has canceled all theatre advertising on Blue stations and has ordered cessation of the Fidler pancaked comeon on KFWB.

informed Goldwyn that selling terms, under the circumstances, could not be definitely set until test runs were held. Picture's running time hits around two and a half hours, which is another factor in desire of RKO to obtain audience reaction.

President Ned Depinet of RKO Pictures expects to remain on the coast for about a month, slipping in a vacation during that time. Bob Mochrie and Walter Branson, RKO sales execs, are enroute back to New York. getter at the Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern, with exception of 'This Is the Army,' and should hit an easy $60,000.

Pan-Hillstreet figures for 'Rising Sun' are substantially ahead of 'Hitler's Children,' particularly in the Hollywood house. Other local first runs registered drops, largely blamed on opening of schools and the Sept. 15 income tax nick, with from fair to average business in sight.

'Wintertime,' doublebilled at Loew's State, Grauman's Chinese and the Ritz, will hit approximately $41,000 for the week, an average figure. Third week of 'So Proudly We Hail' at the Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramount theatres, is heading for okay $23,500, downtown house losing last night's receipts due to special bond premiere. 'For Whom the Bell Tolls,' Paramount special at the Carthay Circle and United Artists with roadshow prices, will reach estimated $28,800. Still pulling strong at the Hawaii with likely $6,000 for a third week is the horror bill, 'Walked with a Zombie' and 'Leopard Man.'

inference, hovering just outside the door approvingly.

One of the comic novelties is the White House pet, Falla, carrying a note between the lovers through the halls of the manse. A Supreme Court justice in stocking feet officiates at the wedding which makes the princess just plain Mrs. O'Rourke.

Performance by Miss de Havilland and Robert Cummings carry the conviction and the charm which gives the comedy and its romantic embellishments an exceptional quality. Charles Coburn delights with his finest artistry in a role tailored to his gifts, and Jack Carson and Jane Wyman, fellow pilot and his wife, make excellent contributions to the emotional moments and the fun in hosting the forlorn lovers. Harry Davenport is the marrying justice. Ray Walker is the frantic G-man; Gladys Cooper, Minor Watson and Curt Bois carry their share of important support.

Norman Krasna wrote the screen play and directed, a case of the author and pilot in perfect accord and turning in a fine piece of craftsmanship and top-flight imaginative effort on both counts.

Ernie Haller's photography, the music by Frederick Hollander and other technical contributions are appropriately excellent.

Fox West Coast's new triple day-date theatres, the Egyptian, Los Angeles and Uptown, will be operated on an extended first run policy, with pictures holding at the three houses as long as profitable. CAVALCADE DOUBLES QUOTA; 4 SHOWS TO GO

New Orleans, Sept. 20.—Appearing here tonight before an audience of 45,000 at an outdoor rally, the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade boosted its fast growing total of bond sales to $1,011,000,000 mark. In other words the Cavalcade's original quota of $500,000,000 had been more than doubled, with bond-selling performances in four cities still scheduled.

As Greer Garson announced shattering of the billion dollar mark through admission to the show alone, and pointed up the significance of that honor falling to New Orleans, the audience responded with a rousing cheer.

Kenneth Thomson, on behalf of the Hollywood Victory Committee and the Cavalcade's personalities, issued an official statement thanking the people of this city for their generosity which, keeping pace with the bond-buying cooperation of cities visited previously, now makes possible the best record ever credited to a Hollywood junket.

Sunday night the Cavalcade members were guests of honor at a banquet at the Roosevelt Hotel. Somewhat rested from their first overnight stop since the Cavalcade left Hollywood Sept. 4, the stars found themselves today with sufficient leisure to devote to sightseeing in the old French quarter and elsewhere.

Advance reports reaching tour manager Kenneth Thomson, aboard the Cavalcade special, indicate that sales in Dallas, Ft. Worth, San Antonio and San Francisco, the four cities remaining on the schedule, will register sell-outs. The troupe plays a matinee in Ft. Worth tomorrow, followed by an evening performance in Dallas, San Antonio Wednesday and San Francisco Saturday. The stars are due back in Hollywood Sept. 26.

Four Film Guilds Nix Return to Labor Council

At a meeting yesterday of representatives of the Studio Painters, Musicians, Screen Actors Guild and Teamsters it was agreed groups will not return to Central Labor Council at present time. While Paul Smith, American Federation of Labor representative in charge of Council, has ordered an election of CLC officers for Nov. 15, it is understood film groups did not believe it advisable to reaffiliate under current setup.

J. W. Buzzell, Council secretary-treasurer, is scheduled to appear before American Federation of Labor convention in Boston Oct. 3 to appeal ouster of Harry Sherman as prexy and take over by AF of L representative. While Buzzell would have to stand for reelection under Smith order, it is understood film groups feel he should have been removed along with Sherman, and that shakeup in Executive Board should be made.

Moving Picture Painters Local 644 on recommendation of Business Representative Herbert Sorrell last night voted to reaffiliate with Council 'when it is seen fit.'

Musicians Lose 4 Million to Win 400G a Year

Decca's recently-acquired World Broadcasting Co. and transcription firm. It would pay 2½% of income from library only, commercial discs, used only once, not being included.

This portion of the agreement with Decca, made in face of James C. Petrillo's repeated assertions that transcription makers would not be allowed to resume operation under any circumstances, has led observers to believe Petrillo's settlement with Decca was induced by AFM's fear that the forthcoming War Labor Board decision would not be favorable to the union.

It is felt Victor, Columbia and other disc firms must follow Decca's lead and make peace since they cannot allow former to walk away with pop song market. Decca has not scheduled recording dates yet but is in throes of setting up plan.

It is being deluged with calls by music publishers, band-leaders it has under contract, et al. It's not likely company will record any but top artists due to restrictions on materials and lacking factory help.

Music publishers, who were in middle between manufacturers and Petrillo, were elated by Decca's move. Though sheet music sales have considerably increased lately, partially making up for loss of disc royalties, cost of exploiting tunes into hit category without records is almost prohibitive. Musicians themselves were actually only sufferers as a result of the ban. It is estimated they lost around $4,000,000 in waits in the 13 months ban has been on.

Airmadas Totals Hit $250,000,000 on Tour of Cities

Washington, Sept. 20. — The Third War Loan Airmada, carrying war heroes and film stars in many cities, has sold $250,000,000 in bonds to date, the Treasury Department announced tonight. Airmada consists of five Army and Navy air transports, all visiting different cities.

Second group of the Hollywood Victory Committee's War Veterans Bond Airmadas returned to Hollywood yesterday with a record of more than $50,000,000 in bond sales from a flying tour covering 13 cities in 11 days. Returning were Elyse Knox, Lon Chaney, Jr., and Gene O'Brien, tour manager. Albert Dekker, who also accompanied the five war heroes who were the nucleus of the troupe, went east after the tour closed in Toledo.

Also back from an Airmada tour were Franchot Tone, Lois Andrews and Marie McDonald, with Ed Scofield as tour manager. They covered nine western cities with bond sales of approximately $30,000,000. Ten other Hollywood personalities who have been touring eastern cities, the south and southwest, will return later in the week.

'Let's Face It' Preem Grabs Off $3,500,000

Entire house was sold out, with standees also gaining admission with purchase of bond in any amount from $25 up. Tabulation of actual sales will take several days, it is expected.

METRO SIGNS DEAL WITH J. G. WILSON TO BACK NY PLAYS

Metro, after nibbling around at idea of regularly financing new plays on Broadway, goes for the plan via agreement signed with John G. Wilson. Latter will select and stage scripts to be entirely underwritten by Metro; with studio figuring that its basic interest will provide inside position for acquisition of film rights to wanted properties after staging.

Wilson has been at Metro studios for the past few months, during which time he gandered film production methods and procedure, in addition to getting insight into film technique and treatment necessary for transformation of a play script to the screen. On Broadway, Wilson has produced four Noel Coward plays and two with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne. He has also staged plays in London.

NY LEGIT OPENING

LAND OF FAME

New York, Sept. 21.—'Land of Fame,' drama by Albert and Mary Bein about Greek guerrilla opposition to Nazi invaders, premiered mildly tonight at the Belasco Theatre. Ponderous attempt to dramatize the heroic subject lacks coherence and, after a slow start suddenly loses force and interest.

With such stubborn material not a single cast member is able to show advantageously, although Stefan Schnabel, Ed Begley, Kenneth LeRoy and Norman Rose make worthy attempts. Bein's direction lacks clarity. Show is presented by Bein and Frederick Fox, under the supervision of J. B. Daniels, with Fox designing obvious settings.

LAUNCHING of new first-run setup of the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Uptown is providing headaches for studio and theatre press agents and advertising men. Downtown dailies also are concerned over the addition, which will cut further into the present curtailed drama page space allotments. Theatre trio is expected to hit heavy advance and opening day ads, and carry through with nominal space on other days of the week. On the news side these theatres will be entitled to usual quota of illustrative cuts and free readers, which will require complete revamping of present schedules. Hardest hit will be studios and indie press agents, who will be further restricted on crashing drama pages with items for their clients.

FEDERAL Communications Commission in Washington moved yesterday to crack down on bookie wire services. The commission ordered an investigation of the use of telephone and telegraph wires in disseminating racing info for gambling purposes. Use of wires by the press associations to carry racing news into newspapers and radio stations for legitimate news purposes is exempted from the probe. Matter of bookie wires came up during hearings on the Western Union-Postal Telegraph merger, when it was discovered that Western Union had more than 12,000 miles of wire circuits leased for piping racing information. FCC charged that this was a waste of critical materials and skilled personnel.

The motion picture master-minders swore.
And so the films of warlike life
Out yonder in the lethal strife
Are thriving as they never did before.

Only a few months ago the smart lads of Hollywood decreed that the market had reached the saturation point in war pictures and that Joe Public and his wife and children demanded themes of escape, far from the sound of bursting bombs. So Joe and his wife and children flock to war films, and new house records jingle at the box office. Only a few years ago the same masterminds put their skulls together in deep thought and declared, 'The filmusical is dead.' And now their scouts are prowling the highways, byways, colleges and nightclubs, seeking to ensnare bands, crooners and hoofers into contracts calling for wages that sound like Congressional appropriations. Hollywood is merely a cross-section of America, which continues to function in its own way in spite of masterminds.

Sime Silverman

SIME would have said: "Aw, stick it back in the obit department—for the record." But Sime isn't here now to mark with his stubby pencil where "Variety" copy is to run. And his boys think he rates editorial-page position. In this sheet or any other, when the biggest, bravest heart on Broadway stopped, it was a big story. Show business knows that. And "Variety" has always been edited for show business.

Sime was often urged to run departments appealing to non-pro readers. He always turned down the idea. He was afraid the stall would start writing up to outsiders and lose their trade touch. He thought that when villagers started to understand "Variety" then show people wouldn't. Show people always understood Sime. He advised them, he panned them, he slipped them the lowdown, and they always understood him.

When "Variety's" slang influenced the language of a nation, that wasn't Sime's intent. It was because he made "Variety" so vital and so penetrating that laymen read it, and thus they picked up the terms of the trade which so fascinated them that high-brow sheets did nip-ups over what in this case was just every-day colloquial Broadwayese.

The most sentimental Old Boy that ever lived. Sime didn't go for flowery, fulsome blurbs. So there will be none here. "Variety," as a reporter and reviewer, is familiar with the effective value of eulogiums, orations and eloquent curtain speeches. They have put over many an act. But this isn't an act. This is still inside stuff to the profession.

The "Variety" boys are doing their blubbering and crying among themselves. What and how they are suffering is of minor interest to the readers. They are mourning a loss that even Sime's audience can't understand.

But that's strictly private and will stay that way.

What they can share with their world and his is this:

The stage and the screen and the air have lost their chief mouthpiece, their voice of authority speaking from its heart of loyal love and its head of wisdom and vision.

American journalism has lost a rugged soul which, confined by the limited horizon of a specialized field, has left a historic influence on all newspaper publication by courage, indomitable consistency, straight-shooting independence which never hesitated before the temptations of gain, popularity, fear or favor.

Show business has lost its square-shouldered, silver-haired big brother, the monosyllabic, outspoken, Broadway-wise gruff guy who did his soft deeds in the dark and his hard duties where all could see.

The world has lost a genius who became and remained unique and extraordinary around the globe, who commanded the admiration of those who were with him, those who were against him, and those who didn't know what he was all about.

His pals have lost their pal.

"Variety" has lost its skipper, but the "Variety" crew, raised by him and with him, idolizing his memory and inoculated with, his philosophy, will carry on in the tradition which was Sime.

He didn't live long enough. But he lived long enough for that.

He lived long enough to perpetuate the spirit of frankness without rancor, positive opinion without personal prejudice, sacred fidelity to the trade without near-sighted illusions about its weaknesses, fanatical faith in the truth without puny reservations of expediency, a hot hatred for inspired propaganda and a cold contempt for keyhole scandal.

He lived long enough to convert a hostile field of egotistical and jealous units to a consciousness of power and purpose greater than the single, isolated self-seeking of the individual—to a realization that all competitive factors and all economic enemies are interdependent and are lost when they unbalance the industry each in pursuit of personal acquisitiveness.

He lived long enough to plant in the world at large the revelation that show business is a huge, important, bed-rocked institution, integral to the healthy body of the nation, essential to the morale of the people—not a fly-by-night conglomeration of mountbanks, gyps, freaks and short-changers.

He lived long enough to outlive the era of theatrical sheets which peddled puffs, gouged the unfortunates who slipped or who couldn't get enough toehold to slip, pandered to the psychological vanity of ambitious weaklings or pompous potentates.

He lived long enough to create and leave behind, out of nothing, a newspaper which floats its banner in every land, which is the modern acknowledged herald of an ancient art.

He lived long enough to have Hollywood and Broadway, which he fought and which fought him, bow their heads in lamentation over his passing.

He lived long enough to see and deplore the bitter fruits of many wild growths against which he counseled and campaigned through years when his motives were maligned and his judgment was rejected.

He lived long enough to say what he meant, take the consequences, and leave a million friends.

"Variety" will build no monument to Sime. Sime built "Variety" and "Variety" is his monument.

It will always be Sime's sheet.

His boys didn't work for him; they worked with him. They believed in him. He was their idol. They are still his boys. They hear him and they see him every minute.

They hear his curt, staccato orders, his quick, incisive decisions. They see his contagious smile, the smile that usually came at the end of the day—and the day ended anywhere from sundown to sunrise.

They see him with his white, soft-collared shirt a bit rumpled, the perennial bow-tie slightly screwy, lighting the Philip Morris cigarets one after the other, tilting forward in his chair with his thick, short pencil poised over copy from the Harlem cabarets or cable from Egypt, or running down columns of moist galley-proof from Chatter to Page I hot stuff.

They hear him grunt an instruction and lay down a policy—orders to the fellows who worked in their specialty lines and played them up without his mellow and mature understanding that it was all part of a great whole-show business.

They see him cut their stories—for brevity; brevity was one of his passions. They see him change their phraseology—for simplicity; simplicity was one of his manias. They see him streak his lightning pencil through single words—adjectives; adjectives were one of his pet aversions.

They see him read their notices and their news-reports and pass them —pass them with only such editorial revisions as are the style of "Variety." For Sime never changed a line of one of his reporter's or reviewer's opinions any more than he ever suggested a word that they should write or omit, or an attitude they should take or avoid.

They see him write a head—the heads which only Sime could originate, but which the "Variety" boys can write now with rapid fluency; a head that tells the story and tells it in the language of the trade.

They see him downtown, in the printing plant, as they make up the edition against the Tuesday night deadline—grading the news and the combinations of news with the trend of show business, in the relative importance of affairs as they now obtain—pictures, radio, music, vaudeville, legit, chatter, outdoors, obituary. Obituary last.

Sime treated that department as he treated the others—as news.

And he always held that the opening of a show was more interesting and important reading than its closing.

He never gave rave notices to the ones that had closed, no matter how long they had run or how mighty has been their triumphs.

When we got the grand idea of starting the "Times Square Daily," which cost Sime a fortune and all of us a tremendous lot of work and grief, he used to call it "the world's worst daily," and he wound it up without a squawk or a sigh.

When we all chipped in and bought the "Clipper" and tried to make it an outdoor show-business rag, and dropped about a hundred G's, Sime paid us all off every nickel that we had put in; he always shared his hits with us, but would never let us share his flops. Well, he closed that one without any ceremonies or afterpieces, too.

So we feel that we don't have to brush up the adjectives he cut out of our copy to touch up his last notice. We feel we don't have to spread this all over "Variety" and violate his love for brevity.

We bring it forward in the paper to the editorial page—and he would probably have ordered it back where he'd think it belongs.

But Sime never could believe that he, himself, was news.

Having read the wires that poured in, having talked to the hundreds who called on the local and long distance phones when the first word of our bereavement was whispered in New York and Hollywood, having spoken to the many who were shocked and stunned and staggered by the blow—we know that he is news.

The boys of "Variety" have written shiploads of news printed with oceans of ink. News is news and they have been trained to be clinical in their professional handling of it.

They want to be, even here and now. It's hard, but Sime taught them to do it that way.

They see him and they hear him. That is "Variety's" business and theirs.

But they feel him, too. And that is only Sime's and theirs.

They feel the kindly pat of his hand on their shoulders, they feel its strong, warm clasp in theirs. They feel the radiant glow of his inimitable smile, which was reserved only for his pals.

They feel him in their own "Variety" way.

The only way they'll ever show that to any but each other will be to get out "Variety" as nearly like they think Sime would get it out as their intimate schooling under him and their intense affection for him will let them.

Jack Lait.

Solidly in the tradition of 20th-Fox exceptionally successful musical offerings, 'Sweet Rosie O'Grady' presents Betty Grable in one of her most beguiling roles and uses the nostalgic song eloquently to weave a sentimental tale about the heroine of a generation of 'barber-shop' choristers. It will refresh audiences with buoyant entertainment and garner its full share of coin amongst 20th-Fox important money makers of the year.

With charm, lilt and Technicolor beauty of production is the old popular song and its possible genesis visualized and the supplementary music of Mack Gordon and Harry Warren purveyed. Only in its adapted costumes of the period is it old-fashioned. Otherwise, in tempo, temper and speech 'Sweet Rosie' is of the present, after the growing fashion in film musicals to ignore the 'quaint' reminders of another era.

Show-wise is Producer William Perlberg's nifty combination of eye-and-ear, past-and-present entertainment elements to loose the pent-up yearnings of the elder customers and the pin-up fancies of the younger. Irving Cummings, directing with an equally canny showmanship, treats Miss Grable's 'Sweet Rosie' as if she were indeed what she is, Betty Grable in the flesh and up to the moment, saving only the tights of the Police Gazette mode and a bustle or two. The Technicolor cameras fairly whistle every time they look at her, and that will not be bad for the b.o.

Giving their best wares, in light mood, to make the piece click are Robert Young, sharing the romantic bracket, Adolphe Menjou, Reginald Gardiner, Virginia Grey, Phil Regan, Sig Ruman, Alan Dinehart, Hobart Cavanaugh, Frank Orth, Jonathan Hale, Stanley Clements, Byron Foulger, Lilyan Irene, the Robert Mitchell Boychoir and Leo Diamond and his Solidaires, everyone contributing according to the importance of his billing and the assignments of Ken Englund's commendable script, based on stories by William K. Lipman, Frederick Stephani and Edward Van Every.

In the musicalized tale, 'Rosie' is a Brooklyn gal with delusions of grandeur, a burlesk purveyor in a beer hall who is using a different monicker and doing a different act in London and angling for a smitten Duke. Robert Young, as Sam McGee, a Police Gazette reporter who also is sweet on sweet 'Rosie,' crabs her act with the Duke, Reginald

Washington, Sept. 21.—Capital circles are interpreting the Churchill speech as strong indications that imminent action on other European fronts is not far off, with the Balkans prominent in speculative talk. Yugoslav guerrilla activities are centering around vital naval bases, giving credence to the belief that Allied action there is more than just a possibility, as naval bases are potentially landing points. More political worry is on the horizon in Washington, the latest being the political differences caused by President Roosevelt's emphatic statement that 'Nazi and Prussian militarists must be destroyed,' and the Soviet-sponsored 'Free German Committee,' which comprises a large number of captured German officers. It is greatly hoped here, however, that the tripartite conference will solve these problems. The Soviet successes on the eastern front are seen as the best proof of the effects of Allied military strategy, with the Nazi army expected to withdraw close to the Polish border line for a winter defense.

PRC Outbids Col By $5,000 for Fine Arts Lot

PRC legally acquired property and buildings of Fine Arts studios yesterday afternoon, at auction of the property on courthouse steps.

Columbia representatives showed up to enter bids for the property, and after PRC entered original bid of $250,000 in addition to assuming back taxes of $33,000, Columbia offered $300,000 plus back taxes, but PRC raised the ante $5,000 to get the nod. Columbia apparently declined to proceed due to fact that auction was a legal formality due to fact PRC had purchased original mortgage held by WECO Corp., which was being foreclosed.

PRC, which has already moved into the studio, takes formal possession under the foreclosure proceedings on Oct. 1. President O. Henry Briggs of PRC announces formation of PRC Studios Corp., Delaware incorporation, to operate the plant. Briggs functions as prexy, with Leon Fromkess, vice president; Karl Herzog, secretary-treasurer, and Arthur Johnson Herzog's assistant.

Prods Agree to Do Survey on Pay Of Collarites

Producer representatives at a conference with the Screen Office Employes Guild yesterday agreed to make a survey of wage minimums and classifications for Collarites at Warners, 20th-Fox and Paramount before giving an answer to the SOEG demand for a 7% pay hike for 2,000 studio White Collarites. The three studios where surveys will be made have independent guilds, and their pay and classifications will be tabulated for comparison with that received by Guilders.

Demand that script girls be raised from Classification 6x to Classification 5, and that time and half after 40 hours be paid for members of Classifications 1 and 2, will be discussed further at the next meeting between the two groups. Producers want clause providing that girls will be placed on a probationary period to determine whether they are qualified.

SOEG was represented by Prexy Margaret Bennett, Business Representative Glenn Pratt, Secretaries Bernard Lusher and Blanche Cole, and Attorneys Ben Margolies.

Trade Showing

Sweet Rosie O'Grady

Gardiner, and meets the fire and ire of the vengeful showgirl, as well as the shifty wiles of his editor, Adolphe Menjou, until love finally softens them both and she's again the admired belle of the beer hall in the present habitat of dem bums.

In the tunefilm it is asserted that the song, 'Sweet Rosie O'Grady' was coined by Robert Young to serenade and plague the girl of his desires while she's riding her high horse. It is a pretty conceit, and the picture's music makers and players make the most of it.

Mack Gordon and Harry Warren add music and lyric for 'My Heart Tells Me,' and infectious love ballad: 'Goin' to the Country Fair,' an amusing bucolic ditty, used effectively as a production number; 'The Wishing Waltz,' catchy, and 'My Sam.' 'Heart Tells Me' is the reprise, with many variations, vocal and instrumental.

Dances shared by Miss Grable with ensembles are a big and gaudy factor in the showy offering, with dances staged by Hermes Pan and musical numbers supervised by Fanchon. 'Waiting at the Church' is sung as an opening travesty by Miss Grable and chorus. Phil Regan agreeably shares singing 'My Heart Tells Me' with Miss Grable. 'Police Gazette Number' by Mitchell Boychoir is striking.

Rene Hubert is credited with the chic costume, stylized variations of the period. The Technicolor camera work of Ernest Palmer and the art direction of James Basevi and Joseph C. Wright, as well as set decorations by Thomas Little and Frank E. Hughes, give the tunefilm gorgeous color and decor. Alfred Newman and Charles Henderson share the music direction credit.

LA TOPS NY IN FIRST RUN HOUSES

MORE SEATS IN LOCAL THEATRES

Los Angeles first run film theatres, numbering 19, are now the largest in the country, outnumbering New York by six houses and Chicago by nine. First run seating capacity jumped ahead of total seats in New York when Fox West Coast Theatres decided to add the Egyptian, Los Angeles and Uptown to its first run string of seven local houses, giving city total of 38,891, against New York's 37,521.

Local first runs will go up to 21 theatres if product remains available to Harry Popkins' Million Dollar and Vogue theatres, now daydating with a first run re-issue bill, adding another 2,000 seats to the top string.

Additional first run houses and recent price jump in night admissions of 10 cents in all F-WC theatres, the Pantages and Hillstreet and Warners Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern are expected to cause 1943-44 season's business to soar to dizzy heights. With last year's business surpassing previous 12 months by more than $3,000,000, exhibs see an additional million or a million and a half for the current season in the first runs.

Distributors with overloaded product shelves and facing squawks from subsequents on availability of pictures for their houses are hopeful of being able to clear films faster through initial dates with increased first runs. Various independent exhibitors, while appreciating faster first run playing time that will make pictures available to their accounts earlier, are also eyeing situation with alertness to prevent any changes in zoning and clearance schedules, or competition that might result from first run additions.

GOLDWYN IS AWARDED 'CHARMS'

New York, Sept. 21. — Screen rights of Edward Chodorov's 'Those Endearing Young Charms' are the property of Samuel Goldwyn, and not Warners. This was officially decided by the Dramatists Guild.

Action was taken yesterday at the first fall meeting of the organization's council, and it was noted by latter that the regular minimum basic agreement rules should apply in the case.

Dramatists Guild action emphasizes the fact that, in the sale of picture rights of Broadway plays, no deal may be made without the approval of the Guild arbitrator, Sidney B. Fleisher. In the case of 'Charms,' Warners—in dealing with Chodorov—had worked out a verbal agreement to buy the film rights for $35,000. In the meantime, Goldwyn had set deal with Chodorov's agent to pay $75,000 for the rights.

No Divorcement Action Seen Till Decree Is Ironed Out

New York, Sept. 21. — Pending final determination on the fate of the consent decree, it is believed in the trade that a theatre divorcement move definitely will not be made, nor that there will be any attempt to return to block-booking, so-called blind selling, although exhibs are clamoring for a return of that form of buying with identification of product.

Meeting is scheduled here for Monday with Assistant Attorney General Tom Clark, with view of Clark's seeking a solution through sounding out decree companies on blocks-of-five, the old form of block-booking, identification and cancellation. It is anticipated Clark will discuss proposals made by various exhibitor associations and theatre operators, in line with getting distrib views.

Not until the general meeting with Clark among producer, distributor and exhibitor representatives is the Department of Justice expected to indicate basis upon which it will consider continuation of the decree.

ASCAP ADDS BIG CHUNK TO TAKE BY SIGNING SYMPHONIES

Signing of a two-year contract with leading symphony orchestra bowls and auditoriums throughout the country which will swell the royalties pool of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers by an estimated $2,000,000 was revealed here after close of the annual ASCAP meeting at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Anticipated added income will add close to 25% to the present pool of $8,000,000 for the membership which has grown considerably during the past year.

Symphonic orchestra field is a new pasture for ASCAP, and the enlarged contract area is said by members to be due largely to pioneering efforts of Deems Taylor, prexy, who presided at meeting here last week. Two-year pact embraces such organizations as the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Hollywood Bowl, the Lewisohn stadium in New York, the Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia, the Odean in St. Louis and numerous other top symphony orchestra spots.

Heretofore, symphony programs were composed almost exclusively of the concertos and other works of European composers, like Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, Wagner — music which ASCAP doesn't control. Recently a definite demand has been manifested for the music of contemporary American composers who are members of ASCAP, together with the elder compositions which are in public domain. In numerous recent concerts, ASCAP members have boasted, the show stoppers were musical works owned by the organization, and this emphasis on the modern compositions is predicted to be growing rapidly, with consequent returns to the ASCAP royalties pool under the new pact.

Deems Taylor returned to New York yesterday. John Paine, general manager, and Fred Ahlert, secretary-treasurer, are due to train east today.

Paine, Ahlert and Dick Powers, western division supervisor of ASCAP, yesterday looked at Universal's 'Phantom of the Opera' with the producer, George Waggner, and the author of the score, Edward Ward, being especially interested in the film's story of a composer.

CAVALCADE GETS $48,000,000 MORE

RECEPTION TO BE GIVEN BOND STARS

Travel-weary entertainment names making up the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade will be greeted with reception committee at the Glendale station when they arrive from San Francisco sometime Sunday. Plans for mammoth bond rally and welcome home party at either the Hollywood Bowl or the Shrine Auditorium have been dropped in favor of simpler reception at decision of those heading welcoming committee.

New plans, subject to approval of Hollywood Victory Committee and Kenneth Thomson, will have players greeted by public dignitaries in special welcoming group, with a master of ceremonies handling introductions and top military bands adding color to greetings. Police Department and Sheriff's Office have made plans for handling crowd up to 25,000, with section of the Glendale station roped off to handle sight-seers. Reception was planned by Charles P. Skouras, for theatres, and James L. Beebe, acting for the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. Details were set by committee headed by W. H. Bud Lollier and Norman Manning. If Victory Committee approves plan, Victor Adams leaves for San Francisco tomorrow to handle arrangements on that end prior to train's arrival here.

Treasury Department, War Finance Committee, etc., decided to nix more extensive welcoming setup on the grounds that it was a needless effort for the Bond Cavalcade members after wearying tour and should be entitled to rest after returning home instead of doing extra show. Cavalcade is already way over original quota.

STARS HEAD FOR HOME WITH TWO MORE STOPS

Dallas, Sept. 21.—Following a matinee in Ft. Worth and an evening performance here, it was announced that the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade had accounted for an additional $48,000,000 in Third War Loan bond sales, bringing the grand total for the tour close to $1,060,000,000.

Arriving here at 1 p.m. the Cavalcade stars, Kay Kyser's band and members of the accompanying staff were whisked away in Army and police escorted buses to Ft. Worth. There they were greeted by 13,000 persons who jammed the Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum and an overflow crowd of 2,000 who heard the three-hour Cavalcade show over loud speakers in an adjoining auditorium.

The War Finance Committee representatives tallied the matinee's War Bond gate at $13,000,000.

After the matinee, the troupe was driven back to Dallas and served dinner aboard their special train while it was hauled over to the Cotton Bowl and shunted on a sidetrack.

The Bowl, a sellout well in advance of the film celebrities arrival, was packed to overflowing by a crowd of 45,000 people who gave the stars a rousing reception. Dallas admission to the show paid off $35,000,000 additional for the Third War Loan Drive.

Wearied by a double-header, the troupe's cast hurriedly piled aboard the special train and headed for San Antonio, where the show will play tomorrow night. The final playdate will be in San Francisco Saturday, with the Cavalcade returning to Hollywood early Sunday afternoon.

'People in the show biz themselves do not realize the tremendous impression their efforts and cooperation have created in Government circles,' Daily Variety was told by Oscar Doob, lent to the Treasury for the campaign by Loew's. 'The show business has done a wonderful job, with the hardest part yet to come. Never in any previous War loan has there been so much showmanship and ballyhoo used to sell bonds as in this one.

'When I came over to the Treasury, I thought I was leaving show business, but found myself deeper in it than ever. The entertainment world has created the technique which has been found to be the best seller of bonds.

DAVIS REMOVAL FROM OWI URGED BY TABER IN HOUSE

Washington, Sept. 21.—Elmer Davis and Congressman John Taber, New York Republican who grows fat on ripping into the Office of War Information, are at it again. Davis, Taber asserted in the House today, 'possesses neither the capacity nor the desire to improve OWI, either at home or abroad. What OWI needs is Mr. Davis' removal and a complete reorganization under a business manager,' he said.

'The House appropriations committee ought to investigate certain personnel of the overseas branch which, rather than getting better, is getting worse.'

Taber is ranking Republican on the appropriations committee, and the OWI overseas branch is getting ready to request a supplemental appropriation of $5,000,000.

Davis immediately fired back with a statement in which he asserted:

'Congressman Taber, in his renewed attack on OWI, is wrong as usual. He says that our overseas activities are getting worse instead of better. The men we are fighting, the German and Japanese propaganda agencies, take a different view. Mr. Taber's earlier attack on the agency of Government propaganda abroad has been extensively and approvingly quoted by our enemies.

'The July 4 issue of "Das Reich," magazine of the German propaganda ministry, which is the mouth piece of Dr. Goebbels himself, said that "the attack of Congressman Taber has caused the American people to look more closely into OWI, its men, and its dollar-devouring giant machinery." Mr. Taber, in his attacks on OWI, can count on a cheering section in Berlin and Tokyo.'

Exhibs See Danger In Distrib Demand For Pct. Deals

New York, Sept. 21.—Exhibitors see a dangerous trend in increasing demands of distributors for percentage deals, fearing latter are attempting a permanent standard for sales this year. Exhib contention is that distribs are willing to hold out until it hurts if there is a chance to establish a standard and wipe out all future flat rental deals.

Theatre sources are also of the opinion that distributors can afford to be independent, they are making so much money, hinting that government would share greater portion of every dollar of loss than would occur from holdouts due to excess profits taxes, so actual cash loss to distribs would be relatively small. Understood that some companies, heretofore dealing in both percentage and flat rental sales, have already checked the field to estimate just what first year losses would be if holding out for percentage terms all down the line.

Wholesale rejection of contract applications sent out by distributors throughout the country are resulting from higher rental demands. All companies are seeking stiffer terms as well as an extension of the number of percentage dates. Accounts which formerly played flat, except for possibly Metro, in certain houses, are being bombarded for sharing deals.

CECIL BROWN QUITS CBS IN ROW OVER CENSORING HIS NEWS BROADCASTS

New York, Sept. 22.—Radio censorship controversy came further into the open today with announcement by Cecil Brown of his resignation as CBS news commentator. He revealed at a press conference that his leaving the New York staff was entirely because he finds 'it impossible to continue my work under the news policy' as Paul White, news and special events chief, has 'formulated it for CBS.'

In a letter to White, and in statements to reporters, he emphatically denied White's quoted assertion in the dailies that the resignation 'was in no manner connected with the present censorship row.' He showed reporters his correspondence with White over whether his broadcast of August 25 had been editorial or reportorial, with White's written instructions to him to 'conform' to the CBS policy or end his contract with the network.

He also made public his letter of reply, in which he reiterated that 'it is no part of my desire, nor my sense of duty to the American people as a reporter and analyzer of news to forsake my honesty, experi-

ARMY WORKING FOR PUBLIC SHOWING OF TWO CAPRA PIX

Washington, Sept. 22.—The joint British-American film on the Tunisian campaign, on which Col. Frank Capra is working for the U. S., is scheduled for completion about Nov. 1. Release in this country is expected about Dec. 1.

As previously predicted by Daily Variety it has been tentatively decided to have the British Information Service handle the picture via regular commercial distribution, similar to what the British do for their own official films. This will be a sharp departure from practices of the American army to date, but there is no army regulation or policy which forbids such distribution according to army spokesmen. Probability is that the U. S. Army's share of the net will go to the Army Emergency Relief or a similar fund.

It is also reported here that the Army may push for public release on the 'Battle of Russia,' newest of the Frank Capra indoctrination films,

Only on to be shown publicly in this was 'Prelude to War,' although the British have requested and obtained several for general distribution in England. Newest to be okayed for British public showings is 'Battle of Britain.' OWI arranged the deal at the request of the English.

DESPITE the current rosy outlook of the various global battlefronts, major companies still are continuing to pile up heavy backlog of product as protection against heavy inroads into studio and talent manpower through revisions of present regulations on essentiality of film workers. With one or two exceptions, all of the majors expect to complete shooting on all pictures for the 1943-44 season on or before the first of January, and, in some cases, pictures planned for shooting in January and February will carry the particular companies through the fall season of 1944. In cases of pictures with war themes, studios are shooting these onto the market as soon as production and editing is completed, so that insurance is provided against film rental losses if war should end suddenly.

Following the preview, which had nine walkouts, with other patrons taking brief intermissions, RKO executives prevailed on Goldwyn to soften up the picture and take out the rough spots, as well as cut down the running time, which is being done.

RKO TAKING OVER CARTHAY CIRCLE

deciding to use trio as triple day-daters under its own operations starting Oct. 1.

Carthay Circle, a 1516-seater, was built by the developers of the Carthay Real Estate section, 15 to 16 years ago, and for several years was operated by Fred Miller on an independent set-up. House was later leased by F-WC, which has had varied policy of first run, road shows and second runs.

Theatre last year had a box office gross of approximately $287,000, its best twelve months with better than six month's gross of the season given over to extended runs on top features and the remainder to day-dating with Grauman-Chinese, Loew's State and Ritz Theatres in the F-WC deluxe string.

Leasing deal between RKO and F-WC does not involve any product exchange some contracts held by former for local first runs with RKO, Columbia and Universal, but is a straight lease as worked out between Edward Alperson, general manager of RKO Theatres and Charles P. Skouras, National Theatre prexy.

Final details and signing of pact is expected to take place when Skouras returns from trip to the Denver territory first of the week.

Always a Bridesmaid

(Comedy-Drama With Songs)

Universal production. Stars the Andrews Sisters. Supporting cast: Patric Knowles, Grace McDonald, Charles Butterworth, Billy Gilbert, Edith Barrett, Addison Richards, Walter Baldwin, Eddy Waller, Charles Williams, Matt Willis, Jivin' Jacks and Jills. Director, Erle C. Kenton. Associate producer, Ken Goldsmith. Screenplay, Mel Ronson. Original story, Oscar Brodney. Photography, John W. Boyle. Art direction, John B. Goodman, Harold MacArthur. Running time: 59 MINS.

Andrews Sisters' warbling in this tuneful comedy-drama assures its success as a box-office scorer. Picture is endowed with a mild plot sufficiently engaging to retain audience interest, Patric Knowles and Grace McDonald taking over the romantic side with acceptable proficiency. Billy Gilbert and Charles Butterworth also are in for some good moments, and Jivin' Jacks and Jills provide the jitterbug action.

Story is built around a Lonely Hearts Club which Andrews gals plug over the radio with their singing. Number of people have been garnisheed out of their savings at this club, and District Attorney assigns Knowles, his deputy, to investigate. Knowles joins the club and plot takes up formally from here, with Butterworth a phoney colonel selling stock in his synthetic rubber business, Grace McDonald a mysterious figure in the club who finally emerges a special investigator for the police, and Gilbert a screwy cafe owner in love with one of the sisters. Sisters, of course, are on the up-and-up, popping into the plot continually to harmonize on solid sending end of five songs.

Picture is brightly interspersed with this singing and the jitterbug dancing of the Jivin' Jacks and Jills. For this reason, it will be highly acceptable to more youthful audiences, who will find film right in the groove. As directed by Erle C. Kenton, rapid pace is maintained in these numbers, and rest of action is generally in same tempo.

A Scream In the Dark

(Melodrama)

Republic release. Cast: Robert Lowery, Marie McDonald, Edward S. Brophy, Wally Vernon, Hobart Cavanaugh, Jack LaRue, Elizabeth Russell, Frank Fenton, William Haade, Linda Brent, Arthur Loft, Kitty McHugh. Associate producer-director, George Sherman. Screen play, Gerald Schnitzer, Anthony Coldeway. Based on novel, 'The Morgue is Always Open,' by Jerome Odlum. Photography, Reggie Lanning. Musical director, Morton Scott. Film editor, Arthur Roberts. Sound, Tom Carman. Art director, Russell Kimball. Set decorations, Otto Siegel. Wardrobe, Adele Palmer. Reviewed at the Orpheum, Los Angeles, Sept. 22, 1943. Running time: 55 MINS.

'A Scream in the Dark' has a generous fun pattern running through its melodramatics and comes up a solid whodunit for the mystery trade as developed under the producer-director guidance of George Sherman. Cast is capable and walks through the well-written script adaptation of Jerome Odlum's novel, 'The Morgue Is Always Open,' for expert results.

Robert Lowery, police reporter on the morgue beat, leaves his job to turn private detective so he can marry the daughter of the police chief. There's plenty of gold in private investigating but none comes Lowery's way until his fiancee sends him a client who is looking for a missing wife. Four murders, any number of screams in the dark and other dire doings spin through the plot, screenplayed by Gerald Schnitzer and Anthony Coldeway, before Lowery is able to crack the case. Telling of the story is done with tongue-in-cheek style of current-day screen whodunits, with either a laugh or a murder likely to crop up at any time.

Lowery turns loose a pleasing personality in the lead, a net job. Marie McDonald is the fiancee, teaming well with Lowery. Edward S. Brophy takes care of the comedy as Lowery's detective partner, ex-news photog, aided in the laughs by Wally Vernon, keeper of the city morgue. Jack LaRue shows up well as a police detective. Hobart Cavanaugh, Elizabeth Russell and Frank Fenton are the well-portrayed villains. Victims are William Haade, Linda Brent and Arthur Loft, all good.

Photography by Reggie Lanning, music, tight film editing and other production credits contribute to making this sound, commercial film material in the smaller budgeted class.

Film Buyers View Product Outlook Better Than '42

New York, Sept. 22. — Theatre film buyers view the product outlook as much stronger than last fall, despite fact distributors are slowing up national release dates and holding back on pictures. Distribs, although having backlogs enough, in some cases, to go a whole season, are watching each other closely to see what the other fellow does. This is resulting in theatres booking close to schedule and spreading product over longer periods.

There is also considerable juggling of pictures for release. However, with what is made available this month, plus prospects for October, as yet not very definite, buyers take a better view of the future than same time last year. Carry-over of August-September releases into October-November, in event supply during latter two months is leaner than expected, will also help.

Distributors generally were stronger on product released this September than last.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

Washington, Sept. 22.—The House's acceptance of the Fulbright resolution as 'the first step in the process of building a foreign policy' may facilitate the pending tripartite negotiations. Special importance is being added to the forthcoming conferences in view of the current Soviet advances. With the recapture of Smolensk and Kiev the Nazi armies are left very little territory in Russia, and as the Dneiper line becomes more flexible and the Soviet air and ground forces push the Nazis back at many points, Poland becomes the next battlefront. The Nazi pretense of an 'elastic withdrawal' no longer conceals the real situation, since the blows which they have suffered can offer no possible recovery, and regardless of where a stand is attempted, it is not the same powerful juggernaut which made the occupation. Its weakened and demoralized outfits are no longer fighting for victory, but only to save themselves from annihilation. Many important developments may be expected soon.

Treasury Tax Plan Takes Big Slice Of Film Incomes

Washington, Sept. 22. — Treasury's new income tax plan submitted to President Roosevelt today will take another large nick out of the salaries of Hollywood's film personalities. The President has asked for 12 billion dollars additional revenue. The Treasury plan made public today would yield eight billion dollars of this amount.

The income tax phase of the revenue bill will amount to taking 30 cents out of every dollar under the pay-as-you-go plan instead of the prevalent 20 cents now being taken in the lower brackets. The present 13% surtax in the lower bracket will be jumped 100%. The present Victory tax, however, will be included in this surtax.

The basic rate, now 6% normal plus 13% first bracket surtax, plus 3% net Victory tax, totaling 22%, would, under the new plan, amount to 32%. Of that amount, however, 13% would be refunded at the conclusion of the war.

BROWN QUITS CBS IN CENSORSHIP ROW

ence and judgment by becoming a complete automaton relaying someone else's notion of news.'

He revealed that Johns-Manville recently failed to renew his contract, at $1,000 a week, for nightly five-minute news spot, and explained that the CBS staff assignment paid him $58,000 a year. His Johns-Manville assignment and network job both end this Friday.

It is evident that the entire matter of freedom of expression on radio is crystalizing into a major public issue. It will certainly be a subject of violent dispute for some time to come, not only in radio, but in press and public and governmental circles. Some trade observers believe it will be an active issue for many years, and may always be in process of development and clarification with changing times and public thought.

H. V. Kaltenborn, whose speech last week before the National Associatiton of Broadcasters party precipitated the present controversy, again attacked CBS on the matter today, charging that the network's ad in Monday's dailies, publicizing its policy, was prompted by 'bad conscience.' He said CBS is the only network taking this position on censorship, adding that as a result it is losing its public on the news. CBS now hasn't a single commentator who is among the first five, or even 10, in popularity, he declared. White later refused to comment on Kaltenborn's charges.

Meanwhile, the Blue Network, which has had numerous censorship disputes recently with Walter Winchel and others, is not making any announcements regarding its policy. Network officials are preparing a statement of policy on the entire matter of news comment, news reporting, handling of controversial issues and sale of time for public discussion, in response to a request from James L. Fly, Federal Communications Commission chairman. Pending that, they have nothing to say publicly.

Brown's spot for Johns-Manville goes to Bill Henry, now in Washington for CBS and formerly with the Los Angeles Times. Brown has no radio plans at the moment. He is writing a book, 'War Correspondent's Report on America,' for Random House and has magazine and lecture commitments.

Jackson Parks Out At Goldwyns After Stormy Session

Jackson Parks yesterday left the employ of Samuel Goldwyn as publicity unit man after stormy session incited by an incident involving Danny Kaye, star of 'Up In Arms,' and his wife, Sylvia Fine, who writes all of Kaye's material.

Parks, on assignment from William Hebert, publicity director for Goldwyn, had written a rough biography of Kaye about a week ago, and had submitted it for correction and elaboration to Kaye and his wife, according to information from the Goldwyn lot. After keeping the biog several days, the Kayes are reported to have handed it to Goldwyn with the comment that it seemed to them in 'bad taste.' Goldwyn at once is said to have echoed the 'bad taste' phrase and to have ordered Parks fired pronto. Later a different reason is said to have been substituted for ousting Parks, who had been assistant to Hebert for a year.

Reached last night, Parks refused comment.

Pete Reports More Indians

Pete Harrison, editor and publisher of Harrison's Reports, has got the production bug, and it looks as if the Industry's 'pal' is going to stick around here for a long spell and publish his weekly Reports by remote control. He and E. B. Derr, who wrote the screenplay of 'Deerslayer,' which they produced for Republic, were so elated over their initial effort that they're planning to do another, 'The Last of the Mohicans,' the James Fenimore Cooper opus, on which they'll do the screenplay and then produce for Republic release. 'Deerslayer' has not been previewed as yet, with Daily Variety seeking a jury of five producer pals of Pete to do a composite notice on the film, just like those Pete has written on their productions. Some 25 already have volunteered, and the sifting process now is going on.

DECCA CUTS FIRST PLATTERS HERE SINCE WAR WITH AFM

Decca launched cutting of musical transcriptions for its World Broadcasting subsidiary here yesterday, following lifting of ban on use of American Federation of Musicians members by president James C. Petrillo last weekend when accord was reached with Decca-World.

However, no word has been received from Decca prez Jack Kapp for green light on regular record cutting, and indications are that he will come to the coast himself to launch resumption of plattering for the record division.

Group includes: Bing Crosby, Jimmy Dorsey and band, Andrews Sisters, Judy Garland, Deanna Durbin, Mills Brothers, Delta Rhythm Boys and several Hill Billie ensembles.

'BONDSTORMERS' STORM SAN 'TONIO FOR 15,000G

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 22.—A typical Texas reception, with an estimated two-thirds of the city's population lining the parade route, awaited the 'bondstormers' of the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade upon their arrival here today. The parade was augmented by a colorful turnout of military units. Police and military protection for the stars was perfectly organized.

Today's performance was timed for 5 to 7:30 p.m., because of Kay Kyser's national broadcast. The City Auditorium was sold out to a capacity audience of 6500 bond buyers the first two days of the sale.

Actual admissions brought in $8,000,000, but because of the impetus given the drive by the Cavalcade's visit to San Antonio, John D. Williamson, Third War loan chairman in Bexar county, said 'Thanks to the Cavalcade, our 'blockbusters' have sold $15,250,000 in bonds.' He credited the entire amount to the Cavalcade.

The entire star lineup of the Cavalcade paid tribute to Kyser tonight by attending his broadcast at Randolph Field.

Although wearied by their double-double-header performances in Ft. Worth and Dallas yesterday, the stars responded enthusiastically to San Antonio's welcome and were roundly acclaimed for their work in behalf of the Third War Loan Drive, for which they have checked up sales of more than one billion dollars.

The touring stars have one more show that at San Francisco then will return home with the satisfaction of a job well done.

TOUR STARTS SEPT. 4

The Hollywood Bond Cavalcade's special train pulled out of Hollywood Sept. 4, heading for Washington, where the stars participated in a three network broadcast on Sept. 8, with President Roosevelt participating. They moved on to Philadelphia for their first performance, playing to a crowd of 14,500 and disposing of $12,500,000 in War Bonds. Their next stop was Boston.

Other cities visited included Pittsburgh, New York, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Ft. Worth, Dallas and San Antonio. Their final stand will be in San Francisco.

The Cavalcade more than doubled its bond sale quota of $500,000,000 at the performance in New Orleans. At that show, Greer Garson told the audience that sales by the Cavalcade in its nation-wide tour had passed the billion dollar mark.

The all-star Cavalcade cast has been greeted by rousing receptions in all cities. In St. Louis the thousands lining the parade route broke through and it was some time before military and police could get their cars swung into place.

nual Class B membership meeting to be held at the Hollywood Legion Stadium on Oct. 3, will offer extra players who favor autonomy a choice of a local charter from the Guild or the opportunity to ask the AAAA for a direct charter.

'Vote on the autonomy issue will be taken from the entire membership through a mailed ballot, following the Oct. 3 meeting, with each member asked to indicate first whether he approves separation from the Guild for extra players, and, for those who do approve, which type of autonomous structure he favors.

'Full outline of the proposed plan will be presented to members at the annual meeting, which the Guild is urging all B members to attend. Except for the relationship to the parent organization, detail of the two autonomy plans will be substantially the same.

'Administration of the affairs of the Class B membership is currently in the hands of the Board of Directors elected by the Class A membership. Such authority was delegated to the Board by an overwhelming vote of the Class B membership three years ago, when they voluntarily disbanded the Class B Council.

John Lee Mahin did the writing, will show performance of plane gunners in raids across the English Channel on occupied France and Germany, and will be used as an aid in recruiting top men for this particular end of the Army Air Forces.

Former Metro star has already participated in four raids over the Channel, probably five by now since several weeks have elapsed since last report, filming actual bombing runs and other air action. In addition to his own camera work, Capt. Gable had camera crews on other planes filming battle footage. He has also taken considerable footage of practice flights and ground work.

According to reports from abroad, Capt. Gable has encountered considerable difficulties in obtaining proper footage due to hazards of work and technical problems of filming in the cold of high altitudes and stopping speed of attacking fighter planes.

LOEW-LYONS MAKE RECORD BID OF 600G FOR 'FATHER'

Loew-Lyons are making top bid for screen rights to a Broadway play by offering Oscar Serlin, producer of 'Life With Father' $600,000. Proposition is to guarantee Serlin $600,000 against 50% of the picture's profits, plus an invite for him to act as associate producer of the film. In addition, on the deal, Howard Lindsey and Russell Crouse, who wrote the stage play are to do the screen treatment.

Serlin had a $500,000 film price on the property some time ago and when one of major companies met it the bid was rejected.

Loew-Lyons are keeping their fingers crossed awaiting the Serlin reply to their proffer as they want, if the bid is accepted, to put the film into immediate production for United Artists release.

UNION OIL is packing up and moving again, this time from CBS to Don Lee with its 'Point Sublime' show. Dramatic piece starring Cliff Arquette started on NBC, and after its time was preempted by the network, moved to CBS. Now, after 13 weeks, the program is moving over to Don Lee. Understood that change of networks was prompted by increasing cost per 1,000 listeners as reflected by the Hooper survey. At NBC when its rating reached 14.8, Union Oil figured its cost per thousand dialers was $5. When the rating slipped to 6.5 at CBS the cost increased to around $22. At CBS it was said that inability to clear time on one of its northwest outlets was responsible for the pull-out, and that Union Oil, which has been moved around considerably, has been given a long-time guarantee by Don Lee of the Monday night time it is moving into immediately following 'Sherlock Holmes.' Union Oil currently is sponsoring the news commentary period of General David Barrows on the Don Lee Coast net.

BECAUSE of immense boost in picture grosses, costly action scenes now can be incorporated by studio execs without the wince of a financial nerve. How steep action costs may run for a few scenes is exampled in Metro's 'White Cliffs of Dover' for which extras and stuntmen during two days' filming of the Dieppe raid sequence got a total of $12,355. Stunters were getting upward of $100 per day, and extras in battle action $35. In ordinary peace times, with closer guard on budgets, costs like these are seldom incurred for similar scenes. Another picture, Samuel Goldwyn's 'North Star,' recently had $18,000 allotted to one fire scene in which every player, including children, received $35 minimum. Action step-up in many pictures also is due considerably to the pace in violent activity being set for war pictures and documentary dramas.

PARAMOUNT, it is reported, will have a problem with its new star, Sonny Tufts. It's a matter of coin. The lad is getting $200 a week, while Paramount obtained Maureen O'Hara, whose salary for the loan period would have been $30,000, from RKO for his use opposite Olivia de Havilland in 'Government Girl.' The lad, a former New York cafe entertainer who got his film start in 'So Proudly We Hail,' which brought him to stardom, has quite a few managers, etc., who are in for a big chunk of his earnings. They feel that with his value established, coin should be forthcoming, and are determined his present ticket be forgotten by the company and a new one tendered him, to start in four figures.

No longer does the glutted cast sit around the festive banquet table and devour steaks, chops, poultry and whatnot, as in the simple days when victuals were tossed about with old-time Hollywood abandon. Nowadays when the producer wants to make a film fan's mouth water, he shoots a scene in a tomato field at harvest time, and his actors eat while they work, and never kick about retakes as they did in more plentiful days when they were required to eat three pheasants in one afternoon and still pretend they were hungry.

Corvette K-225

(Action Drama)

Universal release of a Howard Hawks production. Co-stars Randolph Scott, James Brown. Supporting cast: Ella Raines, Barry Fitzgerald, Andy Devine, Fuzzy Knight, Noah Beery, Jr., Richard Lane, Thomas Gomez, David Bruce, Murray Alper, James Flavin, Walter Sande. Director, Richard Rosson. Producer, Howard Hawks. Original screenplay, John Rhodes Sturdy, Lieut., R.C.N.V.R. Photography, Tony Gaudio. Convoy photography, Harry Perry. Special photographic effects, John Fulton. Art direction, John B. Goodman, Robert Boyle. Sets, R. A. Gausman, A. J. Gilmore. Musical score, David Buttolph. Musical director, Charles Previn. Editor, Edward Curtiss. Previewed at Filmarte Theatre, Hollywood, Sept. 23, 1943. Running time: 96 MINS.

Packed with solid dramatic values of highly spectacular nature, 'Corvette K-225' is a stirring melodrama of that branch of the Canadian Navy which up until recently has been comparatively unknown. Its story concerns the part these small ocean fighters and their men play in safeguarding convoy passages across the North Atlantic, and as a box-office attraction it may be highly exploited. Interesting and thrilling photographic effects were achieved by director Richard Rosson and a camera crew aboard such a corvette as that one whose life story is etched for the picture, and the footage taken on several trips across the Atlantic has been realistically interwoven in the action which tells of a convoy crossing.

Story for 'Corvette' was authored by Lieut. John Rhodes Sturdy, of the Canadian Navy, who had seen actual service on corvettes at sea, and to the unfoldment of this authentic tale of this service was given the full cooperation of the Canadian Navy. Such collaboration was offered that the picture at times attains the stature of a documentary, and as such is primarily interesting for what it stands for.

The plot is simple, history of a corvette whose sole purpose is to see that a convoy reaches its destination safely overseas. Interest rests primarily in the daily life aboard this particular corvette, commanded by Randolph Scott. Action, once the convoy takes off from Canada, isn't long in coming, with storms tearing at the sea bulldog, which later is attacked by Nazi planes and still later battles to the death with a German sub.

Rosson in his direction early hits a fast pace which never slackens as the corvette reaches submarine waters. Against the documentary background of the picture is blended a human story with a suggestion of romance between Scott and Ella Raines—in the opening sequences—later Scott's efforts to build into an officer her brother aboard his corvette, whole effect being interestingly worked out with dramatic intensity.

Scott turns in a rugged impersonation of the Naval officer, and James Brown, who co-stars with him, acquits himself forcibly in a less colorful role. Ella Raines, who makes her screen bow in this Howard Hawks production, gives promise of the future with a pleasing dramatic presence. Others to be singled out include Barry Fitzgerald, in a top performance, Andy Devine, David

Outlaws of Stampede Pass

(Western)

Monogram release. Cast: Johnny Mack Brown, Raymond Hatton, Ellen Hall, Jon Dawson, Harry Woods, Charles King, Edmund Cobb, Sam Flint, Mauritz Hugo, Art Mix, Herman Hack, Artie Ortego, Milburn Morante, Eddie Burns. Director, Wallace Fox. Producer, Scott R. Dunlap. Screen play, Jess Bowers. Original story, Johnston McCulley. Photography, Marcel Le Picard. Production manager, C. J. Bigelow. Assistant director, Theodore Joss. Film editor, Carl Pierson. Sound, Glen Glenn. Musical director, Edward Kay. Reviewed at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, Sept. 23, 1943. Running time: 55 MINS.

Johnny Mack Brown and Raymond Hatton continue their range detecting in 'Outlaws of Stampede Pass,' following pattern set by preceding oaters in the series and generally proving this one okay for the Saturday matinees. The Jess Bowers screen play, from original by Johnston McCulley, again has the pair entering a western town, disguising identity of United States Marshals, to smoke out a gang of prairie badmen.

Brown becomes a cattle buyer, looking for a cheap purchase, and Hatton is rural dentist, ready to yank any troublesome molar. Jon Dawson, nephew of Hatton's, loses his cattle to rustlers, is taking in a crook poker game and shot in the back, all in one night, to set the plot for cleanup. Brown and Hatton launch their sleuthing, spot the villain as Harry Woods, and shoot their way through trouble to satisfy the law and the decent townspeople.

Production doesn't permit Brown chance to inject any spectacular stunts, which would have added extra action, but otherwise he is the stalwart outdoor hero. Hatton spots some chuckles in the dentist character as well as taking care of some neat gunplay. Woods is good as the heavy, supported in the dirty work by Charles King, Mauritz Hugo, Art Mix and others. Dawson and Ellen Hall carry the sagebrush romance and Sam Flint shows well as a honest citizen.

Wallace Fox handled the direction of this Scott R. Dunlap production. Photography and other credits are standard.

'Ice Follies' Trys For Sensationalism But Falters

For flash, gingerbread and spectacle, the 1944 issue of Shipstads and Johnson's 'Ice Follies,' which premiered last night at the Pan Pacific Auditorium, in many respects transcends previous editions. For pace, artistry and entertainment it doesn't measure up with last year's production or ones previous.

It is all too evident that the producers have reached for something new and novel and accomplished little beyond some grotesque routines and silly posturings. Seemingly, the experiment wasn't worth it, judging from audience reaction. Rarely were there any mass spontaneous outbursts such as used to greet the turns of skaters in previous years, with bladers relying on their virtuosity on the blades, rather than a spectacular backup. Resultantly, the pace falters and the fidgets sets in among the onlookers.

That nothing new has been added to excite the ice fans can be gathered from the fact that the Maxsons, Ruby and Bobby, tie up the show in the waltz number, as in all previous editions of the 'Follies.' This time they're given a semi-featured spot in the ring-around-the-rink and are still hot favorites with the icetravaganza set. The others rate the usual plaudits but cannot quite match the reception for the Maxsons and the spectacular production numbers.

Second act opener, an oriental fantasy bathed in fluorescence, easily is the topper among production numbers and as gorgeous a spectacle as ever has been beheld on ice or pine boards. The others rely purely on flash to get over with the ringsiders, who shelled out $3.30 to get a first look at the new issue and cool off—which they didn't. Brows were mopped and fanned by programs during the entire evening. The power of suggestion didn't work, either.

Most of the 'Follies' regulars are still around cavorting on the frapped flooring. There's Roy Shipstad, Bess Ehrhardt, Norah McCarthy, Phyllis Legg, Osborne Colson, Papez and Zwack, Heinie Brock, Frick and Frack, Betty Atkinson, Oscar Johnson and a few others of lesser calibre. 'Follies' will be around for a few weeks and do terrific biz. Ice shows have their own following and the sustained campaign by the downtown sheets, which are cut in for a percentage of the proceeds will keep the ticket racks clean.

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

Washington, Sept. 23.—Allied operations in the Aegean sea, where several islands in the Dodecanese group recently were occupied by Allied forces, are being kept from the spotlight. Informed quarters, however, attach great importance to that part of Europe, most likely for its strategic importance as a possible jumping-off place for a pincer attack on the Balkans. Latest reports also indicate that Yugoslav guerrillas are extending their control to the Adriatic coast region, obviously to prepare bridgeheads for Allied forces moving in from Italy. It always has been Prime Minister Churchill's theory that it was preferable to attack Germany via Greece, Serbia and Hungary. The current Soviet successes followed by the hasty Nazi evacuation of the southern areas strongly supports the assumption that an early Allied move into the Balkans is likely. It looks very much as though Kiev will be in Russian hands again on Sunday.

Seattle Theatres and Cafes Win Licenses

Seattle, Sept. 23.—A number of theatres and cafes here now have city licenses to operate after City Council acted on applications, some of which have been pending for months. Those granted included 10 theatres, owners of which declared their readiness to obey all rules and carry out the safety measures required, but pointed to manpower and material shortages that sometimes hold up work. This situation was adjusted in a series of conferences between the theatre operators and city officials.

TAFT ASKS FILM BIZ AID IN WAR JUVENILE PROBLEMS

Appearing before a group of 50 film industry leaders last night at Perino's, Charles P. Taft, director of community war services for the Federal Security Agency, made concrete suggestions as to cooperation which might be extended by the industry in handling wartime juvenile problems. E. On that committee are William F. Crockett, Ralph Branton, Jack Kirsch, with Abram F. Myers as his alternate, Neil F. Agnew and Frank La False.

Taft told the film executives:

'Here you can help tremendously. You should consider the theatre and its screen program as a valuable resource for educating and informing the youngsters of your community. It is possible also to use special matinees for members of clubs or other youth groups as a reward for cooperation in a community program.'

Attending the meeting were Max Alexander, Edward Arnold, Maurice Benjamin, Jeffry Bernard, George Bowser, O. Henry Briggs, George Brown, Trem Carr, I. E. Chadwick, Lester Cole, Ned E. 'Snow White' Voices Suit Against Disney Is Reinstated

New York, Sept. 23.—The $300,000 suit filed last winter by Adrian Caselotto and Harry Stockwell against Walt Disney, Ltd., and RCA Victor, was restored on the court calendar for trial in New York Supreme court today.

Miss Caselotto, who dubbed in Snow White voice, and Stockwell, who did Prince Charming in Disney's 'Snow White,' had claimed that Disney violated an oral agreement that voices would be used only in film, but Disney, they allege, sold sound track to RCA, thereby ruining personal appearance and record employment opportunities.

The Supreme court decision was based on a jury disagreement over the case.

Griffis Still Top Man for Mellett's Position in OWI

Washington, Sept. 23.—Despite rumors that he has turned down a big bid, Stanton Griffis, Paramount bond chairman, remains very much in the picture as the industry man to head the OWI Motion Picture Bureau as successor to Lowell Mellett.

Informed sources here say Palmer Hoyt, chief of the OWI Domestic Branch, is out to get Griffis for the post by hook or crook. Griffis is figured as a man who would be more than acceptable to the Government and who, because of his popularity in the industry, could swing the job to a King's taste.

There appears no chance that Mellett will ever come back to the job, although his chief disagreements were with Gardner Cowles, former head of the Domestic Branch who left OWI months ago.

Somewhere in Iran

(Formerly Clayton, Persia & Durante)

Dear Arthur:

Just a line to thank you for the Daily Varieties you have been sending me. I get a batch every time I return to my temporary base, and brother, I go for 'em like Abe Lyman goes for that No. 3 special at Lindy's.

You can't imagine, Arthur, how tough it is to be in Africa weeks and weeks, and not know what 'Benny the Gouge' sez. It is also embarrassing when I walk down the streets of Benghazi, and an Arab stops me and asks if George Raft has been suspended again, and I can't answer him.

Knowing these things makes the trip much easier, and I don't have to be a wallflower on the terrace. Met Bill Keighley and Gene Markey in my travels. We settled the war, pictures, and everything else in 20 minutes.

Have been overseas going on seven weeks. So far it has been wonderful, and an experience I wouldn't have missed for all the tea in Tel-aviv. This is a real vacation, Arthur—new places, new faces and a lot of fun working. I hope much more entertainment reaches the boys here from New York and Hollywood. They need it badly, particularly in places like the Persian Gulf—hot as hell, but where the boys are doing a terrifically important job. Their morale must be kept up. It is all very exciting and worth two or three months of any actor's time, if he is available.

We did a broadcast from———last week to the United States at 1 a.m. (3 p.m. L.A. time). As soon as it was over we found out that on account of atmospheric conditions we didn't hit the States at all. We're going to try it again. Larry Adler and I wrote the show, and we are both proud of ourselves, if not of each other.

No other news—will see you in a few weeks.

Again my thanks, and regards to all.

JACK BENNY.

P.S.:—I visited Jerusalem and Jessel's book is selling like Matzoh cakes.

SHORT CUT TO "KNOW HOW"

With time-saving, life-saving movies.... outgrowth of Kodak's pioneer Teaching Films..... the Army and Navy are giving millions the "know how" of war

HISTORICAL NOTE—Back in 1923, having perfected "safety" film—making classroom projection practical—Kodak made available 16-mm. movie cameras and projectors . . . and shortly afterwards pioneered a program of teaching films for schools.

PUT yourself in the boots of one of these young men. You've been accepted for the Army or Navy. What do you know about this war of 2,000-horsepower aircraft motors . . . Bazookas . . . submarine detectors?

Our Army and Navy Commands realize this lack of experience. They know that you may go up against battle-wise troops or ship crews or flyers.

They have done the worrying for you. They will turn you out a better man—more competent in the use of your weapons, abler to take care of yourself—than any "trainee" who ever went before you.

TRAINING FILMS are a great and growing part of their system. The Army and Navy have made thousands.

Don't get the idea that you're just "going to the movies," though. These movies are different. Each teaches you to do a part of your job in the Service—do it exactly right.

Maybe it's how to dig a foxhole. Or inflate a rubber life raft. Or take down and reassemble a 50-calibre machine gun. Or—bake a batch of bread . . .

In an Army and Navy made up largely of "specialists," thousands of films are not too many. (Kodak is a major supplier of film for these pictures—one big reason civilians are not getting all the film they want.)

You'll see battle, in these training movies. You'll hear it—to make your new life and work "second nature" under all conditions. You'll be hardened . . . ready to "dish it out and take it" . . . up to 40% sooner because of Training Films.

After this war is won, you—and millions like you who have learned so much, so easily, through training films—will want your children to learn the Arts of Peace this way.

Teaching through motion pictures and slide film—steadily growing in importance during the twenty years since Kodak made its first teaching films available—will really come into its own . . . Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Kornblum, Fifield Resign Executive Posts With AFRA

for his resignation, Kornblum stated:

'About five years ago I was urgently requested to take over the administration of AFRA here because it was in its formative stage, and needed the type of guidance that it was thought I could give it. At that time I was engaged in the practice of law with my partner, Spencer Austrian. Despite the personal sacrifices that I had to make, and the inconvenience that I had to cause Mr. Austrian, we both agreed that the job was worth doing. At the time I accepted the responsibility I requested that Miss Georgia Fifield be appointed as my assistant. We have completed our assignment. Miss Fifield is returning to active radio work and I am returning to devote more time to the active practice of law.'

Kornblum was drafted as executive secretary and attorney for AFRA nearly five years ago when the outfit was a struggling infant, with little or no recognition, and only skeleton contracts covering wages and conditions. It is understood he was persuaded to take on the job by Laurence W. Beilenson, then counsel for the Screen Actors Guild. When Kornblum consented to take the job he named Georgia Fifield as his assistant.

AFRA today is one of the strongest union organizations on the Coast, and is highly respected by the radio corporations. It has contracts negotiated by Kornblum which have resulted in high percentage increases for all classifications, including singers, actors, announcers, etc. It has been operating in the black for some time and is understood to have a neat surplus.

One of the greatest tricks performed by Kornblum and Miss Fifield was to iron out any dissension in the rank and file, resulting in the entire membership working in unison on all important matters. It was Kornblum who insisted that the national AFRA provide for a vote by every member of the Los Angeles local when its constitution was sent east for approval.

A special meeting of the AFRA executive board was called for today to act on the resignations. Scores of AFRA leaders are reported to have already been trying to persuade Kornblum and Miss Fifield to reconsider. It is understood, however, that Kornblum feels his assignment has been completed and he desires to resume his practice of law immediately.

OWN UNION PETITION SIGNED BY 1,400 XTRAS

good and welfare of all Class B members.

WANT PLAN DETAILS

'First, we request sufficiently in advance of the meeting of Oct. 3, 1943, that you publish in detail, or send to us for such publication the Screen Actors Guild plan granting Class B members their autonomy, and which you have heretofore indicated will not be presented to the members until the evening of the meeting Oct. 3, 1943.

'The advance publication of the details of the plan is necessary to permit the Class B members at the meeting to discuss intelligently the plan and comprehend it. Otherwise, it would be unfair to thrust the plan at the Class B members, at the meeting and expect them to discuss it without having studied it in advance.

'As you probably know, the Screen Players Union represents presently the majority of the acting active working Class B members of the Guild, and that this large number of Class B members who have expressed their desire to be represented by the Screen Players Union are anxious to secure their autonomy, and that immediately.

'Accordingly we expect to hear from you and receive sufficiently in advance a detailed presentation of your plan for autonomy.

ASK ATTORNEY TO BE PRESENT

'Since we are advised that your counsel will attend the Oct. 3, 1943, meeting and either make a statement or answer questions asked of him, we respectfully request that the Guild invite our attorney, Alexander H. Schullman, so that he may attend and, if requested, make a statement or answer questions to the plan that you will propose at that time.

'We believe it important that all of the Class B members receive the benefit of all the information so that they may determine whether your contemplated plan actually gives Class B players complete autonomy as desired by them. Accordingly, we shall appreciate your courtesy, if you will extend the requested invitation to our counsel.

'Incidentally, there appeared in Daily Variety, under date of Sept. 23, 1943, a statement in effect that the Guild will aid the Class B members in securing a direct union charter from the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, if the majority of them favor such action. As you know, a majority of them has already favored such action, and practically two-thirds of all the active working Class B members have signed petitions requesting the Screen Players Union to represent them immediately for the purpose of securing a direct charter from the AAAA. This seems to obviate the necessity of any vote.

WILL SUBMIT PETITIONS

'We shall be happy to present to you or your committee these petitions for verification of this statement. We shall be happy to cooperate with you immediately, for the benefit of all Class B members, for the purpose of securing this charter from the AAAA and thereby expedite the present arbitration over wages and working conditions, at which arbitration the Class B members can then have their own collective bargaining representative.

'Heretofore, we requested of your counsel the complete list of names, addresses and card numbers of all Class B members in good standing on the books of the Screen Actors Guild. To date this has not been forthcoming. We believe we are entitled to this list so that we may present the plan of autonomy desired by the majority of the Class B members to all of the Class B members who are in good standing on your books.

DEMAND MEMBER LIST

'Your cooperation is desired, and we request that you authorize whoever has charge of these records to submit the list to us. We request that you give these matters your immediate attention, and shall expect an answer from you within a reasonable time of the receipt of this letter.'

SAG URGES ALL ATTEND

SAG in a notice to Class B members yesterday urged a full attendance at the Oct. 3 meeting. Extras were told:

'You've heard the question of autonomy discussed, pro and con, for the past six months. It's a question of vital importance to every one of you, one which will affect your professional future. Within the next few weeks, you are going to be asked to vote on this issue. Before you cast your vote, you owe it to yourself to know all of the facts, what type of self government the Guild proposes for you, how it will work, what it will mean to extra players.

'That's why it is of the greatest importance that all Class B members attend the annual membership meeting on Oct. 3. It is your one chance to get the full story, ask all the questions, hear all the answers.'

White Defends CBS Policy on News Broadcasts

New York, Sept. 23.—Paul W. White, director of news broadcasts of the Columbia Broadcasting System, in defending the chain's 'long established policy of letting the radio listener make up his own mind, rather than allowing news casters to make it up for them,' told a group of news analysts at a luncheon here today what the CBS policy was and gave the reasons for close adherence thereto.

He referred to the CBS policy as a recent 'subject of controversy' with Cecil Brown, Columbia commentator who announced his resignation due to opposition to CBS's policy and to what he termed White's objection to 'what Cecil Brown thought' the speaker stated.

'It would be a very tragic distortion of radio's function if network managements should attempt to control democratic public opinion either on a local, regional or national basis. 'It is for the same reason that we have repeatedly refused to sell time for the presentatiton of one-sided viewpoints.'

BIOFF AGAIN TURNS ON OLD PAL

New York, Sept. 26.—Blustering, squealing, Willie Bioff, who has turned copper on his former pals while locked up in the federal jail here as a felon, hasn't got out of practice on his bad tricks. He has been accused of the threatenening of Harry Hochstein, a government witness in its probe of the shakedown of the film industry by the Bioff-Browne-Capone gang.

Hochstein a former Morals Inspector in Chicago, who later became involved with the Capone henchmen, claimed that Bioff threatened him on Thursday and again Friday. Hochstein made the statement to U. S. Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter, in connection with a perjury charge against him in relation to the investigation. Though bail of $20,000 had been asked by Boris Kostelanetz, Assistant U. S. Attorney General, on Thursday, Cotter reduced it to $10,000, indicating that he thought $20,000 was too high in view of the co-operation the Government has received from Hochstein.

Hochstein, when he went off the wrong end from his city job, became chauffeur and masseur for Frank Nitti, who was among the Caponites recently indicted here and who committed suicide when authorities were trying to take him into custody in Chicago on the charge.

SPITZ-GOETZ ANGLE FOR DISTRIB SETUP

New York, Sept. 26.—New Leo Spitz-William Goetz production unit is reported also getting set to go into major distribution field. Spitz is due east from the Coast the latter part of the week, with huddles scheduled that are aimed at trying to skirt serious obstacles such as limiting of raw stock to the 11 distributor companies, and other problems that must be ironed out.

Distribution setup is still in formative stages, but it is reported will make a serious stab toward distributing their own pictures.

A JOB WELL DONE

IT'S A proud day for show business.

The Hollywood Bond Cavalcade is home, after doing a great job—a most important one for those on the Home Front.

'Backing the Attack'—selling bonds in the Third War Loan drive around the nation for two and one half weeks. The Cavalcade had its quota, $500,000,000. But it paid no attention to the quota—that was just a bunch of figures. The touring group worked day and night, digging into every source where a dollar may have been tucked away. And comes home now with the invincible and enviable record of having more than doubled the quota, selling as one unit more than 12% of the total of bonds that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau alloted to the nation to buy.

There is no particular individual of the Cavalcade members entitled to more credit for the job, than any other. They worked as a team, each and every one of them, and the team's accomplishments prove that Show Business will always come through on any task assigned it by the government.

There will be more bond missions before the attack is over. And we can say on behalf of Show Business, that, whenever the government calls on the Film Industry to participate it will continue to find that the effort and results will be as far beyond quota and expectations as they were on this tour and that Hollywood will give its all in manpower and effort to these assignments.

Therefore Daily Variety, on behalf of the Industry, 'Salutes' today, its soldiers, who have returned from the attack, and, who are ready to start on the next one, toward victory for the Allies and Democracy.

TRIUMPHANT CAVALCADE RETURNS

With 10,000 wearying miles and $1,080,000,000 in War Bond sales behind them, the travel-strained Hollywood Bond Cavalcade returned to home base yesterday afternoon, straight into the arms of a civic reception committee which had turned out to pay tribute for a job well done.

As special train pulled up at the Glendale railway station yesterday at 2:05 p.m., a smart Navy band swung into 'California, Here We Come' and a Ziegfeldian group of Spars formed a welcoming 'V' to escort the entertainment names to the greeting platform. Before a crowd of approxi-

POINT rationing, scarcity of meat, etc., is beginning to get the studio restaurants and commissaries down. Many of them also have reduced their hours because of the labor shortage, with lot laborers pitching in to help out as bus boys at a number of eateries. Latest to be hit is Paramount, which distributed following notice: 'Everyone must realize that the Paramount restaurant operates on a point system for food, somewhat the same as that used by you as an individual. Therefore you know of course that the most stringently rationed of all foods are meats and fats. Due to the increase in points required for most meats and a decrease in the point alloted us by the local ration board, we are forced from now on to live on a greatly reduced ration of meats, butter, etc., so that you will no longer have either the selection or the quantity enjoyed in the past. We know that the employes of the studio will understand this necessary change and cooperate to the fullest extent with the management, realizing that it is something that is entirely beyond our control, and accepting it in the very best spirit.'

Until recently, when he was called back to active duty with U. S. Marine Corps, Carlson was technical advisor on picture, which stars Randolph Scott as raider commander.

AFRA NAMES SPECIAL GROUP TO GET I. B. KORNBLUM BACK

Stunned by resignation of Attorney I. B. Kornblum as executive secretary of the Los Angeles Local of the American Federation of Radio Artists, together with that of Georgia Fifield as assistant secretary, the AFRA Executive Board is delaying appointment of a new secretary in the hopes of persuading Kornblum to reconsider. Fred MacKaye, AFRA prexy, says the Board has no one in mind for the job and is hopeful of getting Kornblum back, at least on a part time basis.

Kornblum, however, insisted his resignation was definite and that there was no chance of changing his mind. There was some talk of offering the spot to Miss Fifield, with an understanding that Kornblum would continue as attorney for the Federation and advise with Miss Fifield on important policy matters and negotiations.

While Kornblum returns to the active practice of law, he will continue his connections with Actors Equity Association and Theatre Authority. He was popular with both AFRA members and employers and Board members admitted it would be difficult to fill his spot satisfactorily. A special committee is being appointed to confer with Kornblum to see if mutually satisfactory arrangements cannot be worked out.

When the star and the heavy got into a fight
In adventurous pictures of yore
There were gasps of amazement and yells of delight
As the villain wound up on the floor.
And the customers pulsed with a soul-stirring thrill
At a pre-arranged battle behind the old mill.

There are battles today in the far-away lands
Where the soldiers are fighting for keeps.
There is strife on the sands of the perilous strands.
There war in the tropical deeps.
And the film fan walks out to a neighboring bar
When the villain goes into a clinch with the star.

(War Melodrama)

Columbia production. Stars Humphrey Bogart. Cast: Bruce Bennett, Lloyd Bridges, Rex Ingram, J. Carroll Naish, Dan Duryea, Richard Nugent, Patrick O'Moore, Louis T. Mercier, Carl Harbord, Guy Kingsford, Kurt Krueger, John Wengarf and Hans Schumm. Directed by Zoltan Korda. Screenplay by John Howard Lawson and Korda. Adaptation by James O'Hanlon. Story by Philip MacDonald. Based on incident in Soviet photoplay, 'The Thirteen.' Photography by Rudolph Mate. Film editor, Charles Nelson. Assistant director, Abby Berlin. Art direction by Lionel Banks and Eugene Lourie. Musical director, M. W. Stoloff. Musical score by Miklos Rozsa. Previewed at Pantages, Sept. 24, 1943. Running time, 95 MINS.

This is one of the most logical and absorbing war melodramas that has been turned out to date. Devoid of strained dramatics, it steers a straight and suspenseful course in displaying the adventures of an American tank crew on the Libyan battlefront. 'Sahara' will click solidly at the box office for hefty biz and holdovers generally.

Story, in plotting the dramatic narrative of battling desert sands, lack of water and the Nazis in the desert wastes, logically and conclusively spins its tale with strong persuasion for the customers. There's neither romance nor a single femme in the cast, but picture nevertheless carries strong punch for the women sector of the audience. It's a grand and vivid display of American heroism on the battlefronts, without recourse to spreading things on too thick to make it apparently theatric.

Humphrey Bogart is sergeant in charge of an American 28 ton tank in Libya when the Germans crash through to the El Alemein line. Virtually surrounded, he heads south on the desert in attempt to rejoin other units, accompanied by tankmen Bruce Bennett and Dan Duryea.

Group of six soldiers are picked up at bombed-out desert casualty station; and further on Sudenese warrior Rex Ingram joins the group with his Italian prisoner, J. Carroll Naish. When Nazi flyer Kurt Krueger attacks the tank, he's shot down and taken prisoner. Expanded party creates shortage of water, with Bogart then pushing along to reach an essential water hole, and finally arriving at a deserted fort where minute supply of water is husbanded for the group.

But a German motorized battalion also follows in search of water, with advance scout car being captured for Bogart to send further south for help while he decides to hold off the Germans at the fort. The hord of Nazis are battling for water—but are held off by the little group of eight defenders in a furious battle which finally winds up with the thirst-crazed Germans surrendering to the pair of survivors, Bogart and Patrick O'Moore.

Script has been deftly and compactly set up to accentuate the dramatics of the desert adventure, and avoids over-emphasis on the dramatic side to heighten the plausibility of the tale. On the directing side, Zoltan Korda clicks in solid fashion with slick handling of both characters and situations to keep rapid pace of unfoldment throughout.

Bogart, in providing standout performance as head of the group, dominates virtually every scene in the

ANOTHER LOVE STORY

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 26.—Roland Young and Margaret Lindsay scored personal triumphs at the premiere of 'Another Love Story' at the Playhouse here, but considerable fixing is in order before the play hits Broadway. Author Frederick Lonsdale has contrived a typical triangle plot with smart sophisticated dialog, but at times the plot stumps the audience as well as the players. However, the show's chances are good provided needed repairs are made.

Interest centers on Young, who plays familiar role of a melancholy soul. Everything happens to him. Lindsay, as a gal who knows the answers gets started slowly but builds up to a swell climax in a funny bedroom scene. Plot means little but involves three couples caught in love's web. Their affections are as changeable as the weather, which keeps things going until final curtain. What matters is the acting, which is smooth and in the mood of the show. Dialog crackles with drawing room wit.

Others winning favor were: Philip Ober, Arthur Margetson, Eugenia Rawls and Henry Mowbray. Raymond Sovey's settings are lovely and Carnegia's clothes eye filling. Author directed and he still has plenty of work to do. The play has film possibilities.

MOTHER'S DAY

San Francisco, Sept. 26.—'Mother's Day' produced by Sam Bischoff opened at the Geary Theatre last night and without a doubt will be one of the coin getters this season. The three act comedy is smartly cast and well written with excellent direction and carrying plenty of suspense that builds up to a hot climax.

The action is set in the Erie, Pennsylvania, home of the Quins, with the plot evolving around the fact the Quin's daughter, 16-year-old is expecting a baby. The family is stunned at her announcement and are at their wits end, facing what they feel is disgrace until the daughter informs them she is married to a 17-year-old youngster and they had lied about their age and he has since joined the army. Upon meeting the local judge the father finds out that the judge who was supposed to have tied the knot has not seen the kids. Upon questioning it develops that the youngsters thought all they had to do was to take out a license, wait three days and then were man and wife.

Interspersed throughout is the health problem and the difficulties of the Quins to secure a maid. To involve things one of the hired girls falls in love with the master of the house and airs the troubles of the household via a radio broadcast takeoff on the Goodwill Hour.

When it is disclosed the young folks are not married Mrs. Quin consents to a bit of subterfuge. She is to announce she is in a delicate condition. The daughter is to go visit her grandmother and when its about time for the confinement the mother will join her and return with the baby claiming it as her own. However in the third act the girl returns, deciding to have her baby at home. Here the action goes into high gear and pandemonium breaks loose. The baby arrives sooner than expected with Mrs. Quin's brother, a young intern doing the delivery off stage.

It winds up fast, with Josie Dowling, Mrs. Quin's best friend fainting, due to her ignorance of the situation, when she can't put all the pieces together and sees Mrs. Quin, the one she thought was having the baby come nonchalantly downstairs and announce, 'it's a girl.'

Leon Ames and Patty Pope breeze through their parts in strict modern parent fashion. Mona Barrie carries her lines in bewilderment to perfection. Scotty Beckett, as a sophisticated 12-year-old is the talk of the audience, but is just a little too smart. Leona Maricle, the unhappy suffering expectant frowns and plays her pregnancy well. The rest of the supporting cast move at a fast tempo.

The play by Aleen Leslie was staged by Melville Burke in good showmanly taste. 'Mother's Day' should do well even though the title here was construed as a possible box office handicap.

Gould To Mexico

New York, Sept. 26. — Walter Gould, United Artists foreign manager, planes for Mexico tomorrow for two weeks to set premieres for 'Victory Through Air Power' and 'Stage Door Canteen.'

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

New York, Sept. 26.—The grim succession of Nazi defeats on the eastern front, culminating in the Soviet's recapture of Smolensk can be considered as a victory second in importance only to Stalingrad, as the Smolensk sector has been the strongest defended Nazi pivot line. The victory also presages drastic revision of the Allied military schedules and political blueprints. If the United political policy after the war is expected to follow the united military strategy efforts during the war it is obvious that the Allied forces must keep pace with the Soviet forces. Thus an early invasion of western Europe and the Balkans are foreshadowed, especially too, since General Marshall's promotion to Supreme Commander of the Allied forces with headquarters in London. Secretary of State Hull's reported participation in the Moscow Tripartite conferences stresses the importance attached to the political developments. Military experts here anticipate the fall of Kieve and Dniepropretovsk, proving that the Nazis are not withdrawing but crumbling.

Three Mexico Studios Working on Skeds Of 60 Features

New York, Sept. 26.—With three studios already operating and another building, the outlook for Mexico's film production is bright, according to A. L. Pratchett, Paramount managing director for Latin-America, who is currently here for home office confabs.

He said Mexican producers have scheduled about 60 features annually. Clasa, Azteca and Stahl are the studios now operating while the new picture plant, now building, is a stock company setup with Harry Wright the top man. RKO owns shares in the company.

Outlook on the Mexican exhibition front is also shaping up well, Pratchett naming three new modern theatres just opened or about to start operations. No Axis pictures are being shown in Mexico, according to Pratchett, and superimposed Spanish language titles are working out entirely satisfactory on U. S. product there. He said Paramount dubs none of its pictures because they deem it unsatisfactory.

PAR PAIRS FEATURE AND SHORT TO END DUALS ON CANUCK RING

New York, Sept. 26.—Plan for the lock-booking of a two-reel Technicolor musical short with a feature production for playing as combination throughout the entire Famous Players Canadian Theatres has been worked out in Paramount's New York offices between John Fitzgibbons, general manager of the Canadian circuit, Gordon Lightstone, Canadian general manager for Paramount, Neil Agnew, general sales manager, and Oscar A. Morgan, short subjects sales manager.

Plan will mean the elimination of double bills and if spreading to circuit operations in this country, will be a long step forward towards halting of duals, provided top quality shorts are turned out in sufficient number to service all theatres.

First musical short to be used is 'Mardi Gras,' co-starring Johnnie Johnston and Betty Rhodes, initialer in a series of six tune briefies. Subjects will be given same billing and advertising treatment as the feature, according to announcement. Second short in the series, already completed, is 'Caribbean Romance,' introducing Olga San Juan. Two slated for early shooting are 'Lucky Cowboy' with Eddie Dew, and 'Mississippi Magic.' Louis Harris is producing under supervision of Walter MacEwen.

TRIUMPHANT CAVALCADE BRINGS HOME A BILLION IN SALES

mately 6,000 star-gazers, the travelers took their turn at acknowledging the cheers that came with the announcement of their bond record in 15 performances in as many cities, plus innumerable bond rallies.

Praise for their efforts and grateful thanks for the bond achievement came from civic dignitaries, Treasury Department officials and film industry chieftains. Wires from Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and Ted R. Gamble, national director of the War Finance Committee of the Treasury Department, were read by Howard D. Mills, regional representative of the WFC. Morgenthau's wire, addressed to Kenneth Thomson and Charles K. Feldman, co-managers of the Cavalcade, said in part: 'I do want every member of the Cavalcade and all others in the various branches of the motion picture industry — production, distribution and exhibition—to know that the Treasury Department is appreciative of the fine American spirit you have all shown in the Third War Loan. You have undoubtedly made a fine contribution to what now appears to have been a highly successful effort.'

Gamble's wire, also addressed to Thomson and Feldman, told of seeking aid from the industry for the drive—the greatest home front job of this war—and stated: 'In traditional industry fashion, an expression of willingness to do anything and everything possible was immediately forthcoming. All of the many activities which the industry has undertaken have been fulfilled in true showmanlike manner. Please extend my thanks to all of the stars and executives who had a part in the airmada tours and the great Hollywood Cavalcade. I hope everyone is as happy about this enterprise as we are and we feel that the job they have turned in has exceeded everyone's expectations.'

After gaining the special reception platform, following stops for busy press photographers and newsreels, Greer Garson took over as spokesman for the bondstormers, reported on the total sales of $1,079,586,819, and finished her stint with the remark, 'There is no place like California to come home to and we are grateful to all of you who are here today to welcome us.'

Tour members were introduced in alphabetical order by Kay Kyser, who with his band, participated in the 15-city junket. He, with aid of a pretty Marinette sergeant, led the singing of 'The Star Spangled Banner' and at close of program, 'God Bless America.' Kyser paid particular thanks to Dr. Henry W. Ephraim, who made the trip with players to keep them in good health during grueling tour.

Top sales for cavalcade, which left here Sept. 4 for Washington, were hit in Boston, with a total of $200,000,000. New York paid off with $152,962,500 and Chicago with $150,000,000. Opening date was Philadelphia, with a payoff of $100,000,000. Entertainers riding the special train were Fred Astaire, Lucille Ball, James Cagney, Judy Garland, Greer Garson, Kathryn Grayson, Betty Hutton, Jose Iturbi, Kay Kyser, Harpo Marx, Dick Powell and Mickey Rooney. There were also five starlet 'Bond Bombardiers,' Ruth Brady, Rosemary LaPlanche, Dorris Merriett, Dorthy Merrick and Margie Stewart; Muriel Goodspeed, who worked with Marx in a special act, and featured entertainers in Kyser's band, Georgia Carroll, Julie Conway, Dian Pendleton, Ish Kabibble, Harry Babbitt and Sully Mason.

Director Edward Buzzell, who suffered torn leg tendons as result of fall in Minneapolis, was taken off the train as it passed through Los Angeles Friday, enroute from San Antonio, Tex., to San Francisco, where the last performance was staged Saturday night.

Glendale greeting was recorded yesterday by KFWB and aired last night at 10:45 p.m. It will also be rebroadcast this afternoon. Announcers handling event were Bob Purcell and Bob Anderson. Present to extend welcome were Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles, Mayor Lawrence Olson of Glendale, a group of wounded naval heroes, Y. Frank Freeman, Edward J. Mannix, Edward L. Alperson, Cavalcade chairman for the War Activities Committee.

Event was planned by Charles P. Skouras and James L. Beebe, latter Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce representative, and various sub-committees working under them.

The Hollywood Bond Cavalcade record in official figures, as compared to original quota of $500,000,000:

Writers Conference Receives Greeting From President

Messages of greeting and support from President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie, will be read at the opening session of the three-day United Nations Writers Congress, to be held at the University of California, Los Angeles Campus Friday night. Officials said both the President and Willkie express themselves as being heartily in favor of the purposes of the conference of 2,000 professional scriveners to mobilize their talents in behalf of the War effort.

It was stated that the contents of the President's message will not be revealed until it is read by Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University. Willkie, after expressing the wish that he could be with the Congress, said in part:

'At home the very efficiency of our war juggernaut tends to minimize emphasis on culture values; indeed this tendency is seized upon and exaggerated by those who would consciously or sub-consciously, destroy our democracy. The necessary concentration of our energies on the tangible accountrements of war implies to some that the liberal arts may be temporarily shouldered aside. Of course your writers know, and may I say you have done a superb job in telling the reading public, that the very reverse is true; that it is the amount of intellectual and cultural freedom which prevails throughout the world by which the qualitative and quantative character of world civilization can be assured.'

President Sproul in a statement last night replied to charges of State Senator Jack B: Tenney that records in the Congressional Record indicated that the League of American Writers, several of whose members Tenney accused of sponsoring the Congress, was 'founded under Communistic auspices.' President Sproul said in part:

'The fact that the Congress has been recognized by the President of the United States, who is commander in chief of armed forces, who would scarcely identify himself with a conference whose aims were inimical to the best interests of the nation, is an adequate reason for the cooperation of an educational institution in sponsoring it.

'It is appropriate to point out that freedom of inquiry and discussion is a cherished tradition of the American University and the University of California has always believed that tradition should be an indispensable part of democratic foundation of this Republic. In the spirit of that tradition, the University has always cooperated in the sponsorship of conferences designed to analyze freely and objectively the problem of the present and future well being of the nation.'

WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, Sept. 26.—Blunt George Dorsey, Pathe News lenser, brought down the house the other day, as the dignified Senate Military Affairs Committee was questioning General George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, on the father draft.

Dorsey and Hugo Johnson, Paramount News cameraman, were manning their sound cameras, floodlights were blazing down on the committee table, when up spoke irascible Senator Rufus C. Holman, of Oregon:

'Why don't you men turn out those lights? They're annoying the witness.'

'If,' retorted Dorsey, 'one of you Senators will ask the General what he thinks of the draft of fathers, and if we can get an answer, we'll be through.'

The big room, with about 200 spectators, broke into laughter and Holman subsided. The lights remained on for the remainder of the morning.

SABOTAGING THE PRESS

Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra don't know it, but they sabotaged half an afternoon's work in the Washington Bureau of the Philadelphia Inquirer, the other day.

It was the day WRC, the National Broadcasting outlet here, elected to invite a telephone call popularity contest of the two swoon singers. Phone number of WRC is Republic 4000; the Inquirer's number is Republic 4100. The public didn't seem to know the difference.

Phone rang beside a busy Inquirer correspondent. He lifted the receiver; somebody shouted 'Bing' and hung up. The startled newspaper man returned to work and a phone rang at another desk. Man picked up the receiver and a sweet voice said, 'I'm for Frankie Sinatra,' and hung up.

When the third call came, the office was ready. Questions were asked, and a great light dawned. The boys made a game of it from then on. One male supporter of Crosby got the shock of his young life, when an Inquirer man proceeded to argue with him that Bing was an old man who was losing his hair, and that the vote should be changed to Sinatra, whose hair was nice and curly.

A girl was talked out of a Sinatra vote when she heard over the phone that he was deceiving her—was a married man with a child.

But there was no ready answer when an aged voice came over the phone announcing 100 votes for Crosby from the Washington Old Ladies' Home.

NEW STATE DEPT. CHORES

Some idea of what goes on in the Congressional mind can be gathered from H. R. 3227—bill of Rep. William Barry's bill to abolish OWI and transfer its job to the State Department.

Under this measure, the State Department, which specializes in foreign affairs, would dive headlong into domestic activities. It would, for example, clear joint statements affecting OPA and the Solid Fuels Administrator. It would take over the functions of dealing with the motion picture industry and radio.

The notoriously close-mouthed department would even have the job of helping reporters get more news from the Army and Navy. You don't have to live in Washington to realize the mess which would result—but it all seems like a good idea to a congressman.

Oscar Doob, who thought he was going from big time showmanship to the quiet marble halls of Government when Loew's lent him to the War Bond Drive, was quickly disillusioned by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, generally considered on the conservative, blue-nose side.

'What's the matter, Oscar?' Morgenthau asked him at a staff meeting. 'You act like a conservative banker. What we need in this campaign is plenty of showmanship. Give it some ballyhoo.'

'BACK THE ATTACK'

Doob took him at his word, too. The giant Corinthian stone pillars along the side of the Treasury Bldg., which had gathered nothing but grime for 100 years, are now plastered with a huge sign 'Back the Attack.'

Elevator Strike in NY's Center Strands Pix, Radio Execs

New York, Sept. 26.—Strike of the Elevator Operators at Rockefeller Center, involving some 700 employes, which had caused serious disruption in show business offices for three days, ended suddenly yesterday with both strikers and management claiming to have gained the advantage. Pickets were withdrawn, but terms of settlement had not been divulged up to late hour today.

Rockefeller Center is an important cog in show biz enterprises, with many top agencies, RKO, Universal Pictures, legit producers, radio and other offices located in the towering building. On Thursday many tenants connected with show world, unable to reach offices on the upper floors, huddled for their appointments on the ground floor where considerable business was transacted during the day. In some cases even stenographers were pressed into service for dictation in the corridors. Several agents spent that night in the building, in the upper offices.

Producer Vinton Freedley, located on the 60th floor, was one among many who reached the ground floor Thursday evening at 8:30, after a two-hour wait. Others hiked down the many stairways.

Situation had eased somewhat by Friday, though service was slow and cars crowded, and by yesterday morning the negotiations portended settlement of the walkout before the week's end.

GRIFFIS NAMED TO OWI POST

FILM MAN TAKES OVER WIB SPOT

Washington, Sept. 26.—Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount, takes over as head of the War Information Bureau, succeeding Lowell Mellett.

In announcing the appointment yesterday, Palmer Hoyt, director of the OWI Domestic Bureau, added that OWI has no plans to produce any films for this country, any more than it intends to publish any newspapers.

'Griffis,' said Hoyt, 'will supervise the relationships between the government and the film industry and channeling all the film industry's requests for information from the government.

'Griffis also will handle all requests for motion picture cooperation in war drives and in government information programs, and at the same time, he will coordinate the film producing activities of other war agencies.

'I am gratified that OWI was enabled to obtain the services of a man of Griffis' calibre. His acceptance of the post will further the already effective cooperation between the government and the film industry. This cooperation has been made obvious, a point I made some time ago when I said there was no more need for OWI to produce its own films than to produce its own newspapers.'

Griffis will be a dollar-a-year man. Before tying up with Paramount, he was active in the legitimate theatre, having been associated with Guthrie McClintick in a number of productions.

OWI pointed up its announcement with a survey of the cooperation between the industry and the government agency.

'Cooperation between the motion picture industry and the government, on information programs,' said the statement, 'dates back to June 5, 1940, when representatives of all branches of the industry met in New York to form the Motion Picture Committee cooperating for national defense.

'Five days after Pearl Harbor, the film industry completed plans to place all of its resources behind the war effort. The making of films for government information programs became only a part of its work. It launched into the making of training films for the army and special films for distribution throughout South America.

'In addition, Hollywood's writing and entertainment talent was recruited to help keep up the morale of the men in the armed services, to sell bonds and to raise funds for war charities.'

Stothart Scores 'Seed'

Herbert Stothart, Metro musical director, has been set to compose original score for 'Dragon Seed.'

'MURDER HERE TONIGHT'

Arch Oboler winds up a year of horror dramatics on his 'Lights Out' series tomorrow night over CBS and is resisting all efforts at further sponsorship. He says the chiller-dillers are off the air permanently, as far as he is concerned. But Oboler, who is full of surprises, has a nifty all cooked up for the final airing. Sez Arch, 'I'm dragging off to the graveyard and I'm taking a number of Hollywood people along with me.' As for his swan song, he adds, 'it's the first time that an author murdered himself and his friends off with him.' Title of the last Oboler opus is 'The Author and the Thing.' The lights go out for the last time on KNX at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow night.

FCC MEMBER DEMANDS COX BE OUSTED FROM COMMITTEE

Washington, Sept. 26.—Federal Communications Commission-Cox Committee donnybrook, dormant for the past few weeks, was stirred up again over the weekend by FCC Commissioner Clifford J. Durr. In an open letter to Speaker Sam Rayburn, Durr asked that his petition to oust Congressman Eugene Cox as chairman of the investigating body be brought before the House. Durr acted after the House Judiciary Committee ruled that it had no jurisdiction in the case.

Washington Post took up the cudgels for Durr editorially and called on Rayburn either to yank Cox or put the matter up to Congress for action. Durr has charged Cox with 'bias and prejudice' in the investigation because FCC cited him to Department of Justice on charges of taking a fee from a radio station to represent it before the Communications Commission.

'I cannot believe,' Durr wrote Rayburn, 'that the House of Representatives, with full knowledge of the facts set forth in my petition filed over four months ago, would endorse Congressman Cox as a suitable person to serve as chairman or even as a member of the Committee.'

Bill Cagney Due To Start 'Stray Lamb'

Following rest here, Fenton returns to resume this work, while his wife remains to continue screen career.

Barry Sells RKO Tale For Jean Arthur Pic

Don Barry, Republic western star, has sold an original story titled 'A Magnificent Tramp,' to RKO producer Frank Ross, as Jean Arthur co-starrer. Yarn originally was intended as follow-up for femme star and John Wayne after 'A Lady Takes a Chance,' but with Wayne slated to don a uniform as soon as he winds up Republic's 'The Fighting Seabees,' it is likely Cary Grant will share honors with Miss Arthur in production.

Lukas Gets Top Role

EXTRAS PAY TOPS ALL RECORDS

Film extras received a daily wage of $13.13 during August, the highest in the history of the industry, it was announced yesterday by Central Casting Corp. The average placements for the month were 1,147 per day as compared with 1,246 the preceding month, but the fact that there were practically no calls in the $5.50 bracket accounts for the high daily average.

In preceding months there has been an average of around 1,500 calls at the $5.50 rate. Few, if any, regular extras will work for that scale, and in many instances studios have had to up the pay to $10.50 to get outsiders to work on waivers.

Talent placements for the month were reported by Central as 27,525, having a dollar value of $360,350, including overtime and adjustments. This is a decline of 4,000 placements from the preceding month, and a decline in dollar value of $40,000. Of the total placements in August, 20,500 were at the $10.50 rate, and 3,800 were in the $16.50 bracket.

Announcing extra earnings in August, Central Casting officials stated:

'Extra talent placements have each year constantly shown a drop in the month of August. In August, 1942, the total value of placements was $200,000 as compared with $360,350 this year. This change in the trend, together with the reduced number of extra players working in the industry, establishes 1943 as the best year for extra players since the formation of the Guild, in all wage brackets with the exception of the atmosphere calls at $5.50.'

Central Casting Corp. announced recently that less than 1,500 extras are calling Central for jobs. This indicates that only a small percentage of the 4,200 members of the Screen Actors Guild are getting the jobs. It is estimated that many of the others are now working in defense plants or are in the military service.

KORDA WILL MAKE 'MALTA' IN ENGLAND

'Malta,' on which John Wexley has just completed the script at Metro, will be produced in England by Alexander Korda, instead of at the Culver City studio by Joseph Pasternak. Because of type of yarn and its locale, studio execs decided story would be particularly adapted to English production. Korda will take script to England shortly and it is likely Laurence Olivier, and possibly Vivien Leigh, will appear as the stars.

Fidler-Warner Row Hits Fly's Desk

Washington, Sept. 27.—James L. Fly, chairman of Federal Communications Commission, told his press conference today the Warners-Blue Network dispute over a recent Jimmie Fidler broadcast had reached his desk. He said, however, that he did not know whether he would take any action or even whether FCC had any jurisdiction in the matter.

NO ACTOR WHO SPEAKS MAY GET IN XTRAS UNION

Screen Actors Guild in disclosing general provisions of autonomy plan to be presented to Class B members Sunday night announced yesterday that SAG will retain exclusive jurisdiction over stunt performers and actors, explaining that 'generally, the speaking of lines identifies one as an actor.' It also was revealed dual union cards will be requested for members working both as an extra and as an actor.

A qualification in stunt jurisdiction provides that 'members of the extras organization who are hired as extras and not to do stunt work, could perform stunts that are incidental to their work as extras.' Provisions for autonomy also state that 'The extras organization will have jurisdiction over all persons who appear in motion pictures for atmos-

'Buffalo Bill' Halted By McCrea's Cold

Illness of Joel McCrea, playing the title role, and suffering bad cold, halted production yesterday on Harry Sherman's production, 'Buffalo Bill,' for 20th-Fox. McCrea is in great majority of scenes yet to be made, and Director William Wellman will make no attempt to shoot around him. He is expected to be able to return within two or three days.

COX COMMITTEE SHOWDOWN NEAR ON TRIP TO ROCKS

Washington, Sept. 27.—Cox Committee heads into an 'inside the lodge' slugging match tomorrow morning when Representatives Edward J. Hart and Warren Magnuson, democratic members of the body, will ask for a showdown. The two congressmen will charge that the committee has gone beyond the powers conferred by Congress and that it must get back to its own job.

Probability is that Magnuson and Hart, both administration men, will also submit a minority interim report, attacking the work of the committee to date. Previously, Magnuson had protested the activities of Eugene L. Gary, committee counsel. Some insiders are betting here that whether or not Rep. Eugene L. Cox is dropped as chairman of the body probing Federal Communications Commission, the committee is headed for the rocks and will not be able to discredit the communications commission.

· HOLLYWOOD · INSIDE ·

INDEPENDENT exhibitors in metropolitan districts of the west coast are beefing these days—and about a condition more important to them than the usual complaint of poor biz and high film rentals or percentages. Many operators of one and two theatres, who in pre-war-days could find plenty of time for social activities, are being tied down to their houses by the manpower shortage and inability to depend on help showing up for work. One indie, who has been noted for his ability to get around town for various evening events, has been missing from his familiar haunts for the past two months, and is screaming that he's tied to the theatre to function continually as house manager, cashier, doorman or usher, and only employe he can depend on showing up every night is the projectionist. He's only one of many who are obtaining re-education in handling staff assignments in their theatres.

ARMY officers directing transportation in the Chicago area are said to be considerably disturbed over the questioning of guests on network quiz shows as to where they came from and what brings them to New York, Hollywood or wherever the program originates. Army men say it sets a bad example for the public, such as recently when a guest on 'Take It Or Leave It' told of going to New York from Baltimore because he and his wife hungered for roast beef. A certain Hollywood program which deals in such details also was pointed out as setting a bad precedent, especially when civilians are being urged to pass up travel so that servicemen may have the train or plane accommodations. On one such broadcast a woman told of being in California on a vacation. Army men say that such information runs counter to their campaign to cut down travel to essential business, and representations are being made to the networks.

FLETCHER WILEY, whose 'Home Front Reporter' series over CBS is being dropped by Owens-Illinois Glass Co. in seven weeks, yesterday advised Daily Variety of his reasons for the cancellation and his defection as of last Friday. His wire reads: 'Have come to an amicable parting with my CBS sponsor, Owens-Illinois Glass, over handling Government copy on 'Your Home Front Reporter.' Sponsor wanted Government messages handled verbatim, and as you know, I have always done my broadcast ad-lib. Also I did not feel that program composed completely of Government material was palatable to my listeners, so we have gone our separate ways with no hard feelings. Program shifts to New York Monday, with cast composed of David Broekman, Frank Parker and Don Pryor, CBS newsman, as Home Front Reporter.' As to the singer, Wiley is in error, as Phil Regan is continuing with the show.

DRESS extras trying to duck an early morning soldier call for Metro today in the hopes of picking up a $16.50 job were outfoxed by directors at Central Casting Corp. yesterday. Scores of extras working on the Warners lot yesterday paged Central for a job today, and most of them immediately were picked up for the soldier stint, with some reporting for fittings at 6:30 a.m. When the dress boys saw the others were catching the soldier stint, they waited until later to page Central, hoping the call would be filled. Central, however, in a quest for top extras, apparently quit filling the call until the dress boys started calling. Result, they were handed the soldier call with early a.m. fittings.

TO SIDESTEP three pressures on his production unit at 20th-Fox, Winfield Sheehan has established hideaway writing quarters for scripters on his 'Rickenbacker: Story of An American,' Howard Emmett Rogers and Paul Green, so that there will be no studio interruptions. Rogers, who already has had one four-week extension on his loanout from Metro, is wanted back there. Paul Green is due back at the University of North Carolina, where he teaches English literature. Producer Sheehan also wants to complete the script in time to submit to Captain Rickenbacker before he departs on another global mission for the Government. Script now is about two-thirds completed, and production start is six weeks away.

SAMPLE of phenomenal publicity that follows Frank Sinatra wherever he goes is RKO's rather astonishing display of Page 1 photo and story breaks on two highlights of swooner's recently ended Hollywood sojourn. Not only his arrival here to appear in studio's 'Higher and Higher' broke via AP Wirephoto in more than 100 major newspaper front pages, but as great a break carrying picture title, art and story followed assignment of Barbara Hale to play opposite him in picture. This was only one of syndicates covering both events, other photo services netting similar breaks throughout the country.

Play Review

THE ROSE MASQUE

Comic opera version of Johann Strauss' 'Die Fledermaus,' smoothed in its preceding run at the Curran in San Francisco, opened to a limited but enthusiastic audience at the Philharmonic Auditorium last night. Indications were that word of mouth and favorable critical comment would bring full houses for the rest of its stand here.

Imaginative production by Reinhold Schunzel was steeped in the old Viennese manner, had plenty of style and charm, was performed by an excellent company with playful spirit, and sparkles with bright accountrement and staging.

Operetta in three acts plays visual hob in burlesk vein with the original Strauss score and steps fast under Schunzel's direction through risque scene, good ballet and colorful ensemble. First nighters gave it a resounding hand.

Book for the 'Masque' toys with the complications of a masquerade engaged in by various members of a Viennese household, a husband who is supposed to be in jail, a wife who has set out to meet a former lover, and a perky chambermaid who yearns to be an actress. Stirred in for further misrepresentations are a jailer and his turnkey, a prince, a count, a marquis and an assortment of other worthies characterized with amusing gags and antics.

Marita Farell and Joseph Sullivan carry the wife and husband roles with distinction and sing the roles of Rosalinda and Gabriel ably, especially Sullivan. Excellent also are Margaret Spencer as the chambermaid, John Garris as an impertinent friend of the husband, John Wengraf, as the laconic prince, Robert Ainsley, the heel-clicking aide de camp, Ruby Asquith and Frank Marasco, the principal ballet dancers.

Erich Weiler did the dialog and the lyrics. Settings, colorful, were designed by Stewart Chaney. Walter Hebert is musical director. William Christensen handled the outstanding choreography.

Finney Gets 4 Stories

Edward Finney has acquired film rights to four stories by John P. McCarthy. Quartet includes 'The Good Sin,' 'Voice in the Fog,' 'When I Come Back' and 'Today, Tonight, and Tomorrow.' FEDS NAB ACCARDO AS BIOFF AIDE IN FILM SHAKEDOWN

New York, Sept. 27.—Federal authorities today arrested Tony Accardo, Chicago, asserted Capone henchman wanted in connection with Government prosecution of shakedowns in the motion picture industry during the regime of George E. Browne and Willie Bioff as heads of the IATSE. Accardo has been sought for several months.

Boris Kostelanetz, special assistant attorney general, who said he expects Accardo will be of material aid to Government in its prosecution of other Caponites, will immediately institute removal proceedings in Chicago.

Early trial of Accardo and six other 'boys from Chicago,' plus former IA official Louis Kaufman, Newark operators biz agent, is expected.

BOND SALES MAY DELAY TRIAL

Chicago, Sept. 27.—It is strongly rumored that when trial against six alleged Chicago gangsters is resumed by the Government in New York Oct. 5, for their asserted connection with the million dollar shakedown of the film industry, that many local theatre executives and attorneys, who have been subpoenaed as witnesses, will be absent. Most of those called from here will ask for a 30-day delay because of their activities in connection with the War Bond drive and the Community and War Fund.

TOP NAMES AMONG WITNESSES

Among those called from here are Jack Kirsch, prexy of Allied Theatres of Illinois, John Balaban and Morris Leonard, of Balaban and Katz; Edward Silverman, Essaness Theatres head; Mort Singer and Robert O. Farrell, of the law firm of Chapman and Cutler, among many others. If the delay is granted, it is understood it will be because the Government is not ready for these witnesses at that time.

Otto Christensen, attorney for John Roselli, also indicted in connection with the film shakedown, trained east yesterday for trial of the case.

Pete Harrison Going East To Set Preem

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

New York, Sept. 27.—Informed diplomatic circles feel sure that Secretary of State Cordell Hull is going to attend the Moscow conferences, and this news at present overshadows the military events. Following the meetings of the Allied representatives to the tripartite conference, President Roosevelt, Churchill and Joseph Stalin will hold a meeting, and all indications point that way. Some well-informed quarters say the meeting is a virtual certainty, and will take place before Christmas. With the Soviets' capture of Smolensk a double threat looms to the uprolling Nazi flank, exposing the rear of the Dneiper line and continuing into Poland, where a flat terrain especially favors a Soviet winter drive. The latest Red Army slogan, 'Christmas in Warsaw,' is not fantastic. Latest reports from neutral sources indicate the Nazi regime is applying desperate measures to curb the rapidly deteriorating home morale.

SAG BARES AUTONOMY PLAN; TELLS ELIGIBLES TO NEW UNION

phere or background purposes only, and as extra players, but not as actors.'

AUTONOMY PLAN

Autonomy outline released by SAG yesterday states:

'Upon formation of the extras organization, all extras who are now Class B members of the SAG will be transferred to the new organization. Class B members residing in New York would be permitted to remain in the SAG as Class A Junior members, if they so desired.

'The extras organization would be governed by a Board of Directors elected by the entire membership. This is recommended because it is believed that any plan for the election of a certain number of members to the Board from each class of extras would be unwieldy and unworkable. Such By-Laws as are necessary for the establishing of the extras organization will be formulated. However, all of the By-Laws, as well as the articles of incorporation, will be subject to amendment by the membership of the extras organization at any time after their adoption.

WILL DIVIDE FUNDS

'SAG will make a division of all of its assets with the extras organization, based on the formula provided in the Guild's By-Laws. A portion of the funds payable to the extras organization would be turned over to that organization immediately; the balance would be retained by the parent organization (either SAG or the Four A's) during an experimental period, the length of which will be specified. If the extras organization has operated successfully during that period, and has not violated its charter agreement, the balance would be paid over to it at the end of such period.

'T[illegible] extras organization would un[illegible]e complete collective bargain[illegible] responsibilities for its membership within the field of its jurisdiction. Any member of either SAG or the extras organization who wished to work in the other's field of jurisdiction must be a member of the other organization. Persons holding dual membership shall have voting rights only in their parent organization.

SAG WILLING TO HELP

'SAG would, if requested, assist in setting up the office and organization of the extras organization, and in putting it into operation, so that the functions previously performed for extras by the Guild could be transferred without confusion or interruption.'

In a statement accompanying the autonomy provisions, SAG said it was doubtful whether Class B members 'can ever be granted a vote on all Guild issues so long as the guild maintains its present structure.' Statement continued: 'Class B membership has always been on a nonvoting basis. This has not been an ideal situation, but it was a policy which was established on this realistic premise: the Class B membership outnumbers Class A membership; if they voted, they would dictate Guild policy, a situation which would be impractical and unacceptable to the Class A members, without which there would be no Guild.'

PLAN UP NEXT SUNDAY

Guild said complete plans of the autonomy proposals will be presented at Sunday's meeting. Members will be permitted to ask questions from the floor, and shortly after the meeting a mail ballot will be conducted to determine, first, whether the Class B members desire to separate from SAG, second, whether they want an SAG charter or one direct from the Associated Actors and Artistes of America. Prexy James Cagney will preside at the session.

NY Theatres Report Excellent Response To Bond Preems

New York, Sept. 27.—Although figures will not be compiled until tomorrow or later, theatre operators report an excellent response to the bond buying free movie day today, with downtown deluxers positively terrific. Neighborhood houses generally are good though spotty. This is due possibly to fact that most theatres, including RKO, Loew's and other circuits are on fifth day with shows.

Music Hall is immense with large sale before 1 p.m. today, while at 6 p.m., theatre had lobby line three abreast with part of the lobby roped off for bond purchasers only and 14 girls busy selling.

Other large downtowners including Capitol, Paramount and Roxy also very big on sales. Majority of purchases being $25 bonds though the Music Hall sold quite a lot at higher figures, with a few going at $500. In order to handle sales many theatres had booths on the street. Others had extra box office facilities in addition to tables in outer lobbies. Figures nationally are not expected to be available for several days.

F-WC AND UA AGREE ON TWIN BILLING 'CANTEEN'

Agreement is understood to have been reached between Fox West Coast and United Artists permitting double-billing of 'Stage Door Canteen' in city subsequents following circuit complaints that audiences of smaller houses have become educated to two features and refuse to attend unless double bills are screened.

Circuit is now playing 'Canteen' in 14 houses with a secondary feature, after having opened it double in two theatres last week. The Los Angeles, downtown house which goes first run next month, screened the UA feature last week single but is now doubling it with 'Youngest Profession.' Only circuit house currently singling picture locally is the Hollywood.

Contrary to F-WC claim that some of its smaller situations must double-bill to draw patrons, the few independent theatres that have so far screened 'Canteen' solo have reported excellent business, according to checkup.

Widespread doubling of a picture that was originally sold on strict single-bill percentage terms by the major circuit has drawn ire of a number of indie operators, it is reported. So far situation is only local, with no letup in UA's original selling terms reported in other parts of the country, or even in the Southern California territory immediately adjacent to the city of Los Angeles.

NEW INCOME TAX RULING NICKS WIVES OF SERVICEMEN

A new ruling from Washington on Federal income tax payments will penalize many married women whose husbands are in the service in what seems to be another attempt to nullify California's community property law and will hit many wives of film men now serving in the armed forces, since it requires that they pay tax on one-half of their husband's earned income in 1942.

Harry C. Westover, Collector of Internal Revenue for Southern California announced that the 1943 Revenue Act permits members of the armed forces to recompute their 1942 incomes and eliminate taxes on all earned income. But he added, 'due to California's community property law it has been held that civilian wives of military personnel are still liable for their share of all income. Married members of the armed forces who filed separate returns for 1942 should allow their wives' returns to stand and should recompute their own after dropping their half of the earned income. Those who filed joint returns should file new jiont returns showing the recalculation.'

The new ruling would make all men in the armed services from the ten community property law states pay what amounts to a premium in taxes for serving their country. A serviceman from a non-community property law state who was a civilian in 1942 and earned, for example, $3,000 in salary before he joined the service, would normally have filed a joint return and would have paid approximately $320 income tax. Under the new ruling he is now permitted to go back and recompute his 1942 tax by eliminating his earned income—which would wipe out his tax and entitle him to a refund for the amount paid in.

In California, however, because of the community property law interpretation, a wife must still declare one-half of her husband's income as hers and file a tax return on $1500 income.

FILM COMPANIES WANT U. S. AID ON FOREIGN BIZ

New York, Sept. 28.—American picture companies, giving consideration to the anticipated annual stakes of $150,000,000 in the post-war foreign market, may invoke the aid of United States government agencies to assist in protection of current and future theatre, distribution and production positions in England and other foreign countries.

Indicative of large theatre holdings involved abroad is the $19,000,000 investment in Guamont-British by 20th-Fox via the 49% interest in Metropolitan and Bradford Trust. Metro purchased about half of the 20th-Fox holdings several years ago for $5,000,000.

Film leaders conversant with the pre-war operations in the foreign field, are desirous of getting government aid to prevent freezing of film coin by various countries later. Freeze was indulged in to a large extent by England which piled up a huge amount of American film coin until it was finally thawed last year.

HABIT of studios ordering 35 or 40 seats for a sneak preview and then turning up with double or triple that number of people is getting a going-over due to current solid business being registered by theatres, which don't need a preview to sell tickets. Many requests for previews are being nixed, particularly on Friday, Saturday or Sunday nights, when theatre trade is at a peak. Situation of doubling up on seats is a special beef by exhibitors, who feel producers, stooges and personnel connected with a picture take advantage of a manager when they turn out in such large numbers that regular patrons can't be seated. Incident occurred last weekend that will make it hard for particular studio to get a preview house on a favorable night. Theatre okayed 36 seats after much persuasion, but when studio crowd showed up it numbered more than three times the original request. Next day there were plenty of beefs from circuit involved over practice, with hint that studio will find it difficult to get a theatre in the future unless there is a decided change in indiscriminate handing out of ducats.

NEIC SETUP IS CHANGED TO GIVE ALL VOICE IN ACTIONS

New York, Sept. 28.—Structure of the National Entertainment Industry Council was drastically revamped at session of the council tonight at the Hotel Astor, attended by about 50 delegates representing all phases of show biz.

As result of resolution proffered by Florence Marston, Screen Actors Guild delegate, the co-ordinating committee with its restrictive membership comprised of either one or two members of various organizations identified with NEIC, in effect is abolished, being replaced by a co-ordinating setup composed of the entire NEIC membership. Previous resolution that the co-ordinating committee be dissolved, with only the council to function in the future was withdrawn on protest of Solly Pernick, representing IATSE.

NEIC structure was revised following criticism that, as a closed group many identified with NEIC having constructive ideas were excluded from actual participation in the organization. The new setup was voted unanimously, after which accomplishments of the entertainment industry in the war effort since NEIC inception in June were reviewed, particularly pitch in Third War Loan Campaign. Reported by James Reilly, of League of New York Theatres, that from series of legit bond matinees teeing off next Monday, it is expected to tab 15 million dollars in sales of bonds; with initial four shows on opening day figured to yield 5 million dollars. Equity reported 13 legit shows lined up for Army camps, with AFRA also reporting a heavy schedule of radio talent enlisted for USO shows in hospitals and military bases.

A cowgirl in the early days arose when dawn was red,
And hastened with her shining pails to yonder milking shed,
And toiled amid the lowing herd in simple calico,
And once a year, at county fair, she went to see a show.

She wears a 10-quart skimmer now and flips a nimble toe,
And sings a western chorus in a motion picture show.
And if she ever saw a cow, or heard its gentle moo,
The gal would think it was a beast escaped from yonder zoo.

Whistling In Brooklyn

(Comedy)

Metro production. Stars Red Skelton. Features Ann Rutherford, 'Rags' Ragland, Henry O'Neill, Jean Rogers, Ray Collins, William Frawley, Sam Levene and The Brooklyn Dodgers. Balance of cast: Arthur Space, Robert Emmet O'Connor, Steve Geray, Howard Freeman, Tom Dillon. Produced by George Haight. Directed by S. Sylvan Simon. Screen play by Nat Perrin. Added dialog by Wilkie Mahoney. Photography, Lester White. Musical score, George Bassman. Art director, Cedric Gibbons; associate, Jack Martin Smith. Set decorations, Edwin B. Willis; associate, Mildred Griffiths. Special effects, Warren Newcombe. Film editor, Ben Lewis. Tradshown in Los Angeles, Sept. 28, 1943. Running time: 88 MINS.

Red Skelton was induced to do his current film whistling job in Brooklyn so that the Dodgers, baseballers of some repute even outside their home town, could more or less logically be worked into this characteristic comedy-dreadful. Result is solid entertainment in the burlesk vein, with a screwball extortion game which will be relished by addicts of the great American pastime, both in and out of the service. Other comicalities made to order for the whodunit fans are calculated to appeal to femme as well as male laff hunters. By these tokens, 'Whistling In Brooklyn' will cash as well or better than Skelton's previous two whistle stops.

The yarn, scripted by Nat Perrin, follows the general pattern of Skelton blundering into solution of crime, this time a series of murders committed by a self-styled 'constant reader' who boldly advertises himself in a newspaper and taunts the police about their inefficiency. The fiend conceals his identity under the guise of a businessman civic leader who is seeking to rig the town political setup. In his criminal forays he signs himself as 'the Fox.' Through the stupidities of his chauffeur, Skelton himself is suspected of being the 'Fox' and has a hilariously jittery time clearing himself. It is as the climax of these escapades that he gets wound up, under a disguising beard, in the exhibition ball game with the Dodgers.

Offering the romantic relief is Ann Rutherford as his sweetie, a gal who fights for him tooth and fist, in a nice performance. Rival is Jean Rogers as an amateur newspaper columnist. Ragland turns in a telling comedy trick as the goofy chauffeur. Ray Collins is the killer-politician, and Henry O'Neill, William Frawley, Sam Levene, Arthur Space, Robert Emmet O'Connor, Steve Geray, Howard Freeman and Tom Dillon manage their important roles capably. The Dodgers are themselves, seen on the field and in the dugout, in action and in the comedy free-for-all fight. Their park was used for filming a considerable portion of the picture.

Under S. Sylvan Simon's expert and comedy-wise direction, the topping suspense-and-thrill gag is the chase of Skelton and his pals by a gang of thugs up and down the elevator shafts of a large storehouse. This has the pace, the gasping tension, the hysterical laugh quality of many of the old Harold Lloyd scalplifters, and Simon and the troupe milk it for guffaws. Funny also is Skelton's presence in the police sta-

The Battle of Russia

This is the pictured story of a people who will not be dispossessed of its native land or its freedom to govern itself as it desires—the 193 million assorted folks whose home is from the Arctic to the borders of India, from the ravaged fields of Poland to the eastern reaches of Siberia. It is told in a film called, 'The Battle of Russia,' previewed last night at the Filmarte under auspices of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and the fifth in the series of Army Orientation films shown through courtesy of the U. S. War Department and the Special Services Division of the U. S. Army.

'The Battle of Russia' it is called, but it has the scope of the entire war in Europe, made clear and coherent with battle footage from the Russian archives, film captured from the Germans, with explanatory narrative, with dramatized montage of other attacks, the Russians have parried and counter thrusted during the past 700 years. The heroic and dreadfully thrilling account runs well toward two hours, and no phase of the fighting is omitted.

While the picture tells in detail how the physical combat has been and is being carried on to drive the German armies back into their own boundaries, showing strategy, tactics and savage fighting in and around Stalingrad, Leningrad, Moscow, Lake Ladoga, and the Caucausas, the whole effect of the narrative to hearten the people massed behind the increasing drive of the United Nations.

As much weight is given the untiring civilian effort of the Russian people in factory, field, in the wrecked streets, in the guerrilla camps, as to the charging tanks, the Cossack charge, the infantry in the snows, in the alleys of Stalingrad. The sum total of the assembled footage has a terrific impact, and the battle tasks of the fighting Russian cameramen is almost beyond credibility. Some of this footage has been shown before in the Russian released, 'Battle of Stalingrad' but there is a vast volume of new material. The account runs up to and through the summer of 1942, after the Russian armies had begun to move westward from Stalingrad.

The producer is Lt. Col. Anatole

TOMORROW'S FILMS TO DWARF TODAY'S SAYS VEEPEE COE

Speaking before the Buffalo, N. Y. Advertising Club yesterday, Charles Francis Coe, vice-prexy of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, declared that what is shown on the screen of tomorrow will dwarf the role now played by motion pictures, significant as that is. His subject was 'Tomorrow On the Screen.'

'A World-conscious public, released from the strain of the greatest and bloodiest conflict in human history, will yearn for the entertainment that truly re-creates,' he said. 'That does not mean, however, return to a make-believe world. It does not mean retreat from our interest in our fellowmen.

The first commandment which the public gives to the screen is: Entertain! The penalty for infraction is death at the box office. That, in the end, means death to the free screen too. But the camera which must follow the drama of the world will focus on an ever-widening world. Information and inspiration will be rampant as well as entertainment.'

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

with Robert Arden

New York, Sept. 28.—The fighting on the eastern front appears to be nearing a critically decisive phase, with the Nazis trying desperately to prevent the Soviets from crossing the Dneiper. In the meantime the Red army seems to be favoring a Smolensk breakthrough, thus giving them an opportunity to sweep toward Poland and at the same time threaten the Nazi Dneiper line in the rear. The outcome of this present struggle is seen as a decisive factor in determining just how long the Nazis can withstand the war. An interesting sidelight was the quote by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph Bard, who said in a Boston speech, 'Russia as our ally makes sense in a big way, but Russia as someone's else ally raises much consternation. The future world's peace depends upon the relationship between the United States, Britain, Soviet Russia and China. Ideas based on the Communist program 10 years ago should not be allowed to wreck the world peace program of tomorrow.' This speech, preceding Hull's trip to Moscow, is interpreted as being of the utmost significance.

PAR DENIES ANY BEEFS ON SERVICE MEN PRICE FOR 'BELL'

New York, Sept. 28.—Charles M. Reagan, assistant general sales manager of Paramount issued a statement today declaring 'minimum prices established for "For Whom the Bell Tolls," including those for service men of 50 cents matinees and 75 cents evenings and Sundays are equitable for all concerned' and denied that there had been beefs against increased admissions for men in uniform.

Reagan said 'Paramount has set a minimum of 75 cents matinees and $1.10 evenings for all engagements and in some situations the scale is higher, up to $1.65 and $2.20 in two-a-day situations. In view of this policy, which calls for advance admissions in every situation, the company feels that the reduced price set for service men in uniform is fair and reasonable.'

Pointing out that Paramount has always agreed to cut rate prices for uniform wearers on regular pictures, Reagan declared that 'contrary to reports, there has been no complaints whatsoever from the management of Loew's Palace in Washington to Paramount with respect to the price set for service men's admissions to the picture. The picture is an elaborate and costly production and is being given special handling to shoot at maximum box office returns.'

'Paramount feels,' he added, 'that a picture of the magnitude and drawing power of "FWTBT" calls for higher prices all along the line, in fairness to the distributor and the exhibitor.'

AFRA WILL FILL KORNBLUM POST AFTER VOTE

A new executive secretary of the Los Angeles Local of the American Federation of Radio Artists will not be selected until after the election of officers and Executive Board members Thursday, it was announced last night. While many of the current officers and Board members are certain to be retained, it is understood that Prexy Fred MacKaye and other officers felt an appointment at this time would be in the nature of a 'lame duck' election.

The Executive Board yesterday accepted the resignations of Attorney I. B. Kornblum as executive secretary, and Georgia Fifield as assistant executive secretary, when advised by a special committee that neither could be persuaded to reconsider. Suitable expressions of regret were adopted and both were given a complete vote of confidence.

At a conference between the two executives and Ken Carpenter and Edward Arnold, Kornblum and Miss Fifield insisted they felt it necessary to retire at this time, believing their assignment had been completed.

Kornblum is returning to the active practice of law, while Miss Fifield will resume her profession as a radio performer. Both, however, will continue to function until their posts are filled by the new Board.

At the present time a minimum of 250 theatres, covering key cities and smaller communities, are already on the drafting boards.

Major circuit operators believe that increased population and relative importance of war plant centers will largely remain where they are now located following the war, and are now planning to increase capacity to take care of additional business. The west coast, Washington and Detroit areas are pointed out as instances where migratory population is likely to stay put after the war.

EXTRAS DEMAND CHARTER; BERATE AUTONOMY PLAN

1943, and in the September issue of the Screen Actor there appeared articles prepared by the Screen Actors Guild purporting to offer autonomy to the Class B members. Strangely upon reading these articles the conclusion is inescapable that actually no plan of autonomy is offered by you to the Class B members but the plan being proposed perpetuates the yoke under which Class B members have worked and are working.

'In your article you state that at the meeting of Oct. 3, 1943, Class B members will have an opportunity to discuss your plan. At no time have you presented the complete details of your plan to these Class B members or have you publicized them so as to afford the Class B members an opportunity, in advance of the meeting, to digest thoroughly your plan and intelligently discuss it at the meeting.

ASK PLAN BE PUBLICIZED

'On Sept. 23, 1943, by letter the Screen Players Union specifically requested that you publicize the complete details of your plan. This has not been done. Why?

'In your articles, you propose generally, in violation of your own By-Laws, and in the destruction of the present status of all those who have Class B membership cards, that an extra, if he accepts autonomy under your plan, may not perform stunts, specialties, or speak lines, all of which they have been doing these many years under a Class B card.

'Are you taking a page from the totalitarian countries with a desire to divide and rule, or are you using this threat of depriving the Class B player of his bread so that, subtly, when he votes upon your plan he is compelled to vote for the Screen Actors Guild, lest otherwise he may no longer speak a line, perform a stunt, or do a specialty, all of which he has always had the right to do.

THREE DEMANDS LISTED

'In order to provide decently for proper autonomy for the Class B members, it is imperative that you permit:

'1. All those presently carrying Class B cards to perform the work that they have hitherto done so that they may continue to earn their livelihood.

'2. A charter to be secured directly from the AAAA with all the rights given to the local under the AAAA, that internationals always accord local unions.

'3. The Class B members to vote specifically whether or not they desire a separate, autonomous union by charter from the AAAA, and the right to continue the same type of work in detail as they have been and are now performing.

'You cannot deprive them of these rights.

'That would be true autonomy, and that would remove the threat of loss of livelihood and the disunity that now prevails because of the undemocratic methods by which you have administered the affairs of the Class B members.

RIGHT TO VOTE DENIED

'Very strangely, your article states, in effect, that the Class B members could not vote and have no direct representation on the Board of Directors has not been an ideal situation, but was required by you since you feared that they would have a majority and dictate the policy of the Class A members. However, you have not hesitated to dictate the policy of the Class B members, and presently persist in such dictation.

'In your articles you pride yourself that the autocratic method by which the Class B members were deprived of votes was compensated by having obtained for them a contract with progressively improved wage scales, that such is not the case, but that he wage scales and working conditions of the Class B members have been and are deplorable.

CHARTER DEMANDED

'Accordingly, we now request in behalf of all the Class B members, and to prove your sincerity, that you offer to the Class B members a charter from the AAAA with the right to administer their own affairs, without the threat of taking away the earning power which they now have, and without any sword of Damocles held over them by you.

'We believe that this is the only democratic way in which to create unity between Class A and Class B members so that, once the Class B members have their freedom, we may, together, with our respective elected representatives, mutually under the AAAA, as brother organizations, go forward to insure decent wages and proper working conditions for all of us.'

It is understood the SAG Board at its meeting Monday nixed request of Screen Players Union that Guild permit SPU's attorney, Alexander H. Schullman, to attend the autonomy meeting. Board also made no announcement of nominations for Guild officers, deciding to hold nominations until after Sunday's meeting.

SPPC WILL URGE SAG PLAN OK

Holding that Screen Actors Guild's announcement of an autonomy plan for extras is recognition of demands made in the interest of this class film worker by the Screen Players Protective Committee, latter last night issued statement declaring it would urge adoption of the SAG proposal provided plan contained no 'strings or jokers.'

Statement, issued following a committee meeting last night, also made point that if SAG autonomy plan didn't live up to declaration that extras would be insured complete and unqualified control of their own separate organization, the SPPC would itself submit a plan to give extras the type of organization they want.

WAR MAY BE HELL BUT BENNY GAINED 15 LBS.

New York, Sept. 29.—Jack Benny at a press conference today told the story of how he, Larry Adler, Wini Shaw and Anna Lee brought ten weeks of cheer to the fighting boys in the Middle East, Gold Coast of Africa, Bengasi, Tripoli, Persian Gulf, Jerusalem, Tunis, Algiers, Sicily and Italy.

Benny, 15 pounds heavier than when he started and never healthier, arrived in New York last night, less than 24 hours after a stop-over in Iceland where he did three shows. Accompanying him was Miss Shaw, who after a brief rest, checks out again on the camp show circuit for her fifth offshore tour. Miss Lee decided to stay overseas, joining Menjou in Algiers, while Adler, stopping off in England to visit relatives, is due in Friday.

Big problem for Benny now is to lose the 15 pounds he gained before he checks in at Warners, on Nov. 1, to start work on 'The Horn Blows at Midnight.' Meanwhile his first two broadcasts on Oct." 10th

DONLEVY MAY FILL 'BLONDE' DATE

Although Brian Donlevy still is under suspension at Paramount for refusing to take the proffered role in 'Incendiary Blonde,' impression at studio is that he will reconsider and that the rift between the actor and Paramount shortly will end. Donlevy, under long term contract with Paramount, is understood to have agreed to play the killer role in 'Double Indemnity,' after refusing 'Blonde' but by the time he had made up his mind, Fred MacMurray had been given the part.

'Incendiary Blonde' is the saga of Texas Guinan, with Betty Hutton in the title role, and will be screened as a gay biography with specialties and much music.

NY LEGIT OPENING

ALL FOR ALL

New York, Sept. 29.—'All For All' relighted the Bijou tonight with a legit show and the short cast-one setter is admirably adapted to the small theatre. Piece has a fair chance for moderate grosses. Comedy, which introduces A. L. Berman as a producer, was originally Aaron Hoffman's tongue-twisting 'Give and Take.' Norman Bruce did the new version.

Jack Pearl and Harry Green star and play it straight, whereas originally play was in the dialect of the Louis Mann-Sam Bernard school. More or less brought up to date, the first act is good, the second lags and the final stanza registers most of the giggles.

Story has to do with Bauer's California Cannery, with employes declaring in on the profits under what is called industrial democracy, but plant is on the rocks until a promoter comes along with trucks which will be rolling grocery stores.

Pearl is the excitable owner whose antics indicate blood pressure. Green, as the more placid foreman, also registers comedy in an effective manner. Flora Campbell is the daughter, the only femme character. Loring Smith is very good as the stranger who saves the works, but play depends almost entirely on the two leads. Show is better than most straight plays so far presented this struggling autumn.

George Sidney and Louis Mann originally portrayed the two leads in 1923.

• HOLLYWOOD • INSIDE •

WITH Fox West Coast launching its second string of three first run houses in the Hollywood-Los Angeles district within the next few weeks with swingover of the Egyptian, Los Angeles and Uptown to first run status, one observer predicts that the circuit is letting itself in for plenty of future headaches. Claim is that some studio executives, with personal ambitions for their own product to get plenty of local attention via spotlight bookings, will high-pressure F-WC officials to give certain big productions a six-house first run showcasing in Loew's State, Grauman's Chinese, Ritz, Los Angeles, Egyptian and Uptown—with chance that demands will be made for the Four Star to be tossed into the setup. Observer points out that the six or seven-house first run bundle would be particularly valuable to a studio or individual producer either to tab record gross for the town, or to impress Academy awards nominations or balloting in proper season. Circuit would admittedly be hard-pressed, in view of close proximity of the State and Los Angeles downtown, and Chinese and Egyptian in Hollywood.

Result is the classiest and most valuable company promotional publication ever turned out as regular issue in the industry.

DELAY in production getaway of 'Dragon Seed' at Metro until next Monday, after picture originally was slated to hit starting line Tuesday, is occasioned by front office dissatisfaction with wardrobe tests which were made recently, and which were ordered changed in several instances. Execs figured that 'Seed,' in view of its proposed high budget, which will hit into seven-figure bracket, should wait several days so that proper wardrobe could be set up prior to, rather than during production.

REPUBLIC will continue to tag its new western series, originally known as 'John Paul Revere' series, by name it started with, despite fact Eddie Dew, who appeared in first two pix of series, has been replaced by Bob Livingston. Livingston and Smiley Burnette yesterday started third of series and their first together, 'Pride of the Plains.'

WITH rubber boots no longer obtainable, RKO officials have issued green light for immediate construction of storm drains on the lot to prevent annual street flooding in the studio during the winter season. In former years rubber boots and overhead scaffolds are reported to have been utilized to gain access to the food supply.

First survey on Burns and Allen clocked the comedy show at nearly 16, which would indicate that it will ride in the early 30's once the show is under full steam.

A film is terrific or lousy,
It stinks or it blooms like a rose.
It is either artistic or frowsy
When sniffed by the critical nose.

In ordinary times a motion picture critic is a reliable barometer. He will tell you honestly when a film is good, bad or indifferent, and he will predict with reasonable accuracy how it will fare at the boxoffice. But these are not ordinary times. A palooka will prosper as well as a champion in a war industry neighborhood, and a champion will skid like a palooka in the sticks where the boys and gals have deserted the old homestead for the effulgent wages of California's newly sprouted factories. Not so many years ago, when the economical charts registered a new low every week in the Sunday financial section, a producer exercised all his ingenuity to turn out a winner. Now it takes a genius to produce a loser. Even one of those old 'prestige pictures' could get by nowadays. Under present conditions it is impossible to lay an egg. In fact, you are lucky to buy one.

POINT OUT DANGERS OF OVERCONFIDENCE

Washington, Sept. 29.—Three radio industry leaders, who attended the military conference here on the status of the war, said in statements today they were convinced of the important job which must be done in explaining to the public that the war has a long way to go. 'The report presented at the conference,' said Niles Trammell, NBC prexy, 'should have a very sobering effect on those people in this country who feel the war is going to be a short one. The conference impressed upon everyone in attendance that industry, labor and our civilian population have a tremendous job and many sacrifices ahead.'

William S. Paley, CBS headman, commented that the conference 'has made it all too clear that it is foolhardy and dangerous to think the war will end soon.' Neville Miller, prez of National Ass'n of Broadcasters, observed that 'while the radio industry does not build munitions or weapons, it does deal with a vital ingredient in total warfare—the will and morale of the American people. I am sure radio will redouble its efforts to inform and stimulate this nation until the last shot is fired and the last wounded American boy comes safely home.'

AMERICA LOOKS ABROAD

The pressure in the Balkans is steadily increasing. The Yugoslav cabinet, headed by none other than King Peter, is in Cairo, presumably for the purpose of finding out which way the wind blows politically. In the meantime Mihailovich's guerrilla patriots are stubbornly resisting the Nazis, while carrying on uprisings in ever new areas. It is learned that Bulgaria is secretly sending special envoys to Ankara seeking Turkey's advice on the surrender of its territory and army, following Italy's example. In Italy the Allies have won control of the vital Foggia airfields, which means much in allowing air raids over all southeastern Europe, and are now in a position to lend support to an invasion force anywhere along the Adriatic shores. The indications for powerful moves against the Germans in this area are still more than likely, since the Soviets have been reported to have occupied bridgeheads at several points on the east bank of the Dneiper.

F-WC PUTS EMBASSY INTO SECOND RUN DIVISION

Fox West Coast's Embassy theatre at Third and Western has been moved up to a second run house following slotting of the Uptown into a triple day-date first run hookup with the Egyptian on Hollywood boulevard and the Los Angeles, downtown. Uptown, former first run in that zone and second run on the city break, is now closed for extensive refurbishing before opening as a first runner Oct. 15.

Shifting of the Los Angeles into the first run classifications will not call for rejuggling of theatres in the downtown sector due to Principal Theatres operation of that house and others which will share second run features formerly going to the Los Angeles. Decision has not yet been reached by circuit as to what Hollywood boulevard house will get the Egyptian's second run break, although circuit is tied in on operation of the nearby Hollywood and Iris.

Fox West Coast is not assigning former third run spot held by the Embassy to any of its other operations in that territory, leaving slot open for future decision.

U. S. FILMS FAR AHEAD IN THEATRES OF CHILE, ARABIA

Washington, Sept. 29.—American films have a wide edge in Chile and Aden, Arabia, the U. S. Department of Commerce reports; with pictures the favored form of entertainment in Chile as in this country. DC survey discloses that Chile imported about 400 features last year. Hollywood supplied 343; Argentina, 34; Mexico, 16; Spain, 14; and Great Britain, seven. Three of the pictures shown were made by Chilean producers. Newsreels and shorts exhibited are produced in Argentina, Great Britain and the United States; with Chile itself turning out 24 reels, four shorts and its first animated cartoon last year.

Chile has about 290 theatres, most of them small with seating capacities averaging around 400 to 500 per house; and virtually all run two shows daily. Government estimates that 90% of projection equipment is imported from the United States.

Aden, in Arabia, has six film houses, with total annual attendance of around 400,000. Pictures are usually three to six years old when exhibited in Aden. U. S. supplies 70% of features, 30% of newsreels, and 60% of shorts booked. Great Britain sends in 20% of features, 60% of newsreels and 30% of the shorts. Remaining 10% in each classification is produced in India and Egypt.

'Song of Texas,' Republic Roy Rogers special, will go it solo at the Hitching Post, Hollywood boulevard home of the horse opera, starting today in test effort by the theatre to see if high-budgeted western features can carry off a single bill. If it proves okay, theatre likely will follow the Rogers picture from time to time with other name outdoor players in more costly oaters.

Hitching Post had originally booked in Monogram's 'Bullets and Saddles' as second feature for bill starting today, but instead will use several short subjects to supplement 'Song of Texas.' Single bill, if pleasing the customers, will prove advantage to house as 'Texas' and similar high-budgeted westerns represent higher film rental that shove the operating nut up when coupled with a second feature.

HEAVY COIN ANGLING FOR GLAMOR OF FILMS

Glamor shows, always in high favor with national radio advertisers, are in feverish demand by clients of ad agencies, who have their reps scouring Hollywood for what's loose or available in the way of name talent. Four big accounts are known to have ordered Hollywood shows and agencies are wrapping up packages for the big pitch back east. As many more are interested in prestige programs and when the season hits its full stride the complement of big shows from here will double that of any previous season.

Among the big spenders openly bidding for Hollywood shows are Chesterfield cigarets, Owens-Illinois Glass, Autolite and Libby, McNeil & Libby. Chesterfield is reported to have dangled $25,000 before the agencies for an hour show with film names but so far no one has come forward with what they want. Metro studio deal was warmed up again by Bill Murray of the William Morris agency for Autolite but it went cold when studio execs thumbed it. Several agencies are making solicitations for the biz with packaged glamor. Autolite, never before on the air, is said to have earmarked $1,000,000 for radio.

Most feverish activity surrounds the Owens-Illinois account, which is one of the juiciest plums in radio. Outfit is currently sponsoring 'Home Front Reporter' on CBS five times a week in half hour stanzas. Client is dispensing with this program in six weeks and wants a prestige show from Hollywood to fill the time. Three agencies are known to have submitted waxed shows and presentations. Harry Maizlish, KFWB manager, was on the verge of closing with Libby, McNeil & Libby for a studio show from Warners, 'Luncheon in the Green Room,' over the Blue network but this was stymied when Jimmie Fidler tossed a sour one at Warners which resulted in the studio withholding all cooperation from the Blue.

Programs from here with picture names will run into the 20's this season, with J. Walter Thompson and Young & Rubicam agencies splitting up the bulk. Before the season is well along another 10 shows may be added due to the drift of talent this way. This is made possible by the picture biz, which pulls in outstanding talent as fast as it's developed by niteries and the stage back in New York. And shows follow the talent.

SAG REFUSES TO GIVE OUT AUTONOMY PLAN BEFORE MEET

Screen Actors Guild's board of directors has nixed request from Screen Players Union for advance copy of the Class B membership autonomy plan prior to its presentation Sunday night for general membership meeting. Guild, in letter to SPU, points out that members will have ample time to study and obtain legal advice on plan since balloting will not close until 30 days after ballots and complete copy have been mailed to all members.

Refusal to permit attendance of SPU's attorney, Alex Schullman, at the Legion Stadium meeting Sunday night has drawn ire of extra group, which charges SAG fears 'a legal expose of its proposals for a new autonomy plan.' In its letter, Guild states that it is 'presenting this plan to its Class B members as a whole, not to any particular group which may claim to represent certain of said members. Members may consult their own attorneys concerning the plan and may freely call on the Guild's counsel for information.'

Letter also points out that 'Guild has no knowledge and can give no recognition whatever to any union purporting to represent any of its members, as membership in such a union is inconsistent with the obligations which Guild members owe to the Screen Actors Guild' in answering SPU claim that it represents two-thirds of the working Class B members.

Screen Players Union's statement in answer to Guild letter, sent out by Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary, follows:

'Letter received today by the Screen Players Union from Kenneth Thomson refused to permit SPU to have Alex Schullman, well-known labor attorney, appear at the SAG meeting called for Sunday night at the Legion Stadium to meet the arguments of SAG's attorneys on the autonomy plan.

'This SAG move indicates that it is afraid of a legal expose of its proposals for a new autonomy plan.

'At Guild meetings heretofore, non-members have been admitted. Central Casting officials, also United States Employment Service officials, and even Willie Bioff and George Browne addressed the members from the platform.

'SPU, at a meeting called for tonight at the Woman's Club of Hollywood, 7078 Hollywood blvd., expects to make a legal move to secure the right from SAG to have Alex Schullman appear Sunday night.

'SPU extends an invitation to SAG's counsel to appear at its meeting tonight to present rebuttal, indicating that SPU has nothing to hide nor anything to fear from SAG's attorneys.'

SPPC SIGNIFIED IT WILL WORK FOR OK OF SAG PLAN

day, Oct. 3, at the Hollywood Legion Stadium by all SPPC members was urged bv committee chairman Roy Lawson in the statement, so support to a fair plan for creation of a separate organization could be voted upon.

If issues are fairly met by Guild in submitting its plan, SPPC feels extras' independent organization could be established on a basis of mutual confidence, with interests of both best served by having extras organization operate under a subcharter from the Guild. Extras committee declared that 'if plan gives us right to elect our own officers and bargain collectively in our own interests with our employers, without any strings or jokers, the SPPC heartily urges adoption of such a plan. If there are strings or jokers in the details of the plan,' statement declares SPPC 'will itself submit a plan that will give the extras the kind of organization they want.'

Present practice of extras speaking incidental lines when called upon should be continued, SPPC states, without requiring a dual membership in two organizations, since practice so far hasn't required an extra to hold a Class A membership in the Guild. SPPC feels this is important in establishing jurisdiction of the extras' organization and will insist on the point.

MPWFC's 500 members are stepping up efforts to intensify results during final days of Third War Loan, so that by Saturday night every worker in the local film industry will have been contacted for purchase of an extra bond or bonds this month.

and 17 will originate from New York. Benny had hoped to do those two stanzas from London so he could stay over an additional 10 days to entertain more Yank troops stationed in England, but idea was nixed because of commercial tie-up which forbids such broadcasts.

FIRST INTO ITALY

Just as the Bob Hope troupe was the first to 'invade' Sicily, so too, did the Benny Unit pioneer the 'Soldiers in Greasepaint' route into Italy where they spent a full day entertaining after travelling clear across 'Boo.'

The trip into Italy came about by surprise and therefore didn't even give the troupe time to feel nervous. 'That,' says Benny, 'only happened after we got there.' Benny and the gang had gone to North Sicily to do some shows, found that the troops they were to entertain had already shoved off for Italy, so troupe got an okay to 'follow through.' Arriving on Italian soil Benny was greeted by an Army Major who introduced himself and wanted to know who he was.

'I am Jack Benny,' the comedian responded.

'What the h—l are you doing here?' asked the baffled major.

That was the first warning the troupe had of what was in store for them. Benny says had they arrived an hour later they would have missed the soldiers, for they were all set to move on into the battle zone. 'We did one show and the boys went on to fight and we flew back to Sicily.'

TRAVELS 32,000 MILS

In all, the Benny troupe travelled 32,000 miles for a total of 150 shows, although the comedian himself missed out on 35 performances while laid up in a Palermo hospital for five days with a bad cold. Benny paid particularly high tribute to nurses and doctors who he characterized as 'unsung heroes.'

'They're really doing a terrific job,' said Benny. 'It's the greatest thing I've ever seen; never a beef from one of them; the nurses actually with happy faces.

'We've played in some of the filthiest holes you've ever seen, yet here were these doctors and nurses happy to be on the job and maintaining fine sanitary conditions.'

As far as he was concerned, Benny said, it was a fascinating sightseeing tour without danger. The comedian added, 'aside from the great morale contribution they can offer, stars should go over in increasing numbers,' Benny continued, 'they'll see undreamed of sights, particularly in the Persian Gulf area, with its walled cities, etc.' The comedian expressed hope that some day sufficient stars will be going over so they can concentrate on specific areas, instead of spreading themselves over large parts of the globe, as presently.

BIG HAND FOR BELL

Under present arrangement, only comparatively small numbers can be reached. He also paid tribute to the Miles Bell Unit and the others on USO circuits that are spending a full year there. Bell, one of the three units Benny met up with, in addition to Menjou, is doing a particularly wonderful job and the boys can't get enough of him, the comedian said.

In Egypt Benny found three of his films playing so that even the natives recognized him. Through Africa they travelled in their 'five jerks and a jeep' plane assigned to them, but in some spots where troops never heard of 'Five Graves To Cairo' pic they didn't get its significance and were inclined to take it literally.

Morale of the fighting boys is fine, said Benny, although many of them told Wini Shaw they were saving three bombs for when its over: one for John L. Lewis, another for Petrillo, (because the boys want discs of the latest songs) and third for Spam factory. 'Why didn't I think of that one,' Benny snapped. 'Look at all the lines I fed you over there,' he scored Wini,' and now you louse up my interview and get over the top crack.'

REPORTS TO WAR DEPT.

Benny's report to the War Department will form the basis for recommendations on overseas routing of performers, particularly in channeling performers into spots where entertainers thus far have not ventured. 'We hit places where Francis X. Bushman was still top man in popularity contests,' said Benny.

Accompanist on trip was Jack Snyder, who despite fact he played for Yacht Club Boys and was in combat zones for eight and a half months, stayed on for the Benny group, and if the mess isn't over by next summer, Benny is going back there again.

WINCHELL TAKES RAP AT HIS BOSS HEARST

deleted from his syndicated column.

'I think it's very funny,' he remarked, 'that Mr. Hearst should throw out a column on freedom of speech and freedom of the press.' Referring to Columbia's recent public statement of its non-editorialized news policy, Winchell read portions of the copy of a letter sent by an ex-CBS newswriter to James L. Fly, chairman of Federal Communications Commission, containing charges of network deletion of straight news and declared he will take the matter direct to President Roosevelt.

In reply to what he said had been Columbia's criticism of him and his style of broadcasting, Winchell related how, in 1930, William S. Paley, CBS prez, had persuaded him to accept his first regular air series and how he had never been happy with that network.

'I've always been glad since then that I've been on the Blue instead of CBS,' he said. In referring to newspapermen and broadcasters who take orders about what they write or say, he cracked 'I'm not a press-titute.'

Drew Pearson, after telling of his censorship trouble in Washington during the Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt administrations, disclosed how the Navy once assigned a 10-man detail to shadow him in an attempt to learn his news sources. He also asserted that certain high army officers had tried to persuade Radio Corp. of America, as holding company of the Blue network, to remove Winchell and him from the air.

BUT THEY WERE SAVED

Only newspaper and public pressure had saved them, he said, adding that recently neither he nor Winchell had any trouble with censorship from the Blue network. He declared that Columbia had refused to allow Leon Henderson to be heard on a sponsored basis on its network with the result that the former Office of Price Administration's official's present series for O'Sullivan is heard on the Blue.

Cecil Brown, who resigned from CBS last week in a censorship row, tangled with William Shirer, who remains with the network, after Brown declared that as a result of the Columbia policy its commentators may now merely prove 'they can read the English language' and are 'reduced to a state of being pure messenger boys.' In reply, Shirer said he had 'never heard of an unfairer analysis than the Brown statement.'

BLUE PENCILS AT BLUE

In defending CBS policy, Shirer told of how, when he had been slated to sub for Winchell couple of years ago he had been met at the Blue network by 'an army of men with blue pencils.' He had never seen anything like it at CBS, he added. This assertion apparently stirred Winchell to his attack which followed.

In rising to make his talk, Brown drew long applause and he received an ovation at the conclusion. Later H. V. Kaltenborn was applauded when he congratulated Brown on his recent actions, asserting 'sometimes a man gains stature by resigning.'

BIOFF PAYS UP HIS $20,000 FINE TO UNCLE SAM

New York, Sept. 29.—Fine of $20,000 imposed on Willie Bioff, aide to George Browne, former IATSE prexy, was paid today in New York Federal Court. Similar fine had been levied against Browne as result of both being convicted of extorting more than $1,000,000 from picture companies.

Payment of fine means that the additional 10-year term in lieu of the fine is suspended and Bioff will be eligible for parole March, 1945. He is presently serving a 10-year sentence originally imposed besides the fine.

Because Bioff is the star government witness in the trial of eight defendants on similar extortion charges next week, it is expected he will be taken out of prison soon.
